S. B. Tabor: Our work is starting off very nicely. Three accessions since Conference. The Stewards have their work well in hand and will pay the pastor more than last year. I preached at Garrison last Friday night to thirty attentive hearers. It is strange any one should doubt our church having a mission in this country when there are so many people here that are absolutely without the Gospel.

Our presiding elder is in the new parsonage. It is nice enough for a Bishop. Montana College opens this week. The outlook for this year is promising. On the 11th inst., we buried the little babe of Brother Sager and wife. They have our sympathy. Those Missouri brethren, how I love them. I am sure it did you good to shake their hands, look into their honest faces and feel the glow of their warm hearts. [Indeed it did, and they made many kind inquiries concerning the welfare of of Brother and Sister Tabor, and not a few subscribed for the "Montana Methodist." that they might hear from them oftener.—Editor.]

DEMERSVILLE.

On our return from Maryville, Mo., we were met by Bishop Duncan at Missoula, and proceeded to Demersville together, arriving there, after a very pleasant journey, everything considered, by rail, stage and boat, on Friday evening. Here we were met by Bro. Lee, conveyed in a buggy to his home and enjoyed his generous hospitality. On Saturday the Bishop and this writer visited the new town of Kalispel, which has sprung up as by magic since our visit there last spring. While there we were the guests of Mr. C. E. Conrad, who kindly drove us over the town site, and also tendered and set apart a lot for a church building, on condition that the house be erected within a given time.

Our new church at Demersville, so recently plastered and painted, with its heavenward pointing spire, and its sounding bell, makes a decidedly favorable impression on the newcomer, as well as on the old timer. It is the first church in the valley. The people are proud of it and justly so. The house was comfortably full on Sunday morning. The Bishop held his audience spell-bound while he talked for an hour upon "the church of the living God, the pillar and ground of the truth," the text being found in first Timothy, third chapter and fifteenth verse. At the close of the sermon it was announced that the church had cost a little over $1400, aside from the bell and the organ, which have been paid for, and there remained a debt of $300 which had to be provided for before it could be dedicated. Messrs. Clifford and Stannard promptly assumed one-third, and in about twenty minutes $220 more were paid and subscribed, being $20 in excess of the amount called for, after which the trustees, Rev. E. L. Lee and Messrs. Stannard, Duncan and Labeau, formally presented the house free from all incumbrance and it was dedicated according to our beautiful and impressive ritual, to the service and worship of Almighty God. We never saw people give more promptly and cheerfully. Brother Lee has labored heroically in the work of collecting funds and supervising the work of building. Messrs. Clifford & Stannard deserve special mention for the interest they have manifested and the assistance they have rendered from the very beginning. Besides donating the ground and subscribing liberally at the start, when the funds were exhausted, they went ahead and had the house plastered and painted on their own responsibility, saying they would trust the church to pay for it. The Missoula Mercantile Co., also did handsomely. Many other citizens in and around Demersville gave liberally of their means, while our friends who came down from Kalispel, C. F. Conrad and wife. T. Duncan, A. Labeau and others, joined in quite freely and cheerfully in lifting the burden, and seemed to be as proud and happy as any over the result. This was as it should be. It is our duty to help one another in doing good. This applies to rival towns and communities as well as to individuals and families. When our friends get ready to build a church in Kalispel we doubt not that the good people of Demersville will help them.

We found our friends in Demersville planning for enlargement and going ahead just as though it was all the town in Flathead Valley. They are quite hopeful of railway connection with Missoula at no distant day. The road is expected at Kalispel late this fall or next spring. We heard some complaint of dull times—a natural result and a reaction from the great rush there last spring. But the people are hoping for better times in the future.

The Bishop preached a splendid sermon on Sunday night. The house was crowded, and a number had to go away for lack of seats. The people were well pleased with the services, and Bishop Duncan, who was the first of our chief superintendents ever in that region, seemed pleased with the country and was impressed with the great dearth of laborers for these extensive fields. The trip made a lasting impression upon his mind. He will not forget that stage ride soon.

Brother Lee is encouraged at the outlook, and planning for a vigorous fall and winter campaign.

On Monday we secured a reasonably liberal subscription from our friends for the pastor's support in monthly contributions. On Monday night we enjoyed the hospitality of the gentlemanly proprietor of the Cliff House, and at 5 o'clock next morning started on our way down the beautiful Flathead river on board the noble steamer; "State of Montana," arriving at Missoula at 5.40 p. m. Next morning the Bishop took the 7.30 train for Helena, expecting to go from thence to Denver, and preach the following Sunday, and from thence home. The Bitter Root train was delayed that day, so that we did not reach home till midnight, and that after a walk of several miles through the mud, caused by the delay of the train and the failure of the hack or any other conveyance to connect with it.

WILLOW CREEK & WHITEHALL.

From private sources we learn that Brother Britt is pleased with the outlook on his charge, the people are delighted with their pastor, and he expects to build a new church during the year, the foundation to be laid this fall.

WALLACE.

The pastor writes that the new church is completed, and he solicits Bishop Duncan to come and dedicate it. But the letter was too late to reach the Bishop before he started homeward.

LA GRANDE, OREGON.

Henry Barnhart: The work is opening up with a promising outlook. My first quarterly meeting held at Ladd's school-house. What a change in that place in one year. To God be all the glory. I send you one subscriber for the "Methodist."

PENDLETON, OREGON.

R. G. Isbell: I am in my new home and well situated, well pleased with our charge. But we have a very sick child. Last night we had a very large congregation at prayer-meeting, but larger last Sunday and Sunday night. We were all so disappointed that you did not get to our Conference. Come to see us at Pendleton. [The disappointment was mutual. We trust the little one is better, and hope we shall be at Pendleton some day.—Editor.]

FROM TENNESSEE.

Dear Editor "Montana Mothodist:"—For several months your most excellent paper has been coming to me—through the kindness of some friend, I suppose. I need not say that I am delighted with the paper, for it is a thing of attraction in its make-up, and ladened with such news as one interested in your field likes to know, and the work that it is doing will tell in rich fruit. I I have, with a great deal of pleasure, watched your work, and am delighted with your spirit. It does seem, that that little Montana band cannot we discouraged, but the harder the battle the thicker the fire. There are at least three men in your hands for whom I am always praying. Squires, who developed a church in which I was much interested, in Colorado; Britt, whom I knew in the Denver Conference, and Goulder, from our Conference, but over and above all personal reasons I pray God to make this year the greatest year in Montana, if appropriations are small.

Cordially,
W. A. Freeman,
Somerville, Tenn.

FROM CIRCLEVILLE, KANSAS.

I was so glad to have an unexpected visit from the editor of the "Montana Methodist." It was short but very enjoyable. He came in at ten o'clock at night and left at ten the next day. I may say it was how d'ydo and good-bye. It is said that in order to test certain metals they must be tried in the fire. The editor had come through the fire with fewer scars than I expected to see. I shall ever feel under obligations to the people of Montana for the care they have taken of him.

I was glad to hear from Brother Fowler and his good wife, Brother and Sister Flowers, Brethren Bell, Robertson, Gardiner and their families, and from many other old Montana friends, and also to hear of the rich strike in the Curlew mine near Victor. I hope it will run into a perfect mountain of silver, and that my good friends who are principal owners, while taking out their thousands, will not neglect to secure the true riches that abide forever, and will be as liberal in the support of the Gospel as at least one of them was in helping to build our church at Victor. I cannot forget his kindness.

Well, our state of Kansas seems to be on the extreme. Last year we were almost dried out; this year we are almost drowned out, and now there is a good prospect, in this part, of being dried out again. But taking all things together, the good Lord gives us as good as we deserve. It is said in the good Book that all things work together for good to them that love God. So we should take courage, go forward and trust for the better, and all will be well in the end.

Henry Stanley.

LETTER FROM BUTTE.

Dear "Methodist:" — We greet you in the new Conference year, and the brethren in their new fields of labor—or in our former fields.

The conference was a good occasion, and was only saddened by the death of Sister Key, and the serious accident which had happened to our busy editor. The Bishop was patient and tender, and seemed bent on doing only good for us, and for the work. The preaching and singing and praying was inspiring, and the appointments were mostly re-appointments, and generally satisfactory—at least to the preachers.

The "net gain" in membership of 18 per cent. was encouraging indeed. We need T. M. Rucker, S. H. Shelton, J. A. Walles and T. G. Whitten, of the Mo. Conference, to fill out our ranks here, and will show the church that their planting has not been in vain here.

The brethren all seem in good spirits, and are planning for large things for the year, and I say here that this is the supreme want in our work here, as everywhere. How can we expect God's blessing on nothing, or on a small thing when he has said for us to ask largely, and encouraged us to plan greater things.

I want again to mention the school enterprise of our Conference. This I regard as the most aggressive movement before us now. We must have institutions of learning of our own—if we would conserve the force generated. If we would husband and harvest the good at hand.

A committee was appointed at the Conference to determine what grade of school we should try to reach, and to receive bids from eligible places that might want the school located with them. Revs. E. J. Stanley, A. C. Couey, W. O. Waggoner, and J. E. Squires, with laymen A. G. Clarke, Bell, and one other were the committee appointed, 7 in all.

Now let us talk school, and sing school, and pray school, and preach it, until the place, the man, and the money, all answer, "Here am I, send me."

I suggest that pastors in eligible places, as Helena, Bozeman, Deer Lodge, Missoula, Wallace, Great Falls, and on into the "East Columbia" Conference, I would say, begin to see what their respective cities will offer to have us locate our Conference School with them. Say an "Academy," to grow into a college; from 4 to 10 teachers, with room for 150 to 200 pupils, reasonable rates. Let bids be made like this: "We offer $10,000 in money and as much in land as a site for ———, of certain grade ———, and guarantee 100 pupils the first year."

Brethren, we must urge this matter and lay the foundation of this church deep and broad in this land. Hold mass meetings, secure speakers and have a general "arousement" on the subject of education among our people.

The work opens well here in the new year. One accession the Sunday after Conference.

J. E. Squires.

SPECIAL.

The Montana Methodist is now in the fourth year of its existence and has a larger subscription list, and, we believe, has more friends that ever before. We are thankful for their efficient help in the past, and trust they will stand by us in the future in our efforts to extend the Redeemer's kingdom throughout this great Northwest. This reminds us that subscriptions for the ensuing current year are now due, and several hundred of our subscribers are in arrears, some of them for two years or more. Our printing bill is due Oct. 1st, and must be paid. Will our subscribers take the hint and kindly remit at once, by postal note or draft, to E. J. Stanley, or "Montana Methodist," Corvallis, Montana. Please do not forget it, for we need the money to aid in carrying forward the work.

OBITUARY.

The following obituary should have been sent long ago, but other matters engaging my attention, I have failed to send before.

Erik Edwall was born in Sweden, Oct. 23, 1841, and departed this life June 8, 1891, at Sassin, Wash.

Mr. Edwall was brought up in the Lutheran faith. He was a good neighbor, and kind, affectionate husband. He was seized with that subtle, and relentless foe, consumption, a few months since, and although everything was done that medical skill could suggest, and loving hands devise, he sank rapidly, until death came to his release. The writer visited him during his illness, and before leaving him, he gave us the assurance that he would lean no longer on his own righteousness, but simply trust Jesus for salvation.

We preached his funeral sermon from Job 14 : 14, to a large concourse of friends, and sorrowing loved ones. He had no children, and leaves only a wife and brother to mourn his untimely end.

Beloved, let us not sorrow as do others. God doeth all things well. Pass under the rod—'Tis held by a hand Divine. Let us wait and murmur not.

His, and your friend and brother,
Fred. St. Clair,
Fairview, Washington.

Spokane District—Retrospect and Prospect.

BY REG. B. SWIFT.

To the Preachers, Official and Laymembers in the Spokane District, East Columbia Conference.

Dear Brethren: For several years a few of our faithful workers labored to start our work in this field, amid difficulties, with little encouragement and but small visible results. But their labors opened the way and prepared the field for us. Building on their foundations, and extending our work, last year our labors were blessed and we were permitted to see very gracious visible results. Revival fires were kindled throughout the District. In some places they burned with mighty sin-consuming power. More than two hundred souls were converted. Over fifty per cent were added to the membership. Many family altars erected; a goodly number of church papers introduced; the salaries of most of the preachers were full, some overflowing; nearly all our collections were overflowing; one new church built, two others under way; and our efforts have been blessed with gracious results along all lines. Surely we have witnessed enough tokens of Divine Sanction upon our labors to cheer our hearts and fill them with gratitude, and to inspire unto "enterprise greater things for God, and expect greater things from God," for the glory of His name. For, are we not working in his vineyard? And for His glory? Has He not sent us? Has He not promised to be with us alway? Are we not assured "that, if we ask anything according to His will, He heareth us?" Is it not his will to "have all men to be saved, and to come unto the knowledge of the truth?" Then, may we not expect Him to bless our labors, in saving the people whom He sent us to seek, to whom we preach and for whom we are praying in Jesus name? Brethren, being sent by Him and having His promise, if we are faithful, we should expect great things in that name.

The great end we are seeking is the salvation of the world, by "spreading Scriptural holiness over these lands." As a means to aid in reaching this great end, let us unite our prayers and efforts upon the realization of not less the following results this year in this District:

1st. A mighty baptism of power upon every preacher.

2nd. A general revival throughout every charge.

3rd. Every member personally seeking souls for Christ.

4th. Six hundred souls won for Christ. (Why not?)

5th. Every member studying the Scriptures and praying in secret daily.

6th. Daily family prayers in every Christian home.

7th. At least one weekly church paper and the "Missionary Reporter" in each home.

8th. All our collections, like our Father's blessings, full and overflowing.

9th. From each member of the church a contribution for the same. (The Moravians pay $12 per member for Missions. How much will I pay? Lord, save us from stinginess!)

10th. All collections in hand by January; so the way may be clear for a full Winter in revival work.

11th. A salary sufficient for the support of every preacher.

12th. Six new churches built and paid for.

13th. Arrangements perfected for the establishment of Church School.

Brethren, who will dare say that our God does not require this much of us? Can we afford to aim below God's known requirements? God forbid! If we each will do our duty and trust God, these, and "even greater works than these shall we do," in Jesus' name. Will not each preacher and member carefully ponder these items and join us heart and hand, by prayers and efforts to accomplish these results? Trusting in the Lord Almighty, "let us rise up, and build," and our God will "open the windows of heaven, and pour us out a blessing that there shall not be room enough to receive it." Amen!

Spokane, Nash.

HEPPNER, OREGON.

Dear Mr. Editor: You see I have again had to pass through the ordeal of "packing up" and moving, that ought not to be much trouble for a bachelor—Editor; well it is better for me than some others, because my family is small, and therefore, it is not so much trouble and expense. But I am well pleased with my new work, and already my heart has been made to rejoice on account of the presence of the Lord. Our members are truly spiritual and "zealous of good works." On this work live the friends and relatives of several of our preachers, whom to know is to love; they know how to hold up the hands of their pastor. The stewards know what that means, and act accordingly. Our congregations on Sunday are quite large, and the Sunday-school and prayer-meetings are very encouraging. We have organized a "Woman's Parsonage and Home Mission Society." The work is moving along very nicely and we are much encouraged, all seem ready to co-operate with their pastor.

We were much disappointed at not having you with us at Conference all., were saddened at the news of your accident, but praise the Lord for sustaining grace, even in the hours of disappointment and affliction. Our session was harmonious throughout, and our souls much refreshed. Oh, how refreshing to the weary soul, are these annual meetings of God's servants! Praise the Lord for the prosperity in our Zion.

P. M. Bell.

DO YOUR WHOLE DUTY.

The work of the new year starts off well. Both preachers and members are encouraged. But let us not be deceived by the enemy, and trust to past success for future victories. We will have to fight just as hard, or harder for future victories as for those already won. Let us be instant in season and out of season. We rejoice to learn that the people are devising more liberal things for their pastors. This is as it should be. The laborer is worthy of his hire. Your farm hand, your teamster, your clerk, your mechanic cannot do half work when he is only half fed and cared for, and has to spend the time between day's works thinking and planning and, possibly, working at something else in order to keep the wolf from his home while he is serving you. No more can your preacher do it. Do not exact it; do not permit it. Share your blessings with him. It is better for all to help bear the burden, and enjoy the exercise than for one to be crushed under it. The Gospel must be preached to all nations and to every creature. You must have a part in the work that you may share in the grand results when we shall join the glad acclaim and shout the harvest home.

Let our preachers, and let our laymen study and work with a view to making more of our charges self-supporting. Do not let the uppermost thought be, how much missionary money are we going to get, but how little can we get along with. Remember that the missionary money that goes to pay our preachers and help supply us with the Gospel is largely contributed by poor people, or those in moderate circumstances. Many deny themselves of needful comforts that they may give to this cause. Shall we receive this help any longer than we are able to help ourselves? Nay, verily.

We would not judge any man's conscience, but we fear that many of our people are not giving to the Lord's cause as they might and as they ought. The Lord has blessed them abundantly. They have added field to field, and flock to flock, and their tax list has quadrupled, but they give no more to God, or but little more, than when they lived in

LETTERS

From the Orient

By Mrs. A. W. Wilson.

With an introduction by Rev. Samuel Rodgers.

"The ADVOCATE has received with pleasure this anticipated volume. It is charming in its physical make-up, but much more so in its breathing contents. It is a book with a soul, and that, too, regenerated and aglow with the spirit of the mighty Leader, who is still lifting up his eyes unto the whitened fields. We learned to admire the author's literary style, as well as the evangelistic trend of her thought during her now famous tour through the East accompanying the Bishop and gleaning, like another Ruth, in his footsteps; but we were hardly prepared for this delightful book. It is scenic, graphic, soul-stirring, and will be worth many thousands to the missionary treasury. That a woman, sharp-eyed and cultivated, should have looked upon the modern abomination of desolation at the chief seats of its ignorance and misery, and then have written down her impressions in thrilling sentences, would be epochal in the history of the Church; but the present volume has a much greater significance and should circulate everywhere. Next to its piety, that which impresses us most is its literary perfection. The illustrations are numerous, and both illustrate and narrate. It is a marvel for cheapness—the price being one dollar; but we apprehend for quite other reasons than the last mentioned that the book will have a great sale."—NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE.

EDITORIAL.

An Object Lesson.

Sometime ago, a wealthy and well known citizen of Montana, passed away without leaving a scratch of a pen concerning the disposition he desired made of the immense fortune, variously estimated at four,five to six or eight millions, two millions being in hard cash, which he had spent a lifetime in acquiring. A host of claimants,coming from every quarter,and with every pretext possible, clamored for a share. There was a great struggle as to who should be the administrator. Finally a brother of the deceased produced what he claimed was a will, of rather ancient date, putting him in possession of the fortune. It was claimed that the will was a forgery. A great lawsuit, in which leading attorneys of the state and of the nation were held as counsel, was the result. Witnesses were brought from every direction, and paid as high as one hundred dollars a day, some of them, to testify. After weeks and weeks of testifying and quibbling and arguing, the jury failed to agree, by a vote, it is said, of five to seven, and thus the matter is just where it was before,and will all have to be gone over again, unless a compromise should be effected. The cost of the trial already counts up in the hundreds of thousands of dollars.

What a spectacle!

How sad to see the savings of a lifetime, the result of a long and laborious career, all come to naught, worse than wasted! What an object lesson! What a powerful argument against the folly and sin of devoting one's whole life to money-getting! We never heard anything against the honesty and integrity of the deceased as a business man, but if he was considered liberal with his means, or even devoted an considerable amount to charitable purposes,we are not aware of it. Upon the other hand the comforts of life were even rejected by the owner of millions, that he might have more to sacrifice to his god, more to hug to his bosom when he laid down in his last long sleep, more for others to fight and quarrel over after he should depart.

We have seen little children two years old, that had been fed from the bottle, and had a peculiarity that they would not go to sleep without a little wrapper that each possessed folded together and clasped to their little hearts. No matter how tender the mother's caress and soft and soothing her sweet lullaby, nor how earnest her entreaties, all was vain in the absence of the make-be-lieve doll, especially if there was the slightest suspicion that the other boy had it. So it becomes with some of the men of this world. They come to be so wedded to their idol—money—that they cannot be separated from it, no;not for an hour; cannot bear the thought of dying with it in the possession of another; cannot even make a will.

The stroke of a pen by the deceased, when in health, would have endowed a university,where thousands of worthy young men could have been educated; or a hospital, where multitudes of miners and prospectors, worn-out while making others rich, could be cared for in old age; or an observatory, that would have aided in the study of the stars and the elevation of the race,and blessed the founder's name for ages to come. But not so. The god of this world so blinds men's minds and hearts, that they cannot see a star nor hear an orphan's cry. The story of the rich fool is real history,and is being verified and repeated right in our midst almost every day.

Well did the sacred writer admonish us: "If riches increase,setnot your heart upon them, 'and our Savior warns against "The deceitfulness of riches" and the "laying up of treasures upon earth," and of "trusting in uncertain riches." He that soweth to the flesh shall of the flesh reap corruption.

This is the craze and curse of our country—this greed for gold. The man who succeeds in acquiring it is loudly applauded, too often, alas, with no regard for the manner of getting it or the disposition made of it. When shall there be a turn in the tide of affairs, a change for the better, and men found vieing with each other in giving,as well as in gaining the wealth bestowed upon them? Years ago the spectacle was presented of the people of our nation,heaping honors upon a man who had made a great fortune, while on the other side of the sea, the people were shedding their tears and blessing the memory of a man who had given his wealth away.

Let thoset,o whom the Master has committed more of this world's goods than they actually need, take warning and make haste to dispose of it for the glory of God and the good of humanity. Do not even keep it until to-morrow, lest, like the manna which the Israelites tried to hoard, it should breed worms and become a curse instead of a blessing.

News and Notes.

—It is said that should the United States export 225,000,000 bushels of grain, this will still leave the supply of Europe 200,000,000 bushels short of the usual supply of wheat and rye. Already the report comes of great distress in portions of Russia. Women are actually selling themselves to procure board for their children to keep them from starving If war should break out, as it is threatened who can predict the amount of suffering and distress that would follow? We pray that it may be averted.

—The completion of the new line of railroad by the Northern Pacific from Missoula to Wallace, Idaho, is developing considerable traffic, and greatly benefiting both sections of country. It is now only 126 miles by rail from Missoula to Wallace, instead of 350, as when we made the trip one year ago.

—The amount of money per capita, in circulation in 1861,was $13,85; in 1891 it is $23.45. As our business increases, there is an urgent call for an increase in the amount of the circulating medium.

—There are more divorces among the 60,000,000 people in the United Sates, so we are told, than among the 350,000,000 of other Christian nations all put together. This is a reproach for which we are bound to suffer severely, if it is not removed speedily.

—It was through the kindness of Mr. McCleod, general manager of the Missoula Mercantile Company's store at Missoula that we have had the use of a fine roller top desk in our office the past year. It is a splendid piece of furniture, and very convenient and serviceable. We have made good use of it and enjoyed it exceedingly.

—It is a great inconvenience and injustice to hold the Bitter Root train at Missoulo, for several hours after the regular time just to accommodate one man. It causes extra expense and general confussion in business, and disappointment to hundreds of our citizens—more than enough to pay for an extra train to be sent out.

—The Church needs plain, simple Gospel preachers—men who cannot be seduced from the simplicity of the Gospel. One has well observed: "The vanity of learned preaching is proved by its unproductiveness. The plainest preachers in a Christian spirit are commonly the most successful." Robert Hall, on being asked his opinion of a higly rhetorical discourse, said: "Very fine, sir; but man can't eat flowers."—Nashville Advocate.

—The man who, warned by his thoughts in time, found that by saving the $10 per annum he was accustomed to smoke away, he could become in five years a owner of a good flock of sheep, had a parallel eye-opening experience with one to whom it occurred that in a few months he had tossed down his throat a field of deep and fertile soil at the rate of half a rod of ground in fee-simple for every drink, and he mustered sense and resolution enough to prefer the land thereafter.—N. Y. Weekly Tribune.

—To learn our true station, to stay in it, and make the most of it for God's glory and the good of men, is the part of wisdom as well as the duty of piety. Dr. Payson said: "The most of my sorrows and sufferings were occasioned by my unwillingness to be the nothing that I am, and by a constant striving to be something." —Nashville Advocate.

—Bishop Granbery, in writing a memoir of his youngest daughter Ruth, who fell asleep in Jesus, Sept. 2nd, 1891, at the age of twelve years utters three touching and beautiful words in conclusion:

Three buds of sweet promise were taken away from us in our early married life. Fay was just blooming into womanhood when, two summers ago, she, to our surprise, vanished out of sight. Ruth was a half-blown flower, the charm of our home, our youngest, the child who was to cheer our old age; but He who has the right, He who is Love, has withdrawn her also, and we are left without a daughter on earth except one who is serving Him in a far-off country. It is well, since He did it. We prized them as the jewels of our heart and home;but shall we complain that He, in making up his jewels, claimed these dear children? Let us rather thank Him for the grace which so highly honors them and us.

—MARRIED.—Oct. 4th, 1891, on Three Mile Creek, near Stevensville, Montana, Leroy H. Dayton and Miss Janie Sanders, Rev. J. B. Parnall officiating. We extend hearty congratulations to the happy couple. —Editor.

Notes.

—The St. Louis Advocate says that Bishop Duncan spent a day in St. Louis, on his return home, and gave a good report of the work in the West.

—Dr. McAnally visited the Holston Conference at its last session. He left it nearly forty years ago, to come West to Missouri.

—Brother Price gives a glowing account of his trip to Wonderland. We hope he will give our readers the benefit of it one of these days.

—Brother Squires has been helping in a meeting at Bozeman. Prospect good for a good revival.

—The world has recently been startled at the suicide of two remarkable characters, Balmacede, ex-president of Chili, and Gen. Boulanger, who figured so prominently in French affairs a few years ago. Both were selfish, ambitious men; both were thwarted in their purposes, and neither had the courage to brave his disappointments. How deplorable is the condition of the man who is without God and without hope in the world! The wages of sin is death.

—The Anaconda Smelter is expected to be in operation soon. Business men are expecting an era of better times soon throughout Montana.

—The Montana Conference sent the first contribution to the Church Extension treasury on the tenth annual assessment—$18 forwarded by Brother Price, of Helena.

—Snow fell in Bozeman over a foot deep the first of the month. They also had a snow-fall at Kansas City, Mo. But the weather was never finer than at this writing. The ranchmen are busy gathering in their harvest.

Cheering Words.

STILL THEY COME.

A friend writing from Kentucky sends a dollar for the "Methodist" and says: "I like your paper fine. I love to hear of what you are doing in the West. If I were a young man, I certainly would go West. Please let me know what a young man could do in the way of teaching as a Methodist teacher?

—In reply we would say, that we have no Methodist school, of our own, in the state. But there are many places where young men of good character, be they Methodists or members of other evangelical churches, and who are efficient teachers, have no trouble in getting situations at from $45 to $50 and $60 per month; just owing to the amount and quality of work required. We rejoice to see Christian young men coming here to engage in this kind of work. Our climate is generally regarded as a very healthy one.

—Here is another that comes from Gallatin, Mo. I send another dollar to continue my paper. I commenced taking it when Brother Stanley was here in Gallatin at our Missouri Conference three years ago. I feel that it is too good to get tired of, and the precious history of dear Bro. Thomas Johnson, who was my last school teacher, a great deal more than paid me for all that I have paid for the paper, even if that was all. But I cannot express the good that I have received from it, and I expect to continue taking it. May God's richest blessings attend it.

Mrs. J. D. Coulson.

Such friendship and such kind and earnest words, greatly refresh and cheer us in our work. We feel like going on, and we cannot help going on with an increasing host of such friends to encourage and co-operate with us in our work. Many others testify that they have received not a little benefit from the Montana Methodist. A good lady writes from Endicott, Washington: "I would feel quite forsaken without the little Methodist."

CHURCH NEWS.

FROM WHITEHALL.

W. M. Britt: — In my last short note I promised that you should hear from my part of the field again, and your late demand of news from the brethren reminds me of the promise.

I have been on the ground six weeks; have preached at all the appointments and visited nearly all the members and a good many who were not members.

I am pleased with the work beyond my expectations. Congregations have been very good, and some genuine enthusiasm is manifest. Our first Quarterly Meeting, held at this place last Saturday and Sunday, was good and profitable. The Presiding Elder was at his best. The stewards made liberal provision for the support of the pastor and paid the P. E. in full for the quarter. We expect to repair the church at Willow Creek very soon and build a church at this place during the year.

We are planning for revival meetings at several points on the circuit, and trying to prepare the people for them. Oh, that we could keep in the revival spirit all the year!

I am at home at Major Brooke's. Some of the brethren know what that means. It means an old Virginia hospitality and a Montana welcome.

BOULDER.

R. S. Clark:—I have been so very busy getting settled in the parsonage and getting initiated into the work on this charge that I have had little time for anything else. But will say that congregations are increasing rapidly, and so is the Sunday School. In Boulder last night the house was nearly full, though only a few at our first service there. Our three weeks spent in Boulder have been quite eventful. We have had one marriage, our old friend Harry Winters, of St. Louis gulch and a Mrs. Harris, [They have our congratulations. Editor] and four funerals, two of them in one day.

DAYTON, WASH.

Brother M. R. Hanger, a leading layman of our church in Dayton, in a letter written before the new preacher had arrived, says: "I hope our preacher (Brother Shelton) will reach here soon. I feel a great interest in him, believing his appointment was made by the divine Master, and I am hoping and praying for grand results this year for the Master's cause. I deeply regretted the affliction that kept you from our Conference. We had a good time. Of the twenty-three Annual Conferences that it has been my privilege to be a member of, I never attended a better one. Our little East Columbia Conference made a splendid showing, and I think that those brethren who opposed our division, though they were honest, will admit that it was for the best. In my opinion there never has been so bright a prospect for our beloved Zion in this country as now; and I feel that if we are true to the Master and to ourselves, still greater results are in store for us in the future. Pray for us that we may realize our fondest anticipations in this grand work. [May God grant it.—Editor.]

HEPPNER, OREGON.

I am still encouraged with our prospect here. Last Sunday there were about 200 present at morning service and about 300 at night; 87 present at Sunday School. There were no other services being held in the town, so our congregations were composed of members from all the churches. Let the battle-cry of the East Columbia Conference this year be—One thousand souls for Christ, and one thousand dollars for Domestic Missions. Amen!

P. M. BELL.

EAST HELENA.

The editor spent one Sunday with Brother Bramble and his congregation. It was the occasion of the first quarterly meeting. Brother Couey was present in the spirit of his work, and preached two excellent sermons. The good people showed their forbearance by listening to this writer's talk awhile at 11 a. m. on Sunday. Brother Bramble is a success in taking a collection. He raised the entire amount due the presiding elder the first quarter. Somebody should see that as much is done for the preacher in charge. He can "hustle" money for other purposes, but not for himself, though he may need it ever so much. The pastor is in good spirits. He now preaches in the valley below East Helena, instead of at Alhambra, which has been attached to the Boulder charge. We hope Sister Bramble's health will improve soon. We were pleased to meet with our old friends, Sister Harvey, from Clancy, and Sisters Reed and Lyons, from Alhambra, and we hope to hear good tidings from the work in that quarter soon. May the trying of their faith prove to be the purifying of the gold, and may it be found unto praise and honor at appearing of Christ—His spiritual and speedy coming to revive His work and advance His cause there. We enjoyed the hospitality of Brother and Sister Burns and Bro. Gilman Riggs, also Bro. Bramble and wife. We trust that a parsonage will be built at East Helena soon. It can be done by a united effort, and it is greatly needed. The paying out of $120. a year for rent is no small item to a preacher on a small salary in Montana.

HELENA.

Brother Price and wife have returned from their trip to the Park, the former somewhat bronzed and looking hale and hearty. The pastor is hard at work again.

Brother A. G. Clarke and wife, of Helena, and Rev. L. B. Stateler, have gone to Washington City to attend the Ecumenical Conference, of which Bro. C. is a member. After that they will visit friends in Kentucky, then spend some time at the Eureka Springs in Arkansas. They will be greatly missed here in Montana. We trust they will return in the winter or early spring with Sister Clarke and Brother Stateler much improved in health.

WALLACE.

There has been quite a change here since last fall, when the writer slept in a tent—the best hotel in the place. Did not know a soul in town, and preached on Sunday in the schoolhouse, while the carpenters were hammering on the roof with might and main and making so much noise that we would have to pause occasionally until it would subside, before we could be heard. There has been a great change ever since our last visit in July, when we preached in a hired hall, right over a saloon, paying therefore at the rate of twenty dollars a month, where the racket in the room below at times was greater than that of the carpenters, and of a different character. We now find a commodious new church building 32x60 ft. frame, plain but neat, substantial and commodious. It has one coat of paint outside and is nicely plastered inside, and wainscoted to the windows; the wood-finish inside being cedar, which, when oiled and varnished, will give it a fine appearance. The pulpit is a beauty. The audience room is seated with 200 chairs which were bought from our friend Worstel, at a great bargain, and there is room for one hundred more seats by crowding a little. The house was comfortably filled on Sunday while we were there. The citizens of Wallace are justly proud of the new building, and give great praise to Bro. Waggener for his untiring energy and the success achieved in its erection. The house cost about $2,000, which, when the Church Extension funds are received —and that will be in a short time—will all be paid for except $300, which the pastor has paid out of his own pocket. That must and will be raised right early. The Board of Church Extension donated $500 and loaned $400, which is to be paid back in annual installments of $100 each at low interest. The house could not have been built but for this generous aid. A good organ has also been purchased for the church. Brother Waggener says he has the best choir in the conference. Mr. Gable is leader, assisted by Mrs. Turner, Mrs. Johnson and Mr. Lamberton. Miss Housen is organist.

The Sunday-school numbers about 50. Bro. T. A. Helm is now the superintendent, and we predict that he will make a good one.

E. J. Stanley, W. O. Waggener, T. A. Helm, G. Scott Anderson and N. R. Penny were elected a board of trustees, who now hold the property in trust for the church.

Messrs. Gable, Wilson and Pierson did most of the work on the building. Brother Waggener has received eight persons into the church during the last quarter. He will commence a protracted meeting soon, and is in good spirits concerning the out-look, praying and expecting a revival of religion. A parsonage is greatly needed here also, and we hope it will be built before the year is out, for $18 each month is enough to palsy the purse of almost any poor preacher who hasn't got a bonanza to back him.

Early Reminiscences.

By L. B. Stateler.

This, the Bowling Green circuit, was large, occupying Pike, Rawles, and part of Lincoln counties, and embracing the towns of Bowling Green, Louisiana, Clarksville, Frankfort, in Pike county, New London, the county seat of Rawles county, and Auburn in Lincoln county.

We preached on week days regularly, so that we had some twenty-six appointments which were filled every four weeks. There was not in that work a single chapel except one that was called Republican Meeting House, which was open to all denominations. The preaching was done both on week days and Sundays, at private houses.

My colleague, Brother Jordan, went to Baltimore, where he spent most of the year; so that I was alone on the work the greater portion of the time. We had a gracious work in progress most of the year. We had two camp-meetings, at which there were many precious souls converted, and much people were added to the Lord. Bro. Monroe, our presiding elder, was very constant and regular at his quarterly meetings, preaching with great power. Rev. Jacob Lannius had traveled his earnings for religious uses; and, as his success increases, he gradually raises the proportion, and then from time to time adds special thank offerings. He cannot look upon a world lying in wickedness without honestly asking his Lord how best to transmute the gold which perisheth into treasure in heaven. If God has laid on him the solemn responsibility of digging channels for a river of wealth, he anxiously and prayerfully considers how best to prevent it from ruining his own children, and to direct its waters to the desert places of the world, whether at his doors or on the other side of the globe. He does not claim to own the bank, but recognizes the fact that he is simply a paying teller for Jesus Christ.

First, last, and always the model layman puts the church first. He enthrones its interests above all his interests. He loves it. He serves it. He loves it most, as God does. "The Lord loveth the gates of Zion more than all the dwellings of Jacob." So does the true disciple. He regulates his whole plan of life to subserve its interest. He cultivates personal religion, and does all he can to promote it in his family. He searches the Scriptures, and unlocks every day with the key of secret prayer. He gathers his family every day at a domestic altar whence real incense ascends. His children are taught (without many words about it) to understand that religion is the one great business of life, and that nothing else could possibly delight both their parents half so much as their early conversion and steadfast consecration to God.

May God multiply the race of such laymen!

Recognizing the Light From Heaven

(THE CHRISTIAN REGISTER.)

Dr. Dale, in his recently published book, "The Living Christ and the Four Gospels," tells of a Japanese gentleman of considerable intellectual culture and great mental activity and vigor, who gave him the following account of how he became a Christian. He had been a Confucianist, but could not find in Confucius any clear, satisfying teaching on the subject of God, though he sought for it eagerly. While thus unsatisfied and perplexed under the ambiguities of the great sage of China, a friend gave him a Chinese Bible, asking him to read it, and assuring him that the translation was an achievement of scholarship, and possessed of very great literary merit. "I found he was right; the translation is admirable. I read page after page until I came to the 13th chapter of St. Paul's First Epistle to the Corinthians, beginning, 'If I speak with the tongues of men and of angels, but have not love, I am become as sounding brass or a tinkling cymbal.' I read the whole chapter. I was arrested, fascinated. I had never seen or heard or dreamed of a morality like that. I felt that it was above the reach of the human race, that it must have come from heaven, that the man who wrote that chapter must have received light from God—from God, about whose existence I had been speculating. And then I read the Gospel of St. John, and the words of Christ filled me with wonder. They were not to be resisted. I could not refuse him my faith." This Japanese gentleman did not enter upon any question of the authorship of the Fourth Gospel, nor did he insist upon knowing what proofs were forth-coming as to St. Paul's having written the Epistles to the Corinthians. Whoever wrote these passages had "received light from God." That was enough. He saw the light, and recognized it to be divine.

Opening Exercises at the Great Ecumenical Conference at Washington.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 7.—The second Ecumenical Methodist Council met this morning in the Metropolitan church. A platform had been erected back of the pulpit and was crowded with distinguished Methodists from this country and England, and the body of the church held over 500 delegates. The galleries were crowded to the utmost extent with spectators. The morning session was opened by Bishop Bowman, of St. Louis, who read a hymn. Bishop Keener, of New Orleans, offered prayer. A sermon prepared by Rev. Dr. Arthur, of London, was read by Rev. Dr. Stephenson. The officers nominated by the business committe last night were elected. Addresses of welcome were delivered by Bishop John F. Hurst, Rev. James Carlisle and Rev. Geo. Douglass. Responses were made by Rev. Dr. T.B.Stephenson, George Green and Rev. Ralph Abercrombie.

Rev. T. B. Stephenson, D. D. Pres. of the Wesleyan connection in London, was greeted enthusiastically. He said that when an Englishman came here he felt as if he had shaken off some shackles. He had gotten into a country where it made little difference what church he belonged to, where he did not meet "people who are too highly cultured." He was glad to see what Methodism could do in a country where it had a fair field and favor. This conference ought to be a great spiritual power. Geo. Green, of Glasgow, hoped the channels of difference between Methodists would be somewhat worn down as a result of this conference. Rev. Abercrombie, of Shrewsbury, England, delivered the last address of the day and the session closed with prayer by Dr. Stephenson.

—Parnell, the noted Irish leader, or ex-leader, died at Breghton the 6th instant. His death came too late for his fame. His star had been waning for several years. It is conceded that his decease will be a benefit to the cause of Ireland. It is a singular coincidence that Balmacede, Boulanger and Parnell, all of them being men, who had signally failed in their ambitious purposes, should pass from the stage of action so nearly the same time.

Ill humor and Faith.

It was a very cold winter's morning I had just left my bed-chamber after passing a sleepless night. The coming day with its pressure and worry of business appeared to my weary eyes as an insolvable problem. Hardly had I reached the middle of the stair-way, when my youngest daughter came running toward me: "Oh, Papa, papa, what do you think, last night the water pipes burst, and no one noticed it till just now. The water is two feet deep in the cellar, and potatoes, vegetables, wood, bottles, baskets, tubs—everything floating around." And so it was, but that which my little ones enjoyed so much only increased ill-humor. I had enough on my mind before, but now I must engage plumbers and laborers to repair the pipes, clean out the cellar and put everything in good condition. Besides, the damage was not so little. Despair was written on the faces of the servants.

Hardly had I seated myself at my writing desk, when a beggar, who had every appearance of a liar and hypocrite, entered. Now any form of hypocrisy always excites me, but especially so to-day. While this man was still speaking, one of my children came limping in, with ankle sprained by falling on the smooth pavement. This was not all. "Good morning?' said the mail carrier. First two letters upon which there was postage due. Was that all? No, a third, that roused my fire at once because of its contents. I was out of patience and was ready to do almost any desperate act. Suddenly a good old man entered with: "Good morning Reverend, last Sunday you preached a most powerful sermon on Faith, and I am now of the belief that the Devil rules the world." He then requested me to write as a memoir, a certain passage I had spoken last Sunday. It was this:

"O thou Giver of all good gifts!
True faith would I have,
Just as a sea cliff withstands the tide
Of waves that dash against its side."

I thought to myself, "A beautiful cliff are you."

As this good man who unwittingly had done angel's service for me, left, I closed the door and did not open it for some time. When I opened it again the sun shone brightly in my study, though outside it snowed.

Now I can pass lightly over my insignificant troubles, that once looked to me so large, and which in reality were only small in comparison with eternity which I sought and found.

Who knows what might have happened that day, had I not sought the place of God. An illhumored person is a dangerous being.

"The Montana Methodist"

IS A

Wide-awake, religious family paper, containing eight pages, with large, clear type, and published semi-monthly, on the 15th and 30th of each month, excepting those dates come on Sunday.

Rev. E. J. STANLEY, Editor and Business Manager.

The paper has an able corps of contributors scattered throughout Montana, Idaho, Washington and Oregon, and will contain occasional letters from California, Colorado, New Mexico, Kansas, Missouri, Kentucky, and other states, East, West and South.

The Sketches of Pioneer Life,

BY REV. L. B. STATELER,

extending, as they do, through a period of sixty years of active life in the ministry on the Western border, extending from Kentucky to the Columbia river, will be worth more than the price of the paper.

THIS PAPER WILL CONTAIN SOMETHING FOR EVERYBODY. and contribute, in the fullest measure possible, to the extension of the Redeemer's kingdom, especially throughout this great and growing West and Northwest.

Our subscription-list shows a circulation extending from Massachusetts to California and Oregon, and from Canada to Mexico. It is rapidly increasing.

The subscription is only ONE DOLLAR a year, in advance.

We invite our friends, one and all, to join in the [illegible] and help double our list

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.—The plan of attempting to raise a half million dollars yearly for missionary work through Christian Endeavor Societies each member giving two cents a week, is meeting with great success. One hundred and fifty societies report 5,000 names — that means $5,000; which sum will support seventy first-class native preachers in India and China.

PATAGONIA.—There has been little mission work accomplished in Patagonia, but the Roman Catholics have a mission centre at Viedma, in the southern part of the country. They have twelve colleges with 5,000 students, and an industrial school with thirty apprentices of carpenters, blacksmiths, boot-makers, tinkers and tailors. They have also a dispensary and the only hospital in the territory.

YOUNG PEOPLE.

Thy Task.

BY J. B. COLEMAN.

Hast thou found aught to do for God?
Do it with all thy might;
His yoke is easy, and his load
His blessed Son made light!

Work thou while yet 'tis called to-day,
For soon shall set life's sun;
Some task there waits, undone of thee,
Forever stands undone!

Ask thou of Christ some fitting place
Thy talent to improve;
Nor look too high, lest thou o'erlook
What he would most approve.

Athwart thy path unheeded lies
The cross which thou must bear;
The Master bids thee take thy pride
And crucify it there.

A Handsome Soul.

One day a boy, who was taking his first lesson in the art of sliding down hill, found his feet in too close contact with a lady's silk dress. Mortified and confused, he sprang from his sled, and, cap in hand, commenced an apology.

"I beg your pardon, ma'am; I am very sorry.

"Never mind that," exclaimed the lady, there is no great harm done, and you feel worse about it than I do."

"But your dress is ruined. I thought you would be angry with me for being so careless."

"Oh, no," she replied, "better to have a soiled dress than a ruffled temper!"

"Oh, isn't she a beauty!" exclaimed the lad, as the lady passed on.

"Who, that lady?" returned his comrade. "If you call her a beauty, you sha'n't choose for me. Why, she is old, and her face is wrinkled!"

"I don't care if her face is wrinkled," replied the other, "her soul is handsome, anyhow."

A shout of laughter followed, from which he was glad to escape. Relating the incident to his mother, he said, "O mother, that lady did me good. I shall never forget it; and when I am tempted to get mad, I will think of what she said, 'Better have a soiled dress than a ruffled temper.'"—S. W. Christian Advocate.

He saw Himself.

"You must excuse me, gentlemen, for I can not drink anything," said a man who was known to the entire town as a drunkard.

"This is the first time you ever refused a drink." said an acquaintance. "The other day you was hustling around after a cocktail and in fact you even asked me to set 'em up."

"That's very true, but I'm a very different man now."

"Preachers had hold of you?"

"No, sir; no one has said a word to me."

"Well, what has caused the change?"

"I'll tell you. After leaving you the other day I kept on hustling after a cocktail, as you call it, until I met a party of friends. When I left them I was about half drunk. To a man of my temperament a half drunk is a miserable condition, for the desire for more is so strong that he forgets his self-respect in his effort to get more drink. I remembered that there was a half pint of whiskey at home which had been purchased for medicinal purposes. Just before reaching the gate I heard voices in the garden, and looking over the fence I saw my little son and daughter playing. 'Now you be ma,' said the boy, 'and I'll be pa. Now, you sit here,and I'll come in drunk. Wait, now, till I fill my bottle.'

"He took a bottle, ran away and filled it with water. Pretty soon he returned, and entering the play-house. nodded idiotically at the girl and sat down without saying anything. The girl looked up from her work and said:

" 'James, why do you do this way?'

" 'Wizzer way?' he replied.

" 'Gettin' drunk.'

" 'Whose drunk?'

" 'You are, an' you promised when the baby died that you wouldn't drink any more. The children are almost ragged, and we haven't anything to eat hardly, but still you throw your money away. Don't you know you are breaking my heart?

"I hurried away. The action was too life-like. I could think of nothing during the day but those little children playing in the garden. You must excuse me, gentlemen, I can not drink again."—Ex.

The Great Master.

"I am my own master!" cried a young man, proudly, when a friend tried to persuade him from an enterprise which he had on hand; "I am my own master!"

"Did you ever consider what a responsible post that is? asked the friend.

"Responsibility, is it?"

"A master must lay out the work he wants done, and see that it is done right. He should try to secure the best ends by the best means. He must keep on the lookout against obstacles and accidents, and watch that everything goes straight, else he will fail."

"Well?"

"To be master of yourself, you have your conscience to keep clear, your heart to cultivate, your temper to govern, your will to direct, and your judgment to instruct. You are master over a hard lot, and if you don't master them they will master you."

"That is so," said the young man.

"Now, I could undertake no such thing, said his friend. "I should fail, sure, if I did. Saul wanted to be his own master, and failed. Herod did. Judas did. No man is fit for it. 'One is my master, even Christ.' I work under God's direction. When He is master, all goes right."—Dr. Bacon.

LETTERS

From the Orient

By Mrs. A. W. Wilson.

With an introduction by Rev. Samuel Rodgers.

"The ADVOCATE has received with pleasure this anticipated volume. It is charming in its physical make-up, but much more so in its breathing contents. It is a book with a soul, and that, too, regenerated and aglow with the spirit of the mighty Leader, who is still lifting up his eyes unto the whitened fields. We learned to admire the author's literary style, as well as the evangelistic trend of her thought during her now famous tour through the East accompanying the Bishop and gleaning, like another Ruth, in his footsteps; but we were hardly prepared for this delightful book. It is scenic, graphic, soul-stirring, and will be worth many thousands to the missionary treasury. That a woman, sharp-eyed and cultivated, should have looked upon the modern abomination of desolation at the chief seats of its ignorance and misery, and then have written down her impressions in thrilling sentences, would be epochal in the history of the Church; but the present volume has a much greater significance and should circulate everywhere. Next to its piety, that which impresses us most is its literary perfection. The illustrations are numerous, and both illustrate and narrate. It is a marvel for cheapness—the price being one dollar; but we apprehend for quite other reasons than the last mentioned that the book will have a great sale."—NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE.

EDITORIAL.

The Ecumenical Conference.

The recent meeting of the Ecumenical Conference at Washington City was an important event in the history of Methodism, of Christianity, of the United States; yea, of the the world. There was never such a gathering of Methodist ministers and laymen, representing so many adherents from so many different nations, and climes, and so many conditions of men on this continent before. We doubt if the like has been witnessed anywhere previous to this time. "There were followers of Wesley there from Greenland to Patagonia, on the Western Hemisphere; Europeans from the Ionian Isles to the Bosporus, from the shores of the Thames and the Tiber, and by the long wash of the Australasian seas; from the "Middle Kingdoms" and the Sunrise Empire, and from the cannibalistic climes of the Tahiti, the Friendly and the Fiji Islands." What an occasion, as bishops, presidents, authors, philosophers, statesmen—the representative men of two hemispheres, from all lands and climes, joined in one grand chorus:

"Jesus! the name high over all,
In hell, or earth, or sky;
Angels and men before it fall,
And devils fear and fly."

It was like the voices and thunderings of the Apocalypse and the precursor of the coming millennium.

The meeting of this body will cause the achievements, as well as the principles and spirit and workings of Methodism, to be known and talked of by the great masses of the people all over the world as never before. For never before was Methodism so highly honored. How different from what it was one hundred years ago, when it numbered in this country less than 80 ministers and less than 15000 adherents, was dependent upon other churches, almost entirely, for the ordinances (its ministers were unordained), and it had to fight every inch of its way, and that against great odds; or 150 years ago, when its services were held in private houses, in barns, on the commons, anywhere, and its leader and his heroic helpers were being mobbed, and stoned, and subjected to every conceivable indignity; treated much as the Salvation Army people are to-day in our western towns. Now, the leaders of society and of state in our great national center turn out to welcome them. The ex-mayor of the city entertains them right royally at his palatial residence. The president of the best government the sun shines upon, visits their Conference and utters words of welcome and friendly commendation and greeting. The great telegraph lines and leading newspapers of the land—of the world—vie with each other in giving publicity to the sayings and doings of the men who but yesterday were pronounced wild enthusiasts and mad men, and were accused of turning the world up side down.

The St. Louis Globe-Democrat of the 11th inst., contained an interesting and eulogistic editorial on "The Methodist Idea," called out by the session of the Ecumenical Conference. Among other good things it said: "There is nothing in all history to compare with the story of Methodist growth and achievement in this country. A hundred years ago it was a puny and groping power, represented by 83 traveling preachers and not quite 15,000 communicants. To-day its traveling preachers number over 30,000, beside 30,000 local preachers, and its membership has increased to more than 5,000,000. It owns 55,000 churches and 15,000 parsonages, and the whole value of its property exceeds $200,000,000. These figures show at a glance how much has been done in the way of promoting the welfare and influence of the denomination; but they do not show how much it has done to advance the interests of education, reform and progress. It has been found always upon the side of temperance and of every other just and good cause. Wherever it has gained a foothold, it has applied its energy to the general improvement of society. It has not merely sought to administer spiritual consolation and to win spiritual victories, but has also identified itself with the daily life and experience of the people in a familiar and useful manner. * * * In all the great movements for the benefit of the masses the Methodist idea has had direct and potent illustration. The impulse of pioneering, of pushing forward, of possessing new fields, has been constantly manifested by its teachers and champions. That is the chief secret of its wonderful success, the principal source of its superior vitality and popularity. The common people are naturally attracted by a form of religious service that is simple, practical and enthusiastic; and the common people constitute the majority in every community and for every purpose."

If space permitted we might give many reasons for the wonderful success that Methodism has achieved. It has ever preached a free and a full Gospel, a salvation present and experienced in the heart as well as exemplified in the life of the believer. Its great heart has pulsated with the warm, fresh, glowing life that the Son of God brought to dying men, and it has infused this life into the hearts of its people, and sent them all out into a world-wide parish as missionaries to bring others into the same rich and soul-satisfying experience. It commends itself to the head and heart of the great mass of humanity. "And to the poor the Gospel is preached."

This mighty movement is of God, and this conference will aid in the dissemination of its benign spirit. We trust that it will aid in removing barriers and unifying forces to such an extent, as to prevent present friction and waste of forces in some of our mission fields.

There are dangers to avoid and duties to perform. Let us glory not in past success nor present prestige and power, and see that we steer clear of ritualism and worldliness, giant evils that threaten us, and follow closely the example and spirit of Him who, in surveying the field and estimating the forces, shouted as he passed in triumph to the skies, "The best of all is God is with us." Here is found the secret of our past triumphs and the only pledge of future victories.

Montana Conference Minutes.

The printed minutes of the fourteenth session of the Montana Conference, M. E. Church, South, held at Helena, July 29 to August 3, 1891, are out. The pamphlet bears the impress of the Independent Publishing Co., Helena, Mont., and reflects credit upon the gentlemanly foreman, Mr. Majors. It contains 32 pages, including a roll of the members, telling when each was received into the traveling connection, and in what conference; giving the time and place of holding of each session, together with the name of the president and secretary, since the conference was organized; a roll of the honored dead, and a synopsis of the sessions of each annual conference since the seventh, which was held in 1884, and the minutes of which were printed. The booklet also has an outline woodcut of Rev. L. B. Stateler, the venerable pioneer of our work in Montana, and is chuck full of interesting matter, concerning Montana Methodism. The price is ten cents. Send to Rev. J. B. Parnall, Stevensville, Montana. The money will be applied to paying the expense of publication. If there should be a surplus, it can be kept over to help out next year. By getting this book and the one published in 1884, the reader will have a pretty good history of our work in Montana since 1864, together with a sketch of the history and an account of the resources of Montana.

A limited number of copies of the former publication are on hand. It contains 116 pages—as much matter as is found in an ordinary 12 mo. book. The price is 25 cents—35 cents for the two, which may be had by addressing Montana Methodist, Corvallis, Mont.

Brother Parnall deserves credit for the labor bestowed, the pains taken, and the good taste displayed in getting out the minutes in their present form. This writer did nothing but prepare the synopsis of the previous sessions, and was somewhat hampered by efforts at condensing, in order to save space. We trust that from now on, we will be able to publish our minutes every year, and in the meantime, let every man bestir himself that we may have something that it will be worth while to publish.

Dr. Potter Gone.

We do not know when we were more shocked or more deeply pained, than upon receiving the announcement of the death of Dr. W. H. Potter, one of our missionary secretaries, which occurred at Austell, Ga., Oct. the 11th., after an illness of two weeks. We met him at the last session of the Missouri Conference, and can never forget his burning eloquence and his soul stirring words, as he made his plea for the cause of missions. It was well said, that Dr. Potter, if spared, would subsoil the church upon the great question of missions. He was full of his theme, and his heart and the hearts of his hearers burned within, as he presented it with such an array of facts and arguments, and with such an reaction from above as to make it irresistible. He had promised us to try and visit Montana next year. May his mantle fall upon some one worthy to carry forward his work.

NEWS AND NOTES.

—The London Methodist Temperance Magazine says: "Under prohibition, Atlanta, in Alaska (?), had a splendid run of commercial prosperity. It was known as the model city of the South."

Call the next class in geography. Perhaps we know no more of them than they do of us.—Texas Christian Advocate.

That is as bad as the case of a Georgia preacher, who wrote to L. B. Stateler once, wanting to know what part of Colorado Montana was in. A gentleman in Kansas once, upon being told that we hailed from Montana, responded very quickly, "what state is that in?"

—The three men who were suspected as being the murderers of Mr. W. J. Penrose, and who had a lengthy hearing in a preliminary trial in Butte City, have been held for their appearance before the grand jury.

—The potato crop is immense throughout Montana. It suffered in some localities during the recent cold snap. But there are enough left to feed thousands of hungry people. The price offered hardly justifies taking care of them. Would that we could send some of them to the poor peasants of Russia.

—We acknowledge with pleasure the receipt of The Review of Reviews for October. It contains quite a group of articles on the Ecumenical Conference, including one on the progress of Methodism and its value as a factor in the unification of the English speaking race; also one on Rev. Hugh Price Hughes, by W. T. Stead. It also contains portraits showing the faces of fifty prominent Methodists, including Rev. T. B. Stevenson, D. D., LL. D., Rev. William Arthur, M. A., Rev. Hugh Price Hughes, and others across the sea, and the bishops of the M. E. Churches, North and South, in America. An awkward blunder places Bishop Haygood's name under Bishop Fitzgerald's portrait and vice versa, also causes Bishops Key and Wilson to swap names.

—The Sunday School budget from the Nashville Publishing House for October is on our table. The editors of the various departments are doing nobly. Every family should take the Sunday School Magazine and the Weekly Visitor. They are only fifty cents each, for one year.

—The population of Utah, by the last census, is 207,905. In 1880 it was 143,963. There has been an increase in ten years of 65,947, or 44.42 per cent.

—Dr. Phillips Brooks, the eminent Episcopal divine, who has been elected bishop of the diocese of Massachusets, was consecrated in Trinity Church, the one of which he has been rector, at Boston, the 14th instant, amid imposing ceremonies. In personal appearance he is spoken of as a genial giant, with something of boyish open-heartedness in his smooth, round face. He has ex-emplified in his career the good that can spring out of strength combined with sympathy. He is noted for his broad liberality, and is about as popular with other denominations as with his own.

—The Great Northern railroad will go to Spokane, and machine shops, a round house, and other buildings will be located there. It will help that city greatly.

—The Grand Lodge of the Independent Order of Good Templars for Montana, met in its twenty-fourth annual session at Stevensville, Montana, Oct. 14th, 1891, and completed its business in one day. J. T. Farris was Grand Chief Templar; J. A. Longstaff, Grand Counselor; J. W. Chapman, Grand Secretary, and W. E. Boggs, Grand Treasurer. Officers for the next year are as follows: G. C. T., J. A. Longstaff; G. Counselor, J. R. Faulds; G. V. T., Susie F. Priest; G. Secretary, J. W. Chapman; G. Treasurer, W. E. Boggs.

—The session was harmonious, and the reports showed substantial progress in the work of the Order during the past year. The friends of the Order have our hearty good wishes in their noble work.

—The remains of Charles Stewart Parnell, the ex-Irish leader, were laid to rest in the cemetery near Dublin, on the 11th ult.

—A paper to represent the Parsonage and Home Mission Society is soon to be published. It is a worthy enterprise, and we wish it success. It will be called "The Parsonage and Home Mission Quarterly." The subscription price is twenty-five cents a year. It will commence about the first of January next. Let all who want to subscribe and aid in getting subscribers, correspond with Miss Lucenda B. Helm, Louisville, Ky.

—Thanksgiving season approaches. There are on hand at this office a number of copies of a publication called "Patriotism and Religion as Potent Factors in Our Country's History and Destiny." It is a thanksgiving talk—elaborated from a sermon—by the editor, and contains matter quite appropriate for consideration at this time. Price, cloth, fifty cents; paper cover, twenty-five cents.

—The excellent paper by Miss Maggie Evans, in another column, was read before the Epworth League at Deer Lodge, and its publication requested by vote of the League. We gladly give it a place, also the one by Miss Lulu Biggs. Their perusal will be profitable to our young people—and older ones also.

—Sister Parnall writes us that two Parsonage and Home Mission Societies have been organized since Conference, one at Deer Lodge and the other at Butte. We trust that the number will multiply rapidly. We fear that some of us do not take the interest in this work that we should, until we are brought into straits and need help ourselves. Read Mrs. Atkin's "House Raising" article again.

—Mrs. R. S. Fowler, of Victor, will visit her old home near Macon City, Mo., this fall, the first time since she left there, when a young lady, and went to Oregon. We rejoice that she is able to gratify a long cherished desire, but she will find that "the old home ain't what it used to be."

—We greatly rejoice at the prospect of having the gates closed on Sunday at the World's Fair at Chicago. It is said upon good authority, that the brewers of Chicago have subscribed a half million dollars to keep them open. It would be a shame for Christian America thus to ignore her Lord, and desecrate His day before the invited world, much of it coming from recent heathendom. The centennial celebration at Philadelphia was a success, and it was closed on Sunday, and there is no reason why the World's Fair may not be conducted on the same principles.

—Rev. H. D. Groves, of Howard College, Mo., writes: "We have, by far, the largest attendance in the history of the college—an enrollment of 180 at the end of the first month, and others still coming."

—The Missoula County Sunday School Convention will meet in Stevensville, Montana, on Tuesday evening Nov. 10th, at 7:30 o'clock, and continue in session through Wednesday. Its object is to promote zeal and efficiency in Sunday School work. Let there be a good attendance.

—Married, at Heppner, Oregon, by Rev. P. M. Bell, Mr. James D. Hamilton and Miss Dora T. Crabtree. No date given. We are sorry to learn from a private note, that Brother Bell's eyes are giving him some trouble, and that he has been unwell. Trust that he is better by this time.

—The president of the Ecumenical Conference at Washington occupied a chair made from one of the oaken beams taken from the old City Road Chapel, London. It is beautifully carved with appropriate designs, costing about $250, and is the gift of a wealthy English gentleman to the proposed University to be established at Washington. The Epworth Bible was used in the opening exercises. It is the Bible used by Samuel Wesley, at Epworth for forty years. It is quite large. The sacrament of the Lord's Supper was administered at the close of the opening sermon, and the unfermented juice of the grape was used therein. We would that this could always be done.

—President Harrison visited the Conference on the day that International Arbitration was discussed. His presence and his speech made a profound impression, particularly upon the minds of the English delegates.

—Many for whom we write have either read or heard the story of a home so full of domestic love, where the Christian graces of meekness, patience, contentment, and cheerfulness were in such lively exercise, that the little ones, although crowded in an attic, never dreamed that they were poor. There are too many Christian homes where the burdens of poverty or sickness are increased a hundredfold by the spirit of discontent. It is possible for even the lowliest home to be so full of love and Christian joy that the children, breathing this atmosphere, will not suppose it possible for any home to be more beautiful than theirs. O for more of such homes!—S. S. Visitor.

—Says a sensible writer: "Never take the last train when you can help it. Much of the trouble in life is caused by the fact that people, in their engagements, wait till the last minute. The seven o'clock train will take them to the right place if every thing goes straight, but in this world things are very apt to go crooked. So you had better take the train that starts an hour earlier. In every thing we undertake let us have a little margin. Do not calculate too closely on possibilities. Better have room and time to spare. Do not take the last train. Not heeding this counsel makes bad work for this world and the next. There are many lines of communication between earth and heaven. Men say they can start any time. After awhile, in great excitement, they rush into the depot of mercy, and find that the final opportunity has left and behold! it is the last train! 'Remember now thy Creator in the days of thy youth.' Do not wait for the last train."

—The Committee on Statistics at the Ecumenical Conference reported, that since the London Conference, ten years ago, there had been an increase of 30 per cent in Methodist believers. The report shows the number of ministers, 42,695; members, 6,495,397; and adherents, 25,378,000. The Conference recommended Nov. 15th, next, as the beginning of a week of prayer. Provision is made for the holding of another Ecumenical Conference 10 years hence.

—The Flathead Indians, numbering about 200, who resided until recently in Bitter Root valley, have removed to the Jocko Reservation. Their land is being sold, and the proceeds will be applied to their benefit. General Carrington was the successful agent in the removal. The Indians went quite cheerfully, feeling that it was for the best. We presume that but few tears were shed by the whites. Still, they will miss their red brethren.

—Several interesting articles will have to wait over until next issue, for lack of space.

—A number have taken the hint and are sending in remittances for the paper. Let the good work go on. The deficit is only a dollar or so to the reader, but amounts to several hundred dollars on our books. "Let us consider one another."

News From The Churches.

ROSALIA.

W. S. Hornbuckle: —We are comfortably domiciled in our new home in the cozy little parsonage situated in the center of the Oaksdale circuit, where we have set up our banner in the name of the Lord. We have made one round on the circuit amid sickness in our family. We have asked the Lord for a revival all over the circuit and we believe it is coming. The indications were never better. At every point on the circuit we have some men and women who are ready for every good word and work. I am studying and laying plans for the winter's campaign, and I trust that when the conference year closes, we may see "where sin abounded, grace much more abounded." O, for 1000 souls for the Master this year, and $1000 for missions! For this let us work and pray, expecting to receive.

DAYTON AND POMEROY.

G. H. Gibbs:—I send you one new subscriber. Am getting along very well on my big circuit. We expect to build a church at Covella this fall and winter. [Pleased to hear that. Success to you. —Editor]

BOZEMAN.

W. T. Goulder:—We are in the midst of a revival. The fruit is falling fast. Congregations very good and increasing at every appointment. A deep interest at every service. Pray for us. We want to see at least fifty conversions.

WESTON, OREGON.

F. C. Adkins:—The work is moving along nicely. Congregations good. Will do what I can for your paper.

STEVENSVILLE.

The first Quarterly Meeting passed off pleasantly. Two additions by certificate—Brother A. Collet and wife recently of Helena. The Sunday-school is moving off nicely. There is a good attendance. The pastor, J. B. Parnall, is in good heart, concerning the work at this point. By the time this is in print he will be in the midst of a protracted meeting at Ambrose school house. We wish him success.

FROM LEWISTON.

We are moving forward on the building line. Our new church at Upper Tammany is almost ready to be dedicated. If the painter-collector had been as fast as the carpenters, all things would now have been ready. However, we expect to stir the painter-collector up and be ready for our first Quarterly Conference, Oct. 31st, Nov. 1st, 1891 It is a beautiful location and on an acre-lot. The house is 28x42, with 10 Gothic windows and a double door in front with Gothic transom. This building will do credit to Southern Methodism in this section. It is the first church edifice ever built by our church, in Idaho, South of Clearwater river and the fourth one in the State, so far as I can learn. [How about the one at Wallace, Idaho? —Editor.] We are praying now, for a baptism of the Holy Ghost and the conversion of the people. May the Lord give it to us! Fifteen gave their hands for prayer last night at Mason's schoolhouse, on Craig's Mountain. I would have stayed and protracted the meeting, but circumstances overruled. May the Holy Spirit move a young man to come to Cawas Prairie Circuit! A similar prayer offered for Genesee last spring has been answered, and although the young man is about 40 years old, he has no impedimenta. The work progresses, under the leadership of Rev. H. T. Burger, splendidly. Palouse City, Wash., expects to have a new Church building by Christmas. Rev. J. W. Compton, the pastor, wrote me in regard to having a double dedication by a Bishop. Yours Truly,

Howson B. Terry.

CORVALLIS AND GRANTSDALE.

The first Quarterly Meeting for this charge was held at Alford's school house. There was a good attendance on Saturday morning and evening, and also at both services on Sunday, and a good interest manifested. Several persons asked for the prayers of Christian people. Brother Flowers, the pastor, reported three additions by baptism, and one by profession of faith, who had been baptized previously. A good start was made on a subscription for the pastor's support, which was left in the hands of Brother John Wood, the steward there, and hope to see many more of them converted before the year is out.

BOZEMAN CIRCUIT.

Brother Warren had to give up the "hired house" in which he was living, and was thus forced to undertake the creation of a parsonage which will soon be completed at Belgrade. It will cost something over $600. Necessity is the mother of invention. We trust that the good people of Gallatin Valley will rally to Brother Warren's assistance in paying for and furnishing it before winter sets in.

FROM BOULDER.

Mrs. L. A. Riley renews her subscription and says: "We are more than pleased with the 'Montana Methodist.' Everything in Boulder is encouraging at present. Brother Clark and his excellent wife are meeting with a cordial reception. Our church was in a very low condition when he took it in charge, but he seems earnestly devoted to the work, and we trust and pray that with God's help there will be such a revival as we have never known before. Pray for us, Brother Stanley." [Indeed we will, for the work at Boulder lies very near our heart. We trust that the fondest expectations of our people may be realized then this year. —Editor]

HEPPNER, OREGON.

Rev. P. M. Bell sends a dollar to renew his subscription and adds: "I have organized a society in the interest of Domestic Missions, among the children and young people. It is known as 'The Sunshine Circle' and has some local and social features which will interest all. I believe the children can be interested in these matters and help us in raising the assessments." [Of course they can, and they will be all the better for it. There is found the chief benefit, in getting all the forces interested and enlisted in the work. "All at it, and always at it." —Editor.]

We (the East Columbia Conference) must raise that $1000. [We believe it will be raised. Faith and courage will accomplish wonders. —Editor.]

FROM WOLF CREEK.

Mrs. Thos. B. Willis, one of our elect ladies at Wolf Creek, renews her subscription to the "Methodist" and adds: "We do miss Bro. Clark so much, and hope that we may soon have a preacher to take his place. Tell Bro. Couey, if he can, we would be glad for him to come down and preach sometime. If he will let us know when he is coming, we'll try and have a congregation for him."

This is on the Townsend circuit for which we tried hard to get a preacher at Missouri Conference. The people are left entirely without preaching. They have our sympathy. We trust that Bro. Couey will find time to visit that region, and we know that he will at the first opportunity.

JUDITH BASIN COUNTRY.

Dear Bro. Stanley:—We are located about half-way between Billings and Great Falls. This is a good country. Crops are good this year, as it has been very seasonable. We have a Sunday-school on the union plan, as there are but few persons here belonging to any one denomination. There are a few Baptists, a few Campbellites, a few Northern Methodists, and three or four Southern Methodists. We use the Baptist lesson papers, as the superintendent is a Baptist, and I think, is a good man. We have preaching once a month by our Northern Methodist brother, who is on the Philbrook circuit, which includes this part of the country. I don't think any of the denominations named above, have any organization in this part of the country. The people were members "back in the states," as they say. [Yes, that is the way that many of us expressed it fifteen or twenty years ago, when the beautiful Judith Basin was inhabited almost entirely by Indians and buffaloes, and it was almost certain death for a white man to go in there. What a change since then! But "back in the states" is hardly proper now, since here in Montana we live in one of the grandest states in the Union.—Editor.] The "Montana Methodist" comes regularly twice a month to me, and to say I am well pleased with it, would be putting it very mildly. It is a great treat to me every time it makes its appearance, and I only wish it came every week. You may depend upon me as a subscriber as long as I am able to pay for it. I will try and get some new subscribers for it. Your Brother,

W. S. McMurry.

We are glad to get such a good newsy letter from our brother away out on the frontier, and to know that he enjoys reading the "Methodist." The thought that our paper goes to so many readers throughout the Northwest who are almost without religious services and whose hearts are longing for Christian fellowship, and who are hungry to hear how the battle is going, is giving a wonderful incentive to us in preparing the matter for these columns. We have been there and we know how it is. For a number of years our home was without the regular ministry of the church of our choice. What a luxury it was to get the church paper! It was part of our routine work when a boy, to ride eight miles each Saturday to the Post-office and back, chiefly to get the dear old "St Louis Advocate." So long as we can minister in any degree to others in like circumstances we will not consider that our labor is in vain. When our brother is unable to pay for the "Methodist" if he will let us know, we will make a desperate effort to find one who is able, or at least to see that his paper is not stopped.

HELENA DISTRICT.

BY A. C. COUEY.

BOULDER AND ELKHORN.

I was with Bro. Clarke Wednesday evening, Sept. 11th, to hold the business session of the first Quarterly Conference for the current year. Considerable improvements had been made on the parsonage since preaching there Sabbath, Aug. 29th. Sister Clarke, strange to say, was the first time in the number of years in the itinerancy, in the bounds of the circuits where Bro. Clark had been pastor—in fact, had never before left their own private home since being in Montana. She was doing finely in the new situation.

A good congregation greeted us on the week-night preaching service, after which we transacted the regular business. The pastor, Bros. Jno. B. Taylor, Jno. W. Currin and Wm. Butler, with several good sisters present. The work here begins most encouragingly for quite a while. The people seem to have a "mind to work."

WHITE HALL AND WILLOW CREEK.

Brother Britt met me Friday evening Sept. 18th, at White Hall Station. Two and one-half miles' drive brought us to the well-known preacher's home, of Maj. and Mrs. E. G. Brooke.

Bro. Britt had every thing well in hand on his large circuit. Announcements had been made for preaching Saturday 11 a. m., and 7:30. Quarterly Conference Saturday afternoon —and the regular Quarterly Conference services Sabbath. These were all filled in order. Every point on the circuit had its representation or representatives, except one who could not be present by reason of a delayed train.

Brother Britt, with Major Brooke, S. F. Tuttle, Wm. Beall, and T. T. Black composed the officials.

Sisters Brooke and Black were also present at the Quarterly Conference.

No work, either station or circuit, shows greater signs of real genuine interest than the White Hall and Willow Creek circuit. I was delighted, and hope for good things—more good things during the year.

HELENA STATION.

Bro. and Si-ter Price had just returned a day or so previous to holding the Quarterly Conference from their visit to the National Park. The reports made by the pastor and stewards were favorable—and Price addresses himself to the work with renewed strength. Sister Price is again suffering with an attack of rheumatism, similar to that of last fall. They have decided to have her seek a warmer climate for the winter—so Sister Price and the children will start for Altus, Arkansas, very soon --before this is in print possibly. Having tried the experiment of two thousand miles between me and mine, I am sorry for the Helena pastor.

EAST HELENA.

Brother Bramble moves on smoothly at East Helena. Preaching services Saturday evening, and the usual Quarterly Conference services Sabbath were all pleasant. The love-feast and Bro. Stanley's sermon in the morning were greatly enjoyed. The hospitality and fellowship with Bro. Bramble, his wife, the good friends whom we met there, both residents and visitors, gave us much pleasure. Mr. Editor, come again to one of our Quarterly Conferences. We hope to give you more time to present the claims of the "Montana Methodist." I am sorry to record the fact of Sister Bramble's continued ill-health for a number of weeks.

BUTTE STATION.

Butte is called dull, at this time—but never seems so—nor does our church work there.—Bro. Squires and family were taking a combination trip to the Gallatin valley. Bro. Squires was in Bozeman, assisting Goulder in a protracted meeting, while Sister Squires and children visited relatives and friends in the country. I found the Butte Station in good growing state. Had a pleasant time preaching Sunday. Administered the communion to the largest number since I have been associated with the work. The officials met me for the business session at 10 a. m., Monday. Pastor's reports encouraging. Liberal allowance was made the pastor for the year. I came away thinking of Butte as I have for quite a while--that she is succeeding well. The Lord bless pastor and family and flock.

SIDE APPOINTMENT.

In answer to a pressing invitation "to come preach for us," I spent Sabbath, Oct. 11th, at Alhambra Springs; preaching, however, at Clancy School-house, one mile below on the R. R., Saturday evening, and twice Sabbath. The people in a settlement or settlements for fifteen miles, reaching from Clancy to Wickes, have only one sermon per month by our church. As an evidence of their relish of the Gospel, they came Sunday evening from one to eight miles distant, through the worst weather we have had this season. I had made up my mind to preach to a dozen or fifteen, but to my gratification, we had a splendid congregation. I ministered to them in spiritual things—they ministered to me of their carnal things—more than quadrupling my traveling expenses.

The next communication I send you, Mr. Editor, I will tell you of the destitute places I know about within and bordering on the Helena District. Had we the means, we could employ at least four new men in "my patch." I closed the first round on the district with Bro. Warren, Sunday, October 18th. I send you list of appointments for the second round, which takes up the remainder of 1891:

EARLY REMINISCENCES.

BY I. B. STATELER.

From the Conference at Mountain Springs, Ark, I was sent to labor in the Creek Nation, Indian Territory, and placed in charge of the Hardridge school. Brother Joplin had preceded me. His wife was the daughter of old Bro. Henry, who was a preacher. She and her little infant had fallen victims to disease and both died and were buried there. In my loneliness I frequently visited the grave of our departed sister and gave vent to my feelings in weeping. I did not know how soon I might rest there too, for I was very sickly. I suffered much with the regular old-fashioned shaking ague.

At the place where I boarded there was a typical "black mammy." She was an African woman and had a grown daughter by the name of Phœbe. The daughter's father was an Indian man, whose name was Parryman. He was a vile old fellow and had a heap of wives. The daughter was a right pretty girl, and was married to a white man. "Granny" as we called her, did the cooking and brought my meals to my room. Altogether we made quite a family. We had prayers regularly. The cabin was built upon posts set in the ground. The hogs would pile up under the floor and groan and grunt at a great rate. They would often raise the puncheons of the floor which just laid loose upon the sleepers. I would borrow "black mammy's" pony and drag up wood for the fire. Sometimes she would imagine that I worked him too hard, and would get mad, and break out with, "I won't linctum for you any more! I won't linctum for you any more!" meaning that she would not interpret for me any more. I could speak to the greater portion of the Indians only through an interpreter. The preaching was all done through an interpreter. I would utter a sentence in English, and then the interpreter would give the sense in the Indian tongue. These Indians, many of them were quite well-to-do and owned many slaves.

The missionaries would fail to come, and I was kept going from one school and from one place to another. The Little Rock District then embraced the Indian country and half of Arkansas, and all that territory was then in the Missouri Conference.

—Read "Tenderfoot's" letter. It is rich, rare, racy and rangey.

—o—

"Tender Foot Abroad!"

September the 18th, 1891, was an eventful day in the history of the Coeur d'Alene towns. Helena, out of the fullness of her heart, had sent over an excursion train to carry 400 of the Idaho folk to her magnificent city. Early the clans gathered, old and young, male and female, pretty and not so pretty, wise and otherwise; parents and children, husbands and wives, beaux, belles and sweethearts were in the hurrying, jostling, eager, joyous crowd. "Tenderfoot", wife, and the little "Tenderfoot" had tickets, and so were on hand. Mid smiles and laughter and general good cheer, the train started off over the "Coeur d'Alene cut off." What a marvellous road it is! Full of strange, irregular curves, pothook-like, and as oblivious of straight lines as the chirography of your humble servant! Up the mountain we started! — Early in the ascent we passed the classic shades of Pottsville, that has now gotten almost too small to cast a shade. On and up we go—especially up; down and around we go—up again, around several times; then up several more times; then so far around that both engines of our "double header" are plainly visible from the rear coach. If a girl's sweetheart had been on the calf-catcher, and she on the rear platform, and if her lips had been as much extended, as sometimes they are in a pout, and if nobody had been looking, and both parties had been willing, and if they had been a little nearer together, they might have kissed each other. Like a long, sinuous, jointed snake the train wound in and wound out, "but with a goal in view" went on and upward. Now through a tunnel, now over a high trestle, now on the side of the mountain, the valley so far below as to make one's head dizzy, who ventured to look down. A little flange on a car-wheel, a bolt—a spike—between us all and death! Yet the Lord's eye was upon us, and His hand upheld us. What a picture of Christian life this mountain rail-road is! Winding, steep, rocky—here a descent where the brakes must be put on, yonder a dark, gloomy tunnel—God's sunshine at the end of every tunnel. The train followed the track, that the chief engineer, who went before and marked it out, said, would lead to the top of the mountain. Has not One of unerring skill and wisdom been before and marked out the road we have to travel, to reach at last the mountain-top, where we may overlook the promised land? No grade on it so steep but may be climbed if we keep to the track! To leave it means wreck and ruin. But back to our journey:—In some places three portions of track were visible at one time, and we actually met and passed a train that was a half-hour behind us. The scenery is grand, beyond any words of mine to picture. To the west are the mountains, sloping down until they seem to meet and be joined by a white ribbon of clouds to the far-away horizon, and the horizon shades off in dimming lines of beauty until one imagines it mingling with the blue waves of the far-off Pacific. On either hand stand the forests of giant pine, fir, cedar and tamarack—in front are the rocky ramparts of the frowning mountains, which seem to forbid a nearer approach. But skill and industry had been before us and were with us, and every rampart was carried, and at last the summit was reached.

On the mountain-top! What a scene! No wonder the Ark rested on the mountain! Its occupants could feel that God was not far off. His unpolished handiwork, rough ashlers of nature's masonry, supported them; and beneath lay a world! No wonder God buried Moses on Nebo's Mount! The promised land of earth was below him, when he looked that way, and above was the promised glory land. Christ "went up into a mountain," and Heaven's glories in the Transfiguration shone on him, and from him on Tabor's Mount. Then MOUNT ZION!! Hard climbing to reach the summit, but how glorious the outlook, and how hallowed the associations when there! After a short stop on the summit, the train commenced the descent. Going down, the train-men say is much easier than going upward, but much more dangerous too. How true of life!—Soon we reach the Missoula river, and along its winding banks we sped!

Erelong the hills separate, the valley widens out. Cultivated patches are seen, and then fertile fields covered with grain and grass—here and there moving punctuation marks of fat cattle dot nature's lovely page. Soon Missoula is reached. The "Garden City," they call it and rightly so. Tokens of thrift, growth and prosperity are seen on every side. After lunch on for Helena! Part of the Deer Lodge Valley, rich and beautiful, is passed through. On the mountain side is the old wagon trail. Stateler, Flowers, and Stanley in the early days passed that way, I believe. What a difference between now and then! Erelong, we begin mountain-climbing again. Between walls of solid rock we glide. Here and yonder signs of placer-diggings in other days, are seen. A little after dark we enter the long Mullan tunnel, and, as we emerge, a scene greets us that for inherent beauty and wondrous loveliness I have never seen surpassed—we are up in the air nearly 7000 feet. From far-off towards the East, and seemingly from far below us, up, out of an ocean of azure, studded with diamond star-islands, the moon, full-orbed and most queenly in her rich and royal beauty, rises! Speech falters and words are forgotten in wondrous admiration. The God of nature, through His queenly servant, smiled upon the earth, and the entire landscape was dimpled over with silvery light. "O Lord, how marvellous are Thy works!" About 8 p. m. we arrived at Helena. A mighty multitude met the excursionists at the depot, and heartily was the welcome accorded the visitors from the mining camps beyond the mountains. Cannons boomed, red-fire glared, huzzas filled the air. The entire stay in Helena was an ovation. What a wonderful city it is! Its magnificent business buildings; its fine residences, and behind these the brain and pluck and energy that have made it what it is. Your correspondent found a delightful home in the spacious mansion of Bro. A. G. Clarke. What a blessing to have a big-hearted Methodist with open hand and house there! May his bow long abide in strength, and his good wife soon be restored to perfect health! Behind Mr. S. C. Ashby's sorrels, the finest team in Helena, we drove over the city, viewing its beauty and prosperity. What a pleasant time, too, we had dining at Mr. Ashby's. Father and mother, daughter and son are fit jewels for that lovely home casket they have there. Mr. Ashby comes of the stock of that cavalier trooper—so dear to every Virginian's heart, General Thomas Ashby, and his home in the far West well represents Virginia hospitality, and he best type of the Virginia gentleman. — — — The excursionists visited the Natatorium at the Broadwater hotel, and hundreds enjoyed the "Idaho Plunge." It was not without its uses if we may rely on the statement of the son of Erin, who said: "Give me, if you plaze, a bit ov a rag to dry moiself wid; for I tells yez, me havn't had the concintrates off me before, for three years, nor better!" — Price and wife were at the Park. He dwells in the hearts of his people and has gained the respect and confidence of the entire community. I worshipped at his church Sunday morning, and heard a good sermon from the Baptist brother who filled his pulpit. I looked in on our Sunday School in the afternoon. The children were out in goodly numbers, but where were the adult members of the church? At night I had the pleasure of preaching for Bro. Hauk, of the M. E. Church. We had a good time. The "Amens" did me good. Monday we left Helena en route for Stevensville. After all, the Bitter Root Valley is the loveliest spot on earth that I have yet seen. Its varied scenery—mountains snow-capped; foot-hills, where hundreds of cattle and horses roam; limpid streams; wide, fertile lowlands—is "a thing of beauty" indeed.—About 6 p. m. we drove up to the parsonage at Stevensville. Parnall met us with a hearty greeting; and though his good wife was not at home, he left nothing undone for our comfort and pleasure. Even the chicken squalled—Parnall had killed him. He had fed Methodist preachers before. What an "all-round" man he is! A cook, the equal of John Chinaman; expert as a housekeeper; unexcelled as a dishwasher; a facile writer; an earnest, successful preacher; a faithful pastor, witty, wise, sociable, consecrated, a Christian gentleman through and through. We are debtors to him for much kindness and courtesy that will not be forgotten. That entire trip to Bitter Root will linger long among the pleasant things of life! The Flowers, transplanted years ago from the gardens of Mississippi, blossom out now in

IS A

Wide-awake, religious family paper, containing eight pages, with large, clear type, and published semi-monthly, on the 15th and 30th of each month, excepting those dates come on Sunday.

Rev. E. J. STANLEY, Editor and Business Manager.

The paper has an able corps of contributors scattered throughout Montana, Idaho, Washington and Oregon, and will contain occasional letters from California, Colorado, New Mexico, Kansas, Missouri, Kentucky, and other states, East, West and South.

The Sketches of Pioneer Life,

BY REV. L. B. STATELER,

extending, as they do, through a period of sixty years of active life in the ministry on the Western border, extending from Kentucky to the Columbia river, will be worth more than the price of the paper.

THIS PAPER WILL CONTAIN SOMETHING FOR EVERYBODY. and contribute, in the fullest measure possible, to the extension of the Redeemer's kingdom, especially throughout this great and growing West and Northwest.

Our subscription-list shows a circulation extending from Massachusetts to California and Oregon, and from Canada to Mexico. It is rapidly increasing.

The subscription is only ONE DOLLAR a year, in advance.

We invite our friends, one and all, to join in the [illegible] and help double our list sweetest deeds of kindness, and the fragrance of their hospitality is as "perfume out-poured." May they be perennial and blossom forever in the "garden of the Lord." At Bro. Bell's the old home feeling came over us. A delightful home is that! Tennesseans by birth, Missourians by adoption, Montanians through choice, they afford a combination that in open-handed hospitality, in kindly deeds that come from the heart, and in Christian courtesy equals old Virginia. Those Bells give forth no uncertain sound, but their lives and deeds in tones of melody ever tell of goodness, grace and God. A day with Stanley and his pleasant family added to the cup of our enjoyment which was already full. His faithful work in all this land in God's sight will be a monument more enduring than marble. He has been through "the deep waters," and lately through the "fiery furnace;" but the "Form of the Fourth" was with him to succor and save. — — — — — — — — — — —

Bro. John Robinson's kindness must not be omitted. Hospitality reigns in his elegant home, and thrift is seen on every side on that magnificent farm of his. But it would take a whole issue of the "Methodist" to tell of all the pleasant things that occurred—How the little "Tenderfoot" dabbled in the ditches, devoured the melons, apples, plums, corn, chicken, ice cream, etc.; and how the father held up well his "end of the log" along that line, too. Then there was the pleasant fellowship enjoyed, the devout communication with brethren beloved, the sense of God's presence and goodness. After nearly a year's isolation on an outpost, 130 miles from any other Southern Methodist preacher, the meeting with brethren in the ministry and laity, was joy indeed to this scribe's heart. But the best things of earth have their end. So Friday we started homeward, and in the evening reached the central city of the Coeur d'Alenes Mountains on every hand surround us, and only a little bit of God's blue sky can we see. The devil is in our midst. Clink of glasses and rattle of dice can be heard on nearly every side. All the wickedness of a mining camp is here. But here, too, are a few faithful ones; here at last we have a church, where in peace and quiet we can worship—we have our Bible and its promises, we have the Holy Ghost, we have God. The Sun of Righteousness is rising. We pray too, that erelong He may be high enough toward the zenith of His glory for His beams of blessing to fall upon our little mountain-enclosed city, and to gilt it with a beauty and glory ne'er dreamed of here before—the beauty of righteousness and the glory of true holiness. We trust in God and know that our faith is well-founded. Amen!

TENDERFOOT.

No [redacted] can pray the Lord's prayer with his hands in his pockets. If there is any passage of Scripture that means for people to get to work in earnest it [redacted] that.

"Paying off Mother."

"Mother," said a little black-eyed boy of seven years, "when you get old and want someone to read to you, I will pay you off."

Little Alexander's mother had been in the habit of reading to him a good deal, and on this Sabbath-day she read to him for a long time out of the Bible and a Sabbath-school book. The child was just able to read a little himself, and the progress he was making doubtless suggested to him how he might, at some future time, return in kind all his mother's cares. "I will pay you off, mother," said he, looking up into her face with childish satisfaction, as if a new thought from heaven had been sent down to light up the little world of his soul. His mother pressed him to her heart with a delight that seemed to say: "My dear son, I am more than paid off already."

But, children, you can never pay off your mother. Her thoughts of love and acts of affection are more in number than the days of life. How often she has nourished you, dressed you, kissed you, rocked you on her knee and in the cradle, carried you in her tender arms, watched over you in sleep, guided your infant steps, corrected at times your misdemeanors, thought of you in absence, and guarded your life in the unvarying remembrance of a mother's solicitude, and the free-will offerings of a mother's devotion! Ah, dear child, you can never "pay off mother."

Yes, there is one way—there is one way in which you can more than pay off mother. It is by loving Jesus Christ and his work and preparing for heaven. There Jesus dwells in glory, which communicates to the saints of all generations; that same Jesus who said: "Suffer little children to come unto me, and forbid them not, for of such is the kingdom of heaven." Come, little children, come to Jesus Christ! Come, my child, and pay off mother by praising God with her in heaven.—Christian Guardian.

RECEIPTS.

No. 1. How to cure indifference to church work.

Pray every day for the success of the church, and give liberally to sustain it. This has been known to cure even chronic cases.

No. 2. How to cure stinginess.

By giving just as much as you can next Sunday; increase the dose each Sunday following, until you find the dollars slipping out of your fingers into the basket easier and more freely than pennies did before it. Try it.

No. 3. How each person can make church services more interesting.

By being interested enough in the work to pray every day during the week, that the preacher may preach well, and that the congregation may hear well.

No. 4. How to destroy the song service, or make it uninteresting.

Be sure that the singers never meet to practice. Don't forget to always find fault with the leader. Let number three tell all the rest; how exceeding harsh number one's voice is. Let number five tell how nervous it makes her to hear number two, because she never gets the time. Be sure that plans are so arranged that some fault will be found of every one who sings. Don't forget to have some one of your number laugh and draw the attention of the entire congregation just before the song.

We warrant the above receipts, if well observed, to never fail.

How Talmage was Converted.

You can take any man for Christ if you know how to get at him, writes Dr. Talmage in The Ladies' Home Journal. Truman Osborn, one of the evangelists who went through this country many years ago, had a wonderful art in the right direction. He came to my father's house one day, and while we were all seated in the room, he said: "Mr. Talmage, are all your children Christians?" Father said: "Yes, all but De Witt.' Then Truman Osborn looked down into the fireplace, and began to tell a story of a storm that came on the mountains, and all the sheep were in the fold; but there was one lamb outside that perished in the storm. Had he looked me in the eye I should have been angered when he told that story; but he looked into the fireplace, and it was so pathetically and beautifully done that I never found any peace until I was sure I was inside the fold, where the other sheep' were. ——o——

Baby Minded.

Dr. Cuyler says to young men; "Don't ask to be everlastingly amused; it is the sign of a babymind when a young men cares for nothing but fun and frolic." If this be so there must be a large number of "baby-minds" in our churches. Why else this asking by young and old people in the church to be "everlasting amused?" "Where were you last Sunday?" "Oh, our sermons are so uninteresting I went elsewhere." "Where were you last prayer meeting night?" "Oh, our meetings are so dull that I went where they have more life." What is this but a demand for spiritual amusement? The preacher, the official brethren, and the other members must get up something to keep you amused or you will soon absent yourself. Your "baby-mind" cannot content itself in its own church unless it is "everlastingly amused."

Why don't you provide some religious amusement for your pastor, your official brethren and the other members? Start a hymn, tell your experience, lead in prayer, do all you can to make things lively and happy and attractive in your own church, and then neither you nor anybody else will feel like absenting yourselves; perhaps if you provide a little religious amusement yourself, you will not need to depend so much on others for it. Let each contribute his part towards happiness in the church. ——o——

People who stay out of the church because there are so many hypocrites in it, couldn't do anything to please the devil better.

Where to find Heaven.

There was a Methodist preacher who preached one day on heaven. The next morning he was going down town and he met one of his old, wealthy members. This old fellow met the preacher and he said: "Pastor you preached a good sermon about heaven. You told me all about heaven, but you never told me where heaven is." "Ah," said the pastor, I am glad of the opportunity this morning. I have just come from the hill-top yonder. In that cottage there is a member of your church. She is sick in bed with fever; her two little children are sick in the other bed, and she has not got a bit of coal or a stick of wood, or flour or sugar or any bread. If you will go down town and buy fifty dollars' worth of things, nice provisions, and send them up to her, and then go up there and say, 'My sister, I have brought these nice provisions in the name of our Lord and Saviour;' if you ask for a Bible, and you read the twenty-third Psalm, and you then get down on your knees and pray,—if you don't see heaven before you get al through I'll pay the bill." The next morning he said, "Pastor, I saw heaven, and I spent fifteen minutes in heaven as certainly as you are listening."

Keeping Back Part of the Price.

It is related of a chief of an Irish clan that when he came to be baptized, centuries ago, he held up out of the water his right hand. When asked what that act meant, he replied that he withheld that member from God's service, that with it he might war against hostile clans. With scarcely less folly do some Christians hold back part of their money, their time, or influence, from God, and think that he will accept the rest. He wants all, or none at all. To be a faithful follower of Jesus we must allow nothing to come between us and Him.

A soldier who went to war took with him some of the small instruments of his craft—he was a watch-tinker—thinking to make some extra shillings now and then while in camp. He did so. He found plenty of puttering, and almost forgot that he was a soldier, so that one day, when ordered off on some duty, he exclaimed, "Why, how can I go? I've got ten watches to mend!" Some Christians are so absorbed in self-seeking that they are ready to say to the Master's call, "I pray thee have me excused!" They are nominally soldiers of Christ, but really they are only watch-tinkers—they keep back part of the price.—Christian Visitor.

THANKSGIVING DAY.

Thursday, the 26th of November, will soon be here. This annual religious festival (it should be such at least), has come to be a permanent institution in the United States. It was first suggested by the Hebrew Feast of tabernacles, or "feast of ingathering at the end of the year." The occasional observance of a day of thanksgiving, we are told, recommended by the civil authorities, was not unusual in Europe hundreds of years ago. In Leyden, Holland, such a day was observed Oct. 3,1575, which was the first anniversary of the deliverance of the city from the foes that environed it. After the first harvest of the colonists at Plymouth, in 1621, Governor Bradford sent four men out fowling that they "might after a more special manner rejoice together." In July, 1623, a day of fasting and prayer was appointed on account of drought. Rain came in abundance while they were praying, and a day of thanksgiving was appointed and observed with appropriate religious services. By the year 1680, they came to be common in New England, and were usually observed in the fall of the year. Dr. Franklin says, that once in a time of great despondency among the first settlers of New England, a fast day was proposed, when an old farmer arose, reproached them for their loud complaints which, he said, "were enough to provoke high heaven; reviewed their multiplied mercies and blessings and urged that instead of a fast day they should appoint a day of thanksgiving.

Occasional days of thanksgiving were appointed by the Dutch governors of New Netherland from 1644 to 1664,and by the English governors of N. Y.,in 1755 and 1760. During the revolutionary war the observance of such a day was annually recommended by Congress, and President Washington issued thanksgiving proclamations in 1789 and 95, and President Madison recommended a day of thanksgiving for peace with Great Britain in 1815.

The prayer-book of the Protestant Episcopal church for 1788, says the American Encyclopedia, recommends the first Thursday in November, unless another day be appointed by the civil authorities. The day was not regularly observed in New York till 1817. In 1855 Governor Johnson, of Virginia, recommended the observance of such a day, but in ' 57 Governor Wise refused to do so, claiming the absence of any right to interfere in religious matters. In 1858 such proclamations were issued by the governors of eight southern states. Special proclamations for Thanksgiving were issued by the President in '62 and '63, for victories gained; a national proclamation of the annual Thanksgiving in 1863-4, since which time such a proclamation has been issued annually by the President, as well as the governors of the various states and mayors of the principal cities, custom centering on the last Thursday in November.

It is quite reasonable to suppose that such occasions have been common among God-fearing people who were forming new settlements, or reforming old ones in the onward march of civilization, from the departure of the Israelities from Egypt down to the present time. One of the most notable events of the kind occurred about twenty-five hundred years ago, and is recorded in the eighth chapter of Nehemiah. The Jews had just returned from the Chaldean captivity. Under the wise direction of Nehemiah the walls of the Holy City,that had been broken down were rebuilt, and Jewish authority partially restored at the metropolis. The attention of the people was called to "the book of the law," which had been long neglected, and upon hearing it read and expounded by Ezra, the scribe, "who stood upon a pulpit of wood which they made for that purpose," were greatly grieved and wept on account of their sins. Doubtless their leader was gratified to see this evidence of true penitence and of loyalty in heart to God and their native land. But it was not necessary to mourn always. They must not continue to look on the dark side. God had really been very merciful to them. They were delivered from their oppressors; the walls of their city rose around them once more, protecting their homes, their wives, their little ones—all that was dear unto them. The future was portentous, and it was an occasion for sending presents to the poor and a time for general thanksgiving.

Then he said unto them, "Go your way, eat the fat and drink the sweet, and send portions unto them for whom nothing is prepared: for this day is holy unto the Lord: neither be ye sorry: for the joy of the Lord is your strenyth.....And all the people went their way to eat and to drink and to send portions and to make great mirth, because they understood the words that had been delivered unto them." What governor or president has ever improved upon that proclamation, or what nation upon the manner of observing thanksgiving day? Nehemiah was a model ruler. He sought help from God, carried his relig ion into all his duties, and encouraged the people so to do. Doubtless their amusements and their mirth upon this occasion were all regulated by "the book of the law"—out of which they had been instructed.

Would that we could have more religion in all our fasts and feasts, in all the walks of life, and in all the affairs of our nation. We do not mean by religion merely the singing of hymns, the making long prayers, the wearing a long face, parading the streets, and boasting of our goodness, but we mean loyalty to God, to His word of truth, and the diffusion of the principles and spirit of truth, honesty, love and purity and gladness among men so as to become controlling factors in their lives, both public and private. It would make better business men, better homes, better communities and bring us into the practice of that "righteousness which exalteth a nation."

We have much to be thankful for. While the nations of Europe are burdened by standing armies in their midst, and constantly troubled with the rumors of war, we are at peace, both at home and abroad. We are blessed with abundant harvests, sufficient to feed our sixty millions of people, and send millions of bushels to the famine stricken regions across the sea. A good degree of prosperity abounds throughout our land.

Then, on this day, let us leave our secular business and gather in homes, churches, or in country school-houses, and let songs of thanksgiving and praise go up from sixty millions of grateful hearts,scattered through gorge and glen, over hill and dale, prairie and plain, from the Atlantic to the Pacific, to the All—Father above who hath done such great things for us. "O, give thanks unto the Lord; for he is good; for his mercy endureth forever."

ABOUT THE WORKERS.

—Be sure to read the letter from "A Stranger in Japan." Brother W. A. Davis is one of Missouri's best and truest young men. We first met him at Gallatin, three years ago. At that time he felt the call to go to a foreign field. A little more than a year ago he buried the wife of his heart, formerly the beautiful, accomplished and consecrated Ada Forster, and last summer he was accepted by the Board and sent to the inviting field of Japan. We are glad that he remembers the "Montana Methodist,"and we trust that his consecration may be complete and his labors abundantly owned and blessed. May his earnest words stir up our minds by way of remembrance. While we are strongly in favor of doing more for home missions than we are doing, as a church, yet we cannot, must not, neglect our duty to the heathen who have never heard of Christ.

—Brother St. Clair comes with another hallelujah note. Well, when he says hallelujah he feels it and means every word of it. There is no sham. It just swells up from the heart like the gurgling of a pure stream. We were impressed with his remark, "the revival fires are ready to burst out." It is well when they are of this kind—commence in the hearts and homes of our preachers and people and then "burst out," just as on the day of Pentecost. May the Lord send us more of this kind.

—Brother J. T. Smith, who writes from Kansas, was "imported" from Virginia a year ago. He is deeply in earnest, and is devoting his means as well as his time and strength to the work there. The mother of the young man to whom he refers, was happily converted and shouted aloud the praise of God while kneeling at a real "mourners' bench,"with many others, at a revival meeting we held in a log-cabin on Blue river, in Western Kansas, in the spring of 1868. It was our first circuit, our first revival, the extreme western frontier of the Missouri Conference, and more than fifty miles from another traveling preacher. The mother was afterwards taken to heaven in a chariot of fire, shouting as she went. The boy, like Samuel, was lent to the Lord, who now claims His own. Are we, as parents, and as church members, doing our whole duty in consecrating our children to the Lord, to be used by Him in carrying forward His work?

any branch of the church! We are glad to know that they are striving to "hold the fort." We trust that they are holding prayer and class-meetings. Such exercise is very wholesome to Christian soldiers and serves to keep the armor bright while the captain of the hosts is away. In the meantime let the entire church, both East and West, unite in praying the Lord of the harvest to send forth more laborers into these outlying fields.

--In a private letter written to the editor some time ago, Brother H. B. Terry remarked: "Brother Mounce is with me to-night at my home (Bro. Eakins). We had a very precious family service. I read the second of Galatians. Bro. M. led in one of his most earnest prayers, and I sang "When our work is ended," etc. I delight to have the communion of such men and their families." Who would not enjoy such Christian fellowship? Would that it characterized more of the homes of our mountain land. We have seen the day when we would travel a long distance to enjoy such a treat as that mentioned by Brother Terry.

—Brother Squires calls attention to the fact that the grave of Brother W. H. Maxfield in the cemetery at Butte City has no tombstone over it; that some money has been raised for the purpose of procuring one, and is now in the hands of Mrs. J. W. Kemper, and he suggests that an effort be made to collect the full amount necessary and have the stone put in place. But the grave of Bro. G. O. Hilton, near Corvallis, is in the same condition, only the remains will have to be removed and placed in a regular cemetery. The matter ought to have been attended to sooner. It is a shame for us thus to neglect our dead. We suggest, however, that it might be more satisfactory for the Annual Conference to take the matter in hand at its next session. Let a committee, or committees, be appointed to procure the tombstones, with appropriate inscriptions, collect the money and have the work properly performed. It will be no trouble to raise the funds. Both of these brethren fell at their posts very soon after coming to Montana, one (Brother Hilton) in 1872, the other, (Brother Maxfield in 1884.

—We were deeply pained to learn that Sister William Thompson, one of the stand-bys in our church at Butte City, has recently been so near the other world. She has about recovered now. She was sick for four or five weeks.

—Brother W. R. Cain is one of the solid men of the Western Conference. We have known him for a long time, and fully appreciate his friendship for us, here in the West. May he have a ripe and happy old age, and a still brighter and happier home up yonder.

—We recently had a cheery note from our old colleague. Rev. G. J. Warren, asking that his paper be changed from Fulton to Carrolton, Mo., where he is now stationed. He regrets seeing so little of us at Conference. Well, we have found that Conference is a poor place for social intercourse, especially between an editor who is working for his paper, and a missionary treasurer who is being interviewed by one hundred and fifty preachers as nearly at the same time as possible. But we saw him long enough to get a dollar for the "Methodist!" We are glad to know that our old comrade is coming to be numbered among the strong and influential men of the Conference. May his shadow never grow less.

NEWS AND NOTES.

—Gallatin Valley, Montana, produced this year 2,500,000 of grain, of which about 1,500,000 bushels is oats; 750,000 bushels wheat, and 250,000 bushels barley. Oats and barley sell for about a cent per pound, while wheat is bringing 65 cents per bushel.

—At the time of this writing news come that Major McKinley, the Republican candidate, has been elected governor of Ohio, and Mr. Flower, Democratic candidate, governor of New York.

—See the new advertisement of the State Savings Bank at Butte, Montana. Its board of directors contain some of the solid men of the Silver City.

—Do not forget our friends, the Davidson Grocery Co., at Butte City, whose card appears in this issue. They will make it to the interest of outsiders to call and see them, or send orders.

—The weather is delightful in our state, though the snowy mantle is dropping lower and lower on the mountains, reminding us of the approach of winter.

—As fast as we can get time to write them, we are notifying our friends, by letter and card, of their financial standing with the "Methodist." It is no small matter to write and address six or eight hundred letters, and we hope we will be saved the trouble of writing twice. Please send in the amount of your subscription for one year without delay, and try and get another subscriber to send with it.

A GOOD NEWSPAPER.

The Helena weekly Independent, enlarged and improved by the addition of new features, is certainly one of the best secular weeklies of the country. The youth's department alone makes it invaluable in every household where there are children. Every number consists of twelve pages of seven columns each, an amount of reading matter furnished by few newspapers in the country. The publishers offer a fine premium to the boys and girls who secure subscribers, in a free ticket to the World's Fair. The subscription price is only $2 a year, for which sum the paper will be sent till Jan. 1, 1892.

RANTISM RUN MAD.

We were recently shown a copy of a paper called the "Christian Leader," published at Cincinnati, Ohio, dated July 21, 1891, with a letter in it claiming to give an account of a sermon preached and the services conducted by L. B. Stateler in the Disciple church at Corvallis, on the 14th of last June. It is a rare production and must give pain to every Christian man and woman acquainted with the facts in the case, coming, as it does, from a minister of a "so-called Christian church" (we quote his own words), and who has preached in a Methodist house of worship regularly for months, and even years, and shared the hospitality of Methodist homes times without number. His mind is either woefully blinded, or else there is a willful perversion of facts, by which false impressions are made concerning both the members of both his own church and also the Methodists. He censures the pastor of the Disciple church (J. Seaton, now at Bozeman), and a leading layman wh m he styles "the vicegerent, or the one that lords it over God's heritage," for tendering the house built for Christians to worship in to the Methodists, without further consideration, while those who believe in just what the apostles taught and practiced had actually to be bored with a Methodistic harangue for an hour and a half." The punishment consisted partly of a sermon on spiritual Christianity, as taught by the Savior in his language about the living water, spoken to the woman of Samaria at the well; the witnessing a baptismal service; being compelled to join with the Methodists in partaking of the Lord's Supper; and above all, hearing his pastor compliment the sermon, as did many others, and show his indorsement of it by "actually "taking up a collection for the bishop."

The writer pretends to publish the baptismal service in full, putting it in quotation marks, as though it were taken as it fell from the lips of the officiating minister, or was copied from the Discipline, "a book that looked a little like a small Testament," the reading of which he characterizes as "doubtless the last will and testament of John Wesley." If this were true, common honesty, and respect for the dead would require that he be correctly quoted, But this is denied. The words put into the mouth of the officiating minister are found in no Methodist discipline on earth, were never used by a Methodist preacher, and could have been originated only by some mind of the Holliss stamp. For instance, the minister is made to say in his prayer, "Sanctify this water for this holy sacrament, and grant that this child now to be rantized," etc., and, "I rantize thee in the name," etc. And in his address to the parents, "Ye shall provide that he shall read the Methodist Discipline, and learn the twenty-six articles of faith, the Ten Commandments and Methodist creed [well, that would be better, anyhow, we think than one written by A. Campbell,] the catechism, and all other things whi h a Methodist ought to know and believe, [pity, the writer did not know and believe more of it. He would not bear false witness against his neighbor] to be a good Methodist, remembering always that rantism doth represent to us that inward purity which disposeth us to follow the example of our leader, John Wesley, and as he died and did not rise again, so shall we who are rantized. Do you, therefore, solemnly engage to fulfill these duties, so far as in you lies, the Lord being your helper?" This is rantism run mad.

The writer would falsify and belittle the Methodist people for following the leadership of John Wesley, yet he deplores the fact that the "so-called Christian church is a great deal nearer to sectarianism than it was in the days of Campbell, Stone and other leading lights." Yes, that's it, "leading lights"—rather a leading light, and now that this "light" is gone the writer looks into the future and says, "I see the handwriting on the wall, the interpretation of which is, 'Thy people, O God, have left thy house and gone off after other gods.'"

The letter, as a whole, is a literary curiosity, as well as an illustration and powerful argument in support of the doctrine of depravity as taught by the Methodists. Why people will write, and editors publish, such articles as the one from which these extracts are taken is a mystery. It contains positive untruths, and is altogether unchristian and unkind. We do not object to criticism, if it is in the right spirit. Methodism has flourished in the face of it—grown from a handful to a mighty host in a century and a half. But misrepresentation is always to be deplored. Such tactics betray conscious weakness, and injure the author's cause more than they help it.

The pastor of the Disciple church at Corvallis had used our church at Stevensville, and with his congregation, was ready to return the compliment, doing so most cordially. There was no compromise of principle, but simply a mutual exercise of Christian courtesy becoming to all those professing godliness, and a fraternal

Christian spirit prevailed throughout the service of the entire day.

If baptism is "for the remission of sins," our friends surely have a good subject near at hand in this ranting reformer, and if there is virtue in the quantity of the element used, surely "not the feet only," but also "the hands," "the head," and the heart, should be plunged beneath the yielding wave."

While we shall continne the exchange of courtesies with other Christian people and ministers who manifest a spirit of reciprocity; yet self-respect compels us to guard our church-houses against those who are so blinded by bigotry and prejudices as not to appreciate favors, and would so grossly misrepresent us before the world.

A Voice From Kansas.

DEAR BROTHER STANLEY:—Let a voice from Kansas, a voice from one who last year served a people you once served, and tried by the grace of God to "minister in heavenly things" to hearts that you once cheered by the hope of the Gospel. It is a strange coincidence, my dear brother, that I am this year to travel some of the same paths that must be yet familiar to you [yes, you are right on our track, first on Big Blue river, where they used to "break the boys in"—and seem to keep up the practice—and then on the Grasshopper.—Editor.], and speak to some of the same people that have in days past listened to you. Would it cheer your heart to hear a few of the names that must linger in your memory? The Carpenters, the Graggs, the Kelleys, and others, not only remember your name and your face, but also the very words you uttered. [We remember them with much affection, and would be delighted to see their faces in the flesh once more.—Edt] One good sister wept when I told her that I had seen you and heard you preach at Conference. Such are the experiences in the itinerancy. We meet and part—only a call at the way side inn of life's journey—and then we are gone, gone to minister to other hearts, gone to new fields to form new acquaintances, to cheer other lives, call sinners to repentance, and here and there to perform the last sad act of burying some fellow-creature who has paid the debt incumbent upon us all. How often is it that faces and forms dear to us, that once moved by our side, that we have not forgotten to follow in the other world seem to come back to us to cheer us and keep our hearts from the corroding influence of time. How sweet the memory, as we think of them within God's promises, and Christ's mercy, as being better, higher, purer, happier than when here.

But I started to tell you about my work. I arrived at my "new home" one week after Conference adjourned, and found I was to serve a good people, have a pleasant home, and with hopes of a prosperous year. My first quarterly conference has been held, but unfortunately for me I had only been one week on the charge, and of course was not acquainted with my people; but notwithstanding this we had a good meeting [It don't take good Methodists long to get acquainted—E l.]Every steward on the charge was present—something that does not often occur even in older conferences. Truly we are a paradox—"a big little Conference." My people seem encouraged and hopeful. I am at this writing in a protracted effort in the town of Effingham, preaching, praying and expecting. O for a good revival here, one of the old fashioned "altar-sweating and bench-pounding kind" that makes people happy and they shout! Not one of the mere stand-up and hand-shake kind. They only shake the sin down deeper in the heart, giving room for more. But we want a revival that is radical, that strikes at the very root of sin lodged in the heart, and tears it out, sending it and its cohorts howling with defeat down to the shades of hades, that the penitent may be a "new creature." O my God help me to preach that souls may be saved.

Brother Stanley, and brethren in the ministry, let us in the midst of difficulties strive on, "looking unto to Jesus, the author and finisher of our faith."

The "Montana Methodist" comes to me regularly here. It is a nice, newsy sheet, full of Gospel truths, that inspire hope. I am so glad that I became a subscriber for it, and I hope it may live over every restriction to cheer the hearts of its many readers, to encourage the brethren, and to bless the church.

A Stranger in Japan.

Having been in this inviting mission field but a month, I have hardly opened my eyes to the real state of the work; but there are facts which are apparent even to the stranger. Though first impressions are often erroneous, they are often more accurate than those which come later, when familiarity with the ways of a people makes one forget their peculiarities.

The first thought that impresses me, is that the missionary is still much needed in Japan. Truly the Lord has done great things for Japan, but we feel assured that what has been done is but an earnest of that which is to follow. Wherever the true missionary has gone with his heart burdened for the salvation of the souls of these people his highest hopes have been realized. Indeed the work has progressed so rapidly that many are beginning to feel that Japan is no longer a mission field. They forget that a few thousand native Christians, who have themselves been but recently brought from the darkness of heathenism, can have but little influence in shaping the character of this great empire of forty million people. There are many thousands in Japan who have never so much as heard of Christ; there are many who have heard of Christianity, and are longing to know the truth of the Gospel; there are others—oh, how sad!—who have heard of the Gospel only from the pen of those who would oppose it. There are many towns where the messenger of the Gospel has never gone. These towns must be taken for God; these souls must be pointed to the fountain of living waters. A great deal of this work should, and doubtless will be done by the Japanese, but we must not expect too much of them. They are human, just the same as Christians at home, and we should not expect—though perhaps in this our expectation may be surpassed—that a larger proportion of them should be active workers. Besides, even those who are workers need a steadier hand to guide them. The Japanese in my short acquaintance with them remind me of children. The officers in their foreign dress remind me of a boy in his first pantaloons, the merchants remind me of the boy playing at merchandise, and the student is as the child hearing for the first time some of the great truths of science. Their minds are just unfolding to receive the truth of the Gospel, and are more capable of receiving than imparting truth. There seems to be a great tendency to be led off into false doctrines. There are plenty of foreigners here to suggest them. I heard recently of a very sad case. A number of young men had heard of Christ and sought a minister to teach them. Soon they accepted Christ as their Savior, and a little church was organized in their town. They were very zealous and worked energetically both to learn more and to increase their number. Presently one received a Unitarian paper; he reported to the others that he had learned something new about Christianity, and so they set to work to study this new phase of Christianity. The result is: that flourishing church has been broken up. If they had had a guiding hand in their study and work, what a power they might yet be for God. A great deal is lost because there are not enough missionaries stationed in these important places to hold that work which is begun. We should not get discouraged by such cases as this, but should remember that the sun has just arisen in Japan; that the church is in her infancy; that the Christians are just beginning to walk and speak and think.

Idolatry is not yet driven from Japan. In company with a friend I visited, some days ago, a famous temple, about five miles from Kobe. It is called by the foreigners the "Temple of the moon." One must walk up a very steep and high mountain to reach it. I don't know how high it is, but before I got to the temple, somewhere this side of the moon, I had sufficient time for reflection to decide never to take the trip again except for the benefit or pleasure of others. I sympathize with those who think it their duty to go there to worship. If there could be any virtue in the labor of getting to the place of worship, surely that temple is in a good place. I thought how few people in America would go to church under such difficulties. This temple does not lack votaries, the road up the mountain is strewn thick with men, women, and children. Many seem hardly equal to the task, but they persevere. After we get within about fifty or seventy-five feet of the temple, the mountain is terraced and furnished with nice steps. From the top of these steps we looked down upon the fertile plain, covered with a rich harvest of rice, and the beautiful inland sea reflecting the light of the sun. Here we can behold the beauties of nature and stand rapt in awe and delight, and wish for the language of the poet that we might transfer our pleasure to others; but our wish is not granted. We turn then to look upon a scene which made our hearts ache and caused us to long to be "workers together with God" in bringing these people to the cross. Many have reached the sacred spot before us and were deeply engaged in worship. I see the worshiper walk into the porch and ring the gong, then bow and pray, then cast a little money into a box and then go on to another part of the temple to some other idol or to another shrine (there are about six separate buildings, very much on the same style but of different sizes). Here in a corner a man is on his knees, apparently repeating over and over the same words. Just inside that door is a woman sitting on the floor singing (as the Japanese call it.) As she sings she pounds lustily upon an idol with a muffled drumstick and occasionally strikes a clearly ringing gong. An old man walks up to an idol, clasps his hands and bows, and throws into a box either some money or some rice. He then rubs the idol on the head and then rubs his head; he then rubs the shoulders, then his shoulders; and so on, where ever he has pain or disease. Many others followed his example. All these people seemed to be dreadfully in earnest, but they were no better, no wiser, no happier than before they worshiped. What a comment on "Sounding brass" and "Tinkling cymbal." I went down from this place with a sad heart and with a greater desire than ever to preach the Gospel of love to this people groping in the darkness of heathenism.

Christians of America, we need your prayers and sympathy in this great work.

Yours fraternally,
W. A. Davis.

CHURCH NEWS.

WHITEHALL.

E. G. Brooke, of Whitehall, sends five dollars to renew several subscriptions and pay for one new subscription to the paper and says, "We all like the Methodist. We cannot get along without it, and must sustain it. I am glad to know that brother Britt is greatly liked all over his extensive field. His circuit embraces Willow Creek, South Boulder, Whitehall, Fish Creek and Waterloo, and extends into three counties. His congregations are increasing."

DEER LODGE.

S. B. Tabor: Our second quarterly meeting has just closed. The services continued from Wednesday till Sunday night. Bro. Couey preached five stirring sermons. The Holy Spirit was present at every service. The church was well represented on fast day at the morning prayer meeting. (That was Methodistic—Editor.) The quarterly love feast was a gracious occasion (no wonder, after such a preparation for it—Editor.) We commence the work of another year with renewed strength.

FROM PENDLETON.

R. G. Isbell: I have received no members, but have lettered eight, and one has died. Bro. W. H. Hodges and wife were with us last Sunday on their way to Spokane Station. He preached us two good Gospel sermons, simple and true to the mark. He was the fourth new preacher in Pendleton on last Sunday, all advertised but him; but from what I have been able to learn he had as many to hear him as any of the other three. We welcome Bro. Hodges and Sister Hodges to our Conference. Bro. Shelton and family have just called on their way to Dayton, so we welcome them, too. God bless them in their new field. (This is why we have heard nothing from either of those places. Let reports be forthcoming—Editor.)

BUTTE.

The editor made a flying trip to this place recently. Bro. Squires and family had just returned from Bozeman, but the pulpit had been filled regularly, congregations good, a wedding at the church on the Sunday night previous, Bro. J. Underwood and his handsome bride, and the church work in a hopeful condition. Brother Squires is chairman of the Executive Committee in charge of the reading room established during the Murphy Meetings. The work is a decided success. Twenty to fifty men are at the rooms nearly every hour of the day. A chapel is in connection therewith, and they will soon have bath-rooms and a lunch stand, and hope in time to make it self-supporting. This affords our pastor a fine opportunity to get acquainted with the young men, and is drawing not a few of them to our church.

BOZEMAN.

We spent a day with Bro. Goulder, visiting among the people, looking after the interests of the Methodist, and worshiping twice with his congregation at 3 p. m. and at night. There had been about five professions of faith in Christ, and some additions, and our cause placed on higher and stronger ground. We were pleased to meet our old-time friends, Dr. Hunter and wife, Mrs. Pease and others whom we have known for many years. Bro. Goulder is in favor with the people, has a fine Sunday-school, a good Epworth League, and is in good heart. It was a pleasure to preach to the congregation, though we regretted the necessity of leaving, as we had arrived, "between two days."

BOZEMAN CIRCUIT.

We met with Bro Warren at Bozeman. As usual, he is enthusiastic about his work. Having been unexpectedly called upon to give up his hired house, and being unable to find a suitable house in Bozeman or elsewhere, though he searched for four days, he was compelled to build, which he did, at Belgrade, at a cost of $650. He is now in the new parsonage. It has five rooms. Mr. Quaw kindly waits on them one year for the lumber, the bill amounting to $300. Doubtless our Parsonage Society will render some assistance in paying for it. Bro. Warren reports an extensive field in the Shield's river county—large settlements that are unsupplied and are calling for the Gospel. We suppose he is holding a meeting there at this writing. It is about 70 miles from the main portion of his work. Bro. W. will traverse it if any one can. He did not grow so tall for nothing. He, too, is in good heart concerning the outlook.

STEVENSVILLE.

The pastor, Bro. Parnall, at this writing, is assisting Bro. Lee in a meeting at Demersville, and the editor is in charge during his absence. What more desirable position or higher honor need a man crave than that of a faithful Methodist circuit preacher. It is just by this kind of work, in a large measure, that twenty-five millions of living men and women have been won to the Methodist faith—counted as adherents.

FROM FALLS CITY, NEBRASKA

Dear Bro. Stanley: I send you a subscriber to the Montana Methodist and draft for one dollar to pay for it. I have been a reader of your spicy little paper almost from its commencement. I said "little." I meant in size, but big in its contents. I have been a constant reader of all your communications, also of those by Bro. Stateler to the St. Louis and Nashville Advocates ever since you both went to the mountains. I was at Leavenworth as a lay delegate when the Western Conference was organized, and consequently have great love and sympathy for any one that was once a member of said Conference. I have seen so much of the brave little band that constitutes the Montana Conference that I feel like I knew everyone of you. I am now past seventy years old, and I feel just like if I was young. Montana would be sure to get me. My prayers are with you. May God bless you and make you a thousand times more than you now are, is the prayer of one who loves you and your work.

W. R. Cain.

FROM MILES, WASH.

Seeing nothing in your paper from this part of the country, I thought a word migh be said, as we have some members here that are still living in hope of a better day coming. We have no preachers here of either branch of the Church at present They have called off from this work and left a handful of members alone to take care of themselves. But the Lord will provide for his own. It looks hard for old members who have lived here eight or ten years and stemmed the storms of a new country to be treated thus. May the Lord's will be done. We will try to "hold the fort", until we are re enforced, let it be soon or late. Let the prayers of the Church be, to send help to this place. We need it. May the good Lord be with us until the end, and then we can say, "Deliverance has come." Brethren, pray for us.

A member,
John Farmer.

FROM FAIRVIEW, WASH.

Dear Bro. Stanley:—Your paper comes to our home, as a welcome friend, read and appreciated by all. I would be glad to know that every home in the bounds of the East Columbia Conference could say the same. Our hearts are cheered; our hopes are made brighter by the news it brings of the faithful work done and victories won by the ministers of our beloved Zion in the home Conference. Messages of good cheer from some we have known and loved "for their very works' sake."

We trust we have a pardonable pride in the advancement of the church work in the last eight years. Knowing some of those, who bore the burden in the heat of the day, and in "times that tried men's souls;" we rejoice with them in the present and future prospects of the church in this country. Given a few more such self-sacrificing and God-fearing men as R. C. Oglesby, J. W. Compton and others in the pulpit and on the Conference floor; and faithful men and women in the prayer and class room, and the church will move out of the wilderness and Methodism will take a front rank. Bro. Oglesby is a native pioneer preacher who went up from the itinerant ranks to the presiding eldership, filling that office faithfully for eight years. He bears the mark of 30 years of toil and labor over the hills and mountains of Oregon, in the Master's service. We have listened with reverence as he told us of his travels, of long journeys across the then thinly populated country, traveling in all ways, through storm and sunshine alike, wondering if there would ever be in his time a wayside Christian home, in which he might get rest and refreshment. Thanks be to that God, whom he served all those thirty years; he found several such homes ere he left us, to go to Eastern Oregon. He lingers in our memory; he has a place in our hearts; and one day we hope to meet him inside the pearly gates.

While we honor and revere the pioneer preachers, let us not forget these who come often. We have heard much of the "transfer," some have fallen by the way, deserted the Lord's work for more lucrative employments; but who dares to say anything against Compton's faithfulness, or the new transfers, some of whom we know: Terry Hornbuckle and St. Clair and others who have come to the very front with undaunted courage to meet the enemy in his strong hold. They come in the spirit of the Master; their hearts filled with the love of God and their fellow men, offering them pardon and salvation on the easy terms of the Bible, faith in the Lord Jesus Christ. Their works speak their praise.

MRS. T. S. PRIEST.

An Important Matter.

Having been in attendance upon the stated meeting of the Board of Church Extension, Oct. 1, 1891, it has seemed proper that a word be said to the Church by us on behalf of this work. Much has been accomplished by this arm of our service. Since 1882, when it was organized, the Board has received into its treasury from all sources $504,990.83. (This embraces the receipts up to Oct. 1, 1891.) They have disbursed this money in 2,216 appropriations: donations, 1,821; loans, 107, and parsonage, 288. These have been scattered throughout every Conference in the Connection, in 31 States and Territories, and the Republic of Mexico.

This work stands at the highest vindication of the wisdom of the General Conference in organizing it. The exhibit of the Board exceeds the expectations of its most hopeful friends. And yet the Church is not doing what this interest demands, and what her ability justifies us in asking her to do.

The reports from the Conference Boards show a steady increase in the amount of collections. Nearly every Conference held so far this year reports larger contributions than last year, but there are some exceptions. There are strong Conferences which have been the beneficiaries of this Board in large amounts which are falling behind last year's figures. And it is a noticeable fact that there are some hundreds of charges in the Connection which report no collection for this cause. Some of these are mission charges, but by no means all. We learn with regret that there are large circuits and strong stations whose reports in this column are blank.

It can hardly be true that our people do not appreciate the importance of this work. It is a matter so necessary and so palpable that all ought to see it, if it be brought to their notice. It seems strange that our preachers would not be interested in this collection, since it lies so close to their work, and, besides, they are obliged to it by the most solemn promises. If collections had been taken and were very small, there would be room to doubt where the fault lies, but when no collections have been taken we are forced to conclude that the preacher has failed in his duty.

We suggest to our preachers everywhere that they inform themselves of the work of this Board, and that it be made a part of their regular, prayerful, and heart-felt ministry. There is not in the Church's service an arm that is more needed, and that, with God's blessing, may be made more efficient for good.

Patagonia.—There has been little mission work accomplished in Patagonia, but the Roman Catholics have a mission centre at Viedma, in the southern part of the country. They have twelve colleges with 5,000 students, and an industrial school with thirty apprentices of carpenters, blacksmiths, boot-makers, tinkers and tailors. They have also a dispensary and the only hospital in the territory.

THE FATHER'S PRAYER.

Lord, though his sins were scarlet,
And he went far astray,
These long years have I prayed Thee
Show him the narrow way.

Though with the swine he feasted,
O! bring him back to Thee;
My youngest born. O! save him,
Wherever he may be.

The only prayer now left me
Is, Lord, that Thou wouldst turn
His heart to Thee in sorrow.
Thus, Lord, that he might learn:

Though sin may not come nigh Thee,
The sinner may find grace;
If he repents him truly,
Thou wilt not hide Thy face.

For years, Lord, has he wander'd;
Let him arise and say:
"Against Thee have I sinned,
No longer here I stay.

"I will return unto Thee,
And at Thy feet will pray,
That, like the prodigal of old,
I be not turned away,"

It may be, Lord, that never
He will come home to me;
I dare not pray for that, Lord,
While he is far from Thee.

Yet, Lord, all things are possible,
And mighty is Thy grace;
It may be the day cometh
That I shall see his face.

The face of him who left me.
My youngest born, my pride;
There came a day I deem'd it
Far better he had died.

But now my prayer is only,
O Lord, Thy will be done;
It may be in Thy mercy
Thou wilt bring home my son.

Overgrown with Weeds.

"Some years ago, my wife planted a fine little Virginia creeper on the side-walk of our garden. We went away to Washington about the beginning of July and did not retnrn until the end of August. One of my wife's first visits on our return home was to the garden. She found it all overgrown with weeds, for they grow very fast in our warm climate, and the little creeper invisible. After some search, however we discovered it on the ground. It had grown greatly, and sent forth fifty or sixty little tendrils, each one twining itself arourd some object, here a coarse weed, there a beautiful flower, and again a stone.

At once we set it free from all encumbrances, and trained it heavenward, fastening it with pins. How is it that Christians striving to grow heavenward, hold on so fast as many do to some part of their old nature which hinders their growth in holiness? They lop off vulgar sins, but spare intellectual indulgencies which are often the most insidious and deadly of obstacles in the way of eminent piety: because they divert attention and the aspirations from Christ."

EDITORIAL.

Impure Literature.

By request we publish elsewhere the law of Montana with reference to the circulation of impure literature among children or persons under sixteen years of age. Doubtless our law-makers thought they were doing a good deed when they enacted it, and so they were. It is important to protect the youth of our land. But why stop here? Small-pox is as dangerous to grown people as to children and the contagion spreads from one class or among one class, just the same as the other. The yellow flag is hung out whether the patient be six, sixteen, or sixty-six, and, if necessary, the policeman, is just as persistent in prohibiting the man of forty from going too near it as the little child of seven. And so with this giant evil of impure and vicious literature. It is the great enemy of purity and virtue in the heart, in the home, in society, the church, the nation. It strikes its fangs deep into the vitals and poisons the life-blood of humanity, and particularly the young. Some of our leading men who have given the subject much careful thought, declare that this evil is doing more for the demoralization of humanity than that whisky-traffic. We are not prepared to dispute it. This demon works more quietly and slyly than that of intemperance, and in a manner that does not always provoke the same antagonism. Who can tell the mischief caused by an impure book or paper, or by looking at an obscene picture? It is like the "damps" in the well or the cellar, or the deadly miasma of the lowlands—a fume from the bottomless pit that blights and poisons, if it does not destroy, every life that it touches. How many who read these lines can speak from bitter experience of the injury done them by some corrupt publication put in their hands by an emissary of the devil. Two young men of culture met on the side-walk, and stood near the corner while one looked through a book loaned to him for a few moments. The reader handed it back and never saw it again, but the poison took effect. He grew to be a useful man, but cannot erase the impure thoughts awakened in that fifteen minutes, and says: "It is a thorn in my flesh, and still causes me great bitterness and anguish." Who has not had a similar experience?

Much of the crime, the intemperance and the misery in the land has its origin right here. This is a reading age, and the devil is working this mighty engine of destruction for all it is worth. It is alarming to think of the character and quantity of certain books and papers that are being industriously circulated in our schools, colleges, and homes. Every artful device that satanic ingenuity can invent is being used to scatter them far and wide. Thousands of them are under lock and key in homes of unsuspecting parents and guardians.

And while there are noble exceptions, yet many of our great dailies and weeklies enter too largely into the details of vice and crime. The scenes, the language, and the very atmosphere of the slums and dens of vice are too often carried by the morning, and also the Sunday morning paper to the breakfast table, the nursery and the drawing room. "We must cater to the tastes of the people," said the editor of a leading daily to the writer once. The love of fame and filthy lucre sends the reporter to scent the carrion and causes "the dead dogs of agitation and the swollen carcasses of crime and the offal of dirt and squalor to be thrust before the disgusted eyes and under the offended nostrils of an amazed and outraged people." A paper will often give several columns to the details of a scandal, a prize fight, a horse race or a hanging bee, and an eigth of a column to a General Conference or General Assembly, except when there is a debate on a controverted point, a trial for heresy, or a minister is arraigned for some irregularity; then perhaps a half column is devoted to the subject, with an editorial note to the effect that after all, ministers are human beings and men of like passions as other people. It will require several generations to rid our land of the curse of the widespread circulation of the Brooklyn scandal years ago.

The pictures in the albums upon the walls in our homes are educating our youth.

While we are not in harmony with some things urged by the W.C. T. U., yet we are glad that they are directing their energies against this monster vice. If ever there was a time when parents, guardians, and Christians shoud be on their guard at this point it is now.

"Finally, brethren, whatsoever things are true, whatsoever things are honest, whatsoever things are just, whatsoever things are pure, whatsoever things are lovely, whatsoever things are of good report, if there be any virtue and if there be any praise, think on these things."

About The Workers.

Rev. E. J. Grœneveld, pastor of the Presbyterian Church in Butte City, sends a remittance for the MONTANA METHODIST, and adds: "I have really enjoyed the reading of your paper, and I wish you much success in your editorial capacity, as well as in your other efforts you are making for Christ and our common cause."

We appreciate and heartily reciprocate these fraternal words from a brother with whom we have labored side by side in our common cause in the years that are past and gone. We wish our brother the greatest success in his field of labor.

—A note from Mrs. A. B. McCaleb, Salmon City, Idaho, enclosing one dollar and expressing her appreciation of the METHODIST and her determination to continue taking it, brings up memories of long-gone years and stirs mingled emotions within. We think of the long fatiguing journeys that we used to make from Whitehall, up the Jefferson and Beaumhead rivers, then over the mountains by Bannack City, up the Horse Prairie stream, then across the main range of the Rockies by a trail, often when the snow was from two to twenty feet deep and more than once was it quite doubtful as to whether we would make it through to the place where we were going to preach; and also preaching at every camp and community on the road where a dozen people could be gotten together. Neither have we forgotten the hospitality of the people living along the route, nor the times of refreshing that we enjoyed with the good people of Salmon City. Sister Mc——'s house was one of the preachers' homes. Although it was not possible for one church to occupy that field permanently, we rejoice that the good people are supplied with the Gospel, and that though we cannot now "go" in person, that we can "send" the MONTANA METHODIST.

—A note from Miss Adeli Downing, Louisville, Ky., says: "We were so charmed at our Annual Conference of our Parsonage Society, to have dear old Brother Stateler with us." We rejoice that our venerable Montana veteran is in such good hands while away from home, and trust that he may return in the spring with his youth renewed like the eagle's.

—A private letter from Bishop Hendrix, explaining how it is impossible for him to visit Montana this winter, contains the following: "I am glad that the Wallace church is done, and pray that it may be the spiritual birth-place of many souls. I wish you could have been at the Ecumenical. It was a memorable Conference for many things. I was glad to see Bro. Stateler looking so well and to meet Brother A. G. Clarke and wife."

—In a private letter, Rev. Sam. M. Chase, of Carpenteria, Cal., writes: "I like your paper. I have strong attachments for some of your men. Price, my classmate, and Squires the pastor of my boyhood days. God bless you all more and more." We will be glad to hear more at length from our brother in "the cottage by the sea."

—The secretaries of the Board of Missions have issued a call urging that a special effort be made throughout the entire Church, during Christmas week, to raise collections to apply on the debt. It was a happy thought. Let every preacher and member of our church make a Christmas gift to the Lord Jesus Christ, to help send his glorious Gospel to those now in heathen darkness.

—At the recent session of the World's convention of the W. C. T. U., held at Boston, Mrs. Theresa A. Jenkins reported for the legal department, making an earnest plea for the unrestricted enfranchisement of women. She said every state had reported progress. "A free ballot for women is the only question of the hour.'

There it is in a nut-shell. Such a confession would not have been made so public eight or ten years ago. We thought "Christian Temperance" was the main "question" with this "Union," but now the "only question of the hour" is a free ballot for woman. "Old Paul" can stand aside and the work of rescuing the perishing and caring for the dying can rest in obeyance while the question of the hour is taking our wives, mothers and sisters from the homes, the nurseries and hospitals, when they reign as queens and serve in their God-given sphere as ministering angels, comforting, educating and elevating the race as none else can, and as they can nowhere else, and forcing them into the political arena to join in the strife and confusion that prevails about the ballot-box. No, no; a thousand times no! They have too high and holy a calling to leave it, and come down to such employment; and if our sisters would only confine their efforts to their legitimate work of promoting Christian temperance, it would be much better for the cause of temperance, of Christianity, and of humanity in general.

—Sister Price, wife of Rev. D. B. Price, of Helena, has been quite sick, is improving slowly, and expects to start on a visit to her old home in Arkansas, early in December. Bro. Price was expected to preach the Thanksgiving sermon in Helena.

—From the Nashville Advocate we learn that Rev. L. B. Stateler has donated five thousand dollars to the Church Extension Board, to be used as a loan fund. He has already invested hundreds of dollars in donations to churches and parsonages in Montana, and to getting preachers out here and supporting them after they were here. We do not wonder that he should want something that would remain intact and continue to work long after he has passed to the better world.

—Some of our preachers from the hardest and most distant fields keep sending us renewals and new subscribers for the "Methodist." This makes us think that if all would make only a reasonable effort we might soon double our subscription list. Brother, you have endorsed the paper and resolved to sustain it. Why not carry that resolution into practice? Bring the paper before your congregations, introduce it into homes that you visit, talk it up, and write us the result before Christmas.

—News reach us of the death of Rev. R. Abbey, D. D. He has for many years been one of the prominent and strong men of the church.

A Strong Appeal.

In an appeal for help for his Training School for Missionary Workers at Chicago. Mr. Moody uses this strong and pertinent language:

To the Christian Public:

As one of your fellow-laborers in the kingdom of Christ, will you kindly permit me to address you on a subject in which I am sure you, as well as myself, are deeply interested? The cry of the perishing unreached by the Gospel is heard everywhere. In our own land, in the great cities, in towns and country districts; under the very shadows of churches, are multitudes hardly touched by the personal ministry of Christians. The pulpits cannot reach them. The regular ministry, though able and willing, are inadequate to the work of evangelizing these masses. The harvest is too great, and the laborers are too few. The Lord of the harvest must send forth more laborers. This surely the Master desires to do. He has laid the burden heavily on many hearts. From all directions come loud calls for reinforcements. The most earnest and industrious workers realize most fully the need of increasing their numbers, and are praying and laboring to accomplish it. I am persuaded that the time has fully come when a great host of earnest, spirit-baptized men and women must be thrust out into the field, whose chief qualifications for the work of soul-rescue are a knowledge and heart experience of the Word of God, a burning love for Christ and fellow-men, and the enduement of power from on high. Pastors, churches, missions, evangelists, are calling loudly for such workers. Letters of application are constantly pouring in upon me from all directions. If I had the trained workers, I could send them out into the field by hundreds. Is not this the pleading voice of the Master calling for laborers? Is it not a great crisis of opportunity and responsibility for the church of Christ?

How shall the call be answered? How shall the increasing demand for laborers be met? The Lord has put his spirit upon many young men and women, some of them but recently converted, most of them without early advantages of education, a majority of them poor, but with valuable dicipline and experience of hard labor, privation and struggle; and these men and women are standing before the churches as if in answer to the prayers for laborers, waiting for some Christian hand to help them into the field of service. They must have some preparation, some training, to do the work which the Lord has laid on their hearts. Where shall they get it?

Bishop Haygood on the Debt.

Of all the absurd things the absurdest is for such a Church as ours to be groaning over a little debt of $100,000 and some odd dollars. Unless, indeed, we were groaning over the right thing; the lack of liberality that made the debt possible and the dreadful hurt that comes to God's cause in calling a "halt" and "sounding the retreat" while a victorious advance column was breaking through the enemy's entrenchments. This "halt" is occasion for groaning, for a day of fasting and sack-cloth.

The way out is right before us: attend to the assessment and put a little earnestness into it. If special contributions, without discounting the year's collections, are made for the debt, well and good; may be better.

But as to my friend's card. He is not brilliant, but dead in earnest. He takes the trouble to inform himself on the subject of missions in general, and our missions in particular. He filled up with the theme and the facts, prayed God to help him, and turned himself—not his facts simply—loose on his people. They, although neither rich nor hitherto famous for giving to missions, raised their assessment and as much more.

When Napoleon's artillery and baggage-wagons "stalled" in crossing the Alps he called the head-master of bands and looked over his music. Selecting the most inspiriting pieces he gave orders that the "bands play." The very mules brayed, and Italy was won. So be it now.

What my friend who sent me the card did every preacher can do in his measure. All men have not his sense nor his fire, but every man can try, for once, to do his level best. If any man so shortens his own income by doing his best for missions that he starves to death, there is a good text for his funeral: "Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord." A Southern Methodist preacher who will not do his level best now to help the Board of Missions, do the work God calls it to do—move forward—should serve his church in one way certainly possible to him—locate, and have done with the pretense of being a leader of God's hosts. In time of war the best thing some officers can do is—to resign, "retire to their estates," and in safety criticise the campaign.

The Woman's Parsonage and Home Missionary Society.

A modest little pamphlet entitled, "The Fifth Annual Report of the Woman's Parsonage and Home Mission Society of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South," is on my table, and sets me to thinking. It is the development of an idea in the good woman's heart to provide homes for our preachers, and in that more limited form has borne fruit in many a charge that would still be without a parsonage save for this Society, which helps to build more than one a week throughout the year. It has helped to establish our work in many places, and by enlisting more than 7,000 women and children in working for others has done much to develop their Christian life.

In this distinctive work of aiding in the erection of parsonages our Church alone has been blessed with the organized efforts of the women. No other Church of which we have knowledge has been so favored. But worthy as is this specific work, the time had come in the judgment of the last General Conference to enlarge the operations of the Parsonage Society by adding to it the work of Home Missions, which might include all organized efforts on the part of the women of the Church, to increase the pastoral efficiency of the preachers by intelligent co-operation in Church work. Every wise pastor knows the value of co-operation on the part of the women of his Church in visiting, collecting the youth into the Sunday-school, caring for the sick and ministering to the needy. It is now proposed to unite these several pastor's aid societies under one general society for mutual help and more intelligent work. The payment of a small annual due into the general treasury constitutes any of these previously organized societies auxiliaries of the Woman's Parsonage and Home Missionary Society, and puts the local society in such relations to the whole Church as the better to plan and do its work by virtue of the fresh literature provided from time to time suggesting methods, showing results, etc.

It connectionalizes all the hitherto local societies which now, doing no less work in their own field, are prepared to aid in the general work as well. Every pastor who has a Pastor's Aid Society will find it wise to have it become an auxiliary of this general society, as helping to quicken the zeal of its female members and to increase their efficiency in Church work, even of a purely local character. Not only will it result in the building and equipment of many a parsonage, and in the building up of many Sunday-schools and congregations by looking after the youth and welcoming the stranger, but in mor earnest study of the Bible, in more intelligent care of the sick, in greater aptness in soul-winning. What an amount of work for the Master is possible to the Marys, Marthas, and Salomes of our day if intelligently organized and directed!

Within the limits of our Church are four cities with a population of over 200,000 souls; three others with a population of over 100,000; seven others with a population of over 50,000 and twenty-two containing more than 20,000 souls. In all of these cities we have a mission, as a Church, to the poor and needy, to the sick and the stranger. Some of these cities should employ a lady missionary specially trained for the work who might wisely lead in the necessary work to be done. Mr. Wesley understood the great service which such noble women as Hester Ann Rogers, Mrs. Fletcher, and others could do, and wisely availed himself of and directed their labors. May we not hope for a new era in our own beloved Church, as we see our noble women diligent in such labors as far as is consistent with their sacred home duties? May there not be some who would willingly devote their entire time to such work as their pastors may suggest?

The wise conservatism of our Church and people is a safeguard against any extremes in rendering our women more efficient in the changed conditions which come with large centers of population as fields of Christian work. It was in the heart of the noble founder of the Bible and Training School for Missionaries and other Christian workers to provide a place where under most competent instruction Christian women might be the better prepared as Sunday-school teachers, trained nurses, home missionaries, skilled in sacred music, both instrumental and vocal, and thus prove more valuable in all the work of the Church. Accordingly the Constitution of the Woman's Parsonage and Home Mission Society was placed in the corner stone of the Training School, as showing the interest felt and the hope that many trained workers would go out from its halls into the home field as well as the foreign field. "Help those women which labored with me in the Gospel." Without Lydia could Paul have planted the Church in Philippi?

ALONG THE LINE.

FROM LEWISTON, IDAHO.

Dear Brother Stanley:—Having just perused the columns of your welcome paper, the thought struck me that a few items from this corner of the Northwest would be of some interest to your readers. It will at least let them know that the fire still burns in Tammany Hollow, and was greatly revived by the soul-stirring sermons of our P. E., Rev. Reg B. Swift, the first Sunday of November, and Saturday before. It was the first service in our new church, and the largest congregation ever assembled at any of our meetings here. After service on Sunday the corner-stone was laid in which was placed a copy of the Bible, Discipline, Hymn Book, Nashville "Christian Advocate," St. Louis "Christian Advocate," "Montana Methodist," "Pacific Methodist," and a list of all the subscribers and amount subscribed for building the church. The Building Committee decided to seat it with chairs. We have it partly seated. The total cost so far is about $1,150, which exceeds all subscriptions about $100. We hope to finish seating it and pay all debts this year.

It is a great joy to my soul to know we have a house so near completed and paid for, for the service of the Lord. I feel that it is a monument erected with the inscription on it, "Road to Heaven." I feel that it is something permanently established for the cause of Christ here. It will ever stand as a guide-post to that upper and better kingdom for our posterity long after our bones have mouldered in the dust. We pray for the time when there will be such a monument standing in every community in the Northwest. (Amen, —Editor.) We find all over this country many places of business which, if they had the proper inscription written over the door, would be the road to destruction. Brothren and sisters the way to pull down such places is to raise monuments for Christ.

We have services every first and fourth Sunday, Sunday-school at 10 A. M. We have 56 scholars and six teachers on the roll.

Our pastor, Rev. H. B. Terry, is on Cammas Prairie, at this writing, filling his appointment at that place.

For fear of my letter being long enough to reach to the waste basket I will close. Success to the Editor and his paper. I think all who are interested in Southern Methodism in the Northwest should be a subscriber for the "Montana Methodist."

W. J. EAKIN.

HEPPNER, OREGON.

Our first quarterly meeting has just been held, and in every way was a blessing. The P. E. preached three earnest and edifying sermons. The pastor of the M. E. Church (north) closed his church, and with his congregation, united with us in the sacrament of the Lord's Supper. It was a "time of refreshing" to our waiting souls.

Our collections for support of the ministry and missions were about full. Our work is doing well; the people are spiritual and the pastor encouraged.

We are praying for a revival in Heppner; please join us in the prayer. The "Methodist" cheers my heart. May the blessing of the Lord continue with it. Amen!

P. M. BELL.

FROM WHITEHALL.

Dear Methodist:—There may be such a thing as a preacher being too busy to report his work to his conference paper, but, as a rule, if he doesn't report his work, it may be taken for granted that he is not doing anything. I assure you I have been busy, and I trust, only in the Lord's business. The results so far do not appear great. It is sowing, sowing sometimes with weeping, trusting for the time of joyful harvest to come by and by.

The improvements on our church at Willow Creek have been completed. With a solid foundation, new floor, and freshly papered walls, both the comfort and appearance of the house are greatly improved. We expect to begin a protracted meeting there on the fifth Sunday. May the faithful sowing of my predecessors yield its harvest then.

I have recently visited Harrison, Pony, and other places in the bounds of my work where they greatly need preaching and should have it. At Pony there are over three hundred people, and no regular preaching except by Bishop Brewer, of the Episcopal church, who pays them a regular visit once a year. I was treated most kindly there, had good sized congregations, and many invitations to return. There is abundant work for two men in the bounds of my circuit. We are not praying as we should to the Lord of the harvest to send forth laborers into his harvest.

Our little village was much agitated recently over the failure of a butcher shop. Some one said it created more excitement than the failure of a bank would in some places. Yes, it came near home to a good many. (How we are impressed with the great wickedness of dishonesty when we are injured by it personally.) Two young men bought on credit stock to butcher, from every one they could, then they "failed." It was known by every one that they both gambled and drank. Why should they have been trusted? Is any gambler better than a thief? Both endeavor to get money from their neighbor for naught, which is the essence of dishonesty. All sins are close akin.

W. M. BRITT.

EAST HELENA.

L. Bramble:—Enclosed find three dollars, two for renewals and one for a new subscriber. We closed one series of meetings here last Sunday night with three additions to the church. Brother Tabor was with us the last week of the meeting and did some good preaching and good work generally.

Last Monday night a rap was heard at our door; when the door was opened a crowd commenced coming in and continued coming until standing room became scarce. After our surprise had somewhat abated (it was a complete surprise to us) we learned that it was a donation party arrangement. Everybody seemed to be loaded down. Ten, twenty, fifty and one hundred pound packages, and any amount of good things cooked and ready prepared for use; also bed clothing and other articles too numerous to mention; and in addition to the above, thirty-three dollars in cash. This was our first donation party, but not the first donation to us, for donations have been almost a daily occurrence with us. I have not bought to exceed one dollar's worth of vegetables since I have been in East Helena, yet we have had an abundance all the time. We have enough and to spare, and if some of our preachers who are pinching along in the larger stations will come over to East Helena and stay a few days, we will not only show them that the good people here know how to take care of their preacher, but we will also feed them up [and work them too, we expect—Editor] that they may be the better prepared, as to physical strength, for duty. Come over, brethren, and see how we live. We consider the prospects for our church here brighter than ever before, and we are hoping a prosperous year. [You seem to be already in the midst of it—Editor]. We expect to build a parsonage next spring. Our friends are moving in that direction now. My wife is improving in health.

WALLACE.

Brother W. O. Waggener, in a private letter, states that he has been in poor health ever since the quarterly meeting there, though he has missed no appointments. Thirty cases of fever in the town at one time. Finances much behind on account of the difficulty of getting some one to look after them. Congregations are excellent, and the Sunday-school roll now numbers about 90. They have bought a good organ and are paying for it on the installment plan. The payments are made out of the regular collections, which make it a little hard on the preacher.

WESTON, OREGON.

F. C. Adkins: I have been sick for two weeks and have a very bad cough. Have not been able to meet any of my appointments during this time. It almost gives me the blues. I was glad to get a copy of the "Methodist." I officiated at a double wedding yesterday, the 11th of November, at the residence of the

FROM VIRGINIA CITY.

Brother Stanley:—I have been waiting for a "more convenient season" to write you a long letter, but it has not come, and this morning I must write, if there are a dozen things waiting to be done. We have no preachers yet. There is only one preacher in our county (Bro. Oliver, on Meadow Creek). It has never been thus in the twenty six years that we have lived in Virginia City. No regular preaching services in any of the churches in Madison Co.

We will begin a course of Bible reading and praise services next Sunday evening, at our church. We have a new Estey church organ, a good choir that meet and practice twice a week; and a very interesting Sunday-school, at which the attendance is regular all the year round.

We hope to have Brother Britt with us the fifth Sunday iu this month, which is the only appointment that I know of for preaching all winter.

Thank the Lord we are not dependent upon the preachers for our religion, we can have our prayer and praise services, and when there is a funeral Mr. Herndon reads the burial service; and when there is a wedding Squire Davis performs the ceremony; and we are learning to depend upon ourselves and get along after a fashion without a preacher in the community.

I inclose the law for "Purity in Literature." Please publish it in the next issue of the METHODIST.

—Mrs. S. R. Herndon.

BUTTE.

Rev. J. E. Squires: Wife expects to go to Missouri and leave me a widower soon. We had a fine day Sunday, a full house at night. All hopeful along the line here. J. W. Kemper and family are expected soon to start for Virginia, for a few months' visit, and he handed his pastor a check for his share of the salary for two months ahead. [That was handsome, and a fit thing to do, but it was just like "Willie." Would that more of our laymen were so considerate of their pastor's welfare while they are enjoying the good things of the world.

PALOUSE CITY.

J. W. Compton: Our church is under way. Brother Dyer, of Spokane, is the contractor. We hope to have it done by Christmas and want it dedicated about the first of January. Come over to the dedication. [We would take great pleasure in joining with our brethren in such a delightful service. Even now we can almost hear the anthems and hallelujah of our people echoing over the hills and through the pines that environ the beautiful city of Palouse, as they gather for the first time in their new house. If not there in person we shall be in spirit, and pray that success may crown their every effort.—Editor].

BURNT RIVER, OREGON.

D. W. Yoakum; I write to inform you that I have held two protracted meetings since Conference. One conversion at the first point, Pleasant Valley, and four at Express, the other point. A brother who was reclaimed just before these meetings, on condition that he would preach, did most effective service and has taken a mission, possibly Burnt River circuit, and you will no doubt hear good things of him. When I get to a money order office I will renew for the "Methodist."

BELGRADE.

I have just returned from Shields river, where Bro. Couey and myself have been holding a series of meetings. Several professed religion, and we organized a church of twenty members, with more to follow. This is the first M. E. church, South, organized in Park county. [This writer organized a society on the Yellowstone river, about where Livingstone now stands, in 1873.—Editor.] At least a half dozen good charges in Eastern Montana ought to be supplied by us right away, and it is a shame it is not done. [Yes, if we were only able to do it.—Editor.] Two years ago, when at Deer Lodge, I asked the Bishop to send a man into Park county, he said, "That is a bleak, windy country, and we can't do much there." But a few trips to that field shows me that no part of Montana is so ripe for Southern Methodism as is Eastern Montana.

Yours in haste,
B. E. H. Warren.

DEMERSVILLE.

Rev. J. B. Parnall, who has been assisting Bro. Lee, writes from the field of battle: "Amidst the frequent rains and continuous mud, we are, I suppose, progressing with the meeting as well as might be expected. Have a hard job to get the people out—have distributed bills and made many calls; still during the week our congregations have not numbered more than twenty-five at any one time. Yesterday's congregations, however, were fairly good, but it was a rainy day, like the present. It tries our faith and patience. [Where was there ever a hard fought battle that did not do this?—Editor.] but I hope that we are not found wanting in that respect. Fortunately we are both trusting not only to appearances but in the promises of God. The battle is a hard one and perhaps will not be a quick one, but we confidently expect a victory in some form or other. A large ingathering of souls is hardly possible under present circumstances, but the power of God is not limited. Pray that our faith and courage fail not. I am astonished to find what utter strangers the people are to each other—even the church-goers. We are starting them out to handshaking. Brother and Sister Lee are making my stay with them very pleasant and profitable.

Notes.

—The Sunday-school Convention of Missoula county, which was held at Stevensville the 10th and 11th of November, was a success. There was a good attendance from various portions of the county and the discussions of the various topics were spicy and profitable. Dr. Raleigh's presidency gave entire satisfaction, so far as we could learn; for we were providentially prevented from attending but one session. The "Sunday-school Love-feast" was a new and interesting feature. Several testified that the Sunday-school had much to do in their conversion, while one testified that it had much to do with his becoming a minister, and several said that the knowledge of Scripture in memorizing verses at Sunday-school had greatly aided them in preaching the Gospel. It had helped some in learning to sing, others in becoming more deeply interested in young people, while all had been greatly helped by the Sunday-school in their Christian life and work.

Stevensville in entertaining the Convention, maintained the record for genuine hospitality. The next session will be held at Corvallis.

—It was the editor's privilege to visit and preach once more to the good people of Lo Lo, where we went to fill Brother Parnall's appointment. We had a refreshing service on Sunday, and greatly enjoyed the cordial greeting and hearty hand-shakes from our old-time friends, among whom we labored in the years gone by. The hospitality and kindness of the Delaneys, the Millses, Davises, Hollenstiners, Gilbert's, Fausetts, Leedys and others at this point, will not soon be forgotten. Brother Hellenstiner is one of the most faithful men in Sunday-school work that we have met in many days. For many years he has conducted the Sunday-school at this place successfully.

A Living Thief.

At one of the Baptist Anniversaries in the North, Dr Lorimer related the following dialogue, which penurious Christians would do well to ponder:

Talking with a man who had professed to be converted the minister said:

"Have you joined the church?"

"No; the dying thief did not join the church, and he went to Heaven."

"Have you given anything to missions?"

"No; the dying thief never gave anything, and he went to Heaven."

"Well, my friend, it seems to me the difference is that he was a dying thief, and you are a living one."

Should Political Meetings Be Allowed in a Church Building?

Sometimes a name becomes so associated with all that is vile and sacriligious, that we are ready to condemn everything by that name. This is about the case with the name of "political meeting," but if Christians will stop and ask what is the object of a political meeting, they can soon determine, whether it will profane the name of Christ or build up his cause. If it is the latter then the church is the most fitting place to hold such a meeting. When any organization wishes to devise ways and means to destroy the greatest enemy our homes, country and church has ever known, the liquor traffic, we believe the dear Savior, whose every effort on earth was to relieve suffering and destroy evil, would smile on his children for trying to organize themselves into a political force to destroy this evil, and the church is none too sacred for this sacred work. God himself honored the greatest political meeting ever held on earth, with his presence, when he gave the Israelites their law, on that most sacred of all places, Mt. Sainai. The day will soon come that church members will be ashamed of their efforts to drive Christ's advanced guards out of church buildings, just as men are ashamed of having tried to throttle the anti-slavery movement.

"How forcible are right words! but what doth your arguing reprove?" Job. 6:25.

The vigorous attacks made on the Bible by infidels and skeptics have brought into the great problems of theology the superior dictum of common sense. A little reason and sense is better than a mountain of theory. A modicum of certainty will overturn a whole world of guessing. The giant common sense will route the the whole army of Higher Critics with the mighty sweep of the simple truth. There are only two vessels that plow the unknowable—the Bible, and Nature. The skeptic pretending to stand on nature has exhausted his store of vituperation and denunciation, in vilifying the Bible, and his most bitter fulmination and execration have almost led some to believe that there is a conflict between the Bible and science. It's a grand mistake. A little thimble full of reasoning assures us that it is not the thunder that strikes, and mere proscription and excommunication are harmless in the hands of a Lilliputian. This supposed battle is a mere sham, for never did friendlier vessels sail the sea than these divinely ordained and directed ships—the Bible and science. Smoke, noise, and confusion there have been; sombre clouds, setting in "learned hopelessness," — great, bright will-o-the-wisps born of the miasma of classic nonsense, and bred in the cesspools of a contagious credulity, have hung over the minds of some till they have become dark as the God of this world. But the bright and cheerful sun of truth has never failed to penetrate and brush away the dilusive cobwebs of a blatant sophistry. We have heard of the mistakes of Moses from one who claims to be making a merchandise of foolishness. We have heard the sons of Belial sailing on the ship of Truth, but glory to God, she has moved right on, and when hard pressed by the Philistines of a Higher Criticism, we have always had the great giant, Common sense—a very Samson at our elbow for deliverance. Before him the corn-cob bullwarks of infidelity have faded like straws before a tempest. He is our Joshua—God sent to lead the Israel of God out from the valley of Ajalon to the full possession of the whole field sought to be occupied by the most unscientific, and ungodly Materialistic Amorites. Let us apply, if you please, the test of common sense to some of these bugbears, I should say, insane ravings of a foul-mouthed infidelity. We remember that the world has always had its dreamers and croakers, but the dreamer can be easily detected, and croakers are well known children of the night. The three great infidel powers of the latter days are called by John, frog-like spirits, coming out of the mouth of the Dragon and of the False Prophet and of the Beast. Into the ears of these dreamers and croakers, infidelity has poured its complaints about absurdities, errors, and contradictions in the Bible. These have been the nicknacks upon which they have fed their deluded following, and in the bugbears over which their fright has been produced. That these are only chimeras, utopianisms, castle building, is plainly evident to a grain of common sense. Take an instance or two. An ex-minister of the Gospel, who had turned infidel once said to Mr. Hastings, of Boston: "The Bible cannot be true, because Moses told such a story about the quails." The quail story has been a great bugbear to the unfolding fancy of the infidel. In an infidel paper in Boston, there was a whole column devoted to figures and arguments in discussing this quail story. It was there estimated how many bushels of quails were picked up over the whole country. The writer showed by what he thought a fair computation that each Israelite would have given him to eat, 2,888,643 bushels of quail during the month.—Quite a supply for one man for one month without doubt. But more—this would divide out to each poor hungry man and woman just 69,620 bushels to a meal. Think of one man eating over sixty thousand quails for supper! If after that supper, he could not write out another "Utopia" or "Robison Cruso," he could surely tell dreams that would please the children. If Rip Van Winkle had had such a repast as that before he went to sleep, he could easily have slept twenty years longer. Rattlesnakes are truly in the boots of the victim of Mania a Potu, or delirium tremens, but they are not in his calf skin, but in the boots of his fancy. So with this quail story. No man who is clear-headed and competent to judge evidence would have any trouble whatever. But this ex-minister had this bugbear so clearly set in his fantasy, that he could see nothing else, than that the Bible is false.

It is clearly evident that the Bible does not furnish the data for this great bugbear argument.

It is not said as infidels try to make appear that the quails fell upon each other, in piles like cordwood, three feet deep throughout all the camp. All that is said is this: "The Lord brought the quails from the sea and let them fall by the camp as it were two cubits high; or about three feet high upon or above the face of the earth, that is, they flew about three feet from the earth, so each Israelite could take as many of them as he chose. And this is all there is to the simple story of the quails. If I should say here to-day that as I was coming to this house, I saw a flock of pigeons fly up the river as high as the Rolling Mill Chimney, and some one would say in the paper to-morrow morning, a flock of pigeons were seen flying up the river yesterday, packed solid from the ground up as high as the Rolling Mill Chimney, the misrepresentation would only be a sample of the arguments employed by skeptics to prove that the Bible is not inspired. Another instance—Ingersoll went around the country a little while ago laughing at the story of the Ark. He said it was impossible to get pairs of all the animals into the Ark. To a crowd of loafers and skeptics, this was a crusher on Christianity and the Bible. They laughed and jeered, and clapped the speaker till he left the stage airy as a flying dutchman. But a little common sense would have made a first rate mixture, which would have spoiled all their fun and nonsense. Look for a moment at this Ark Bugbear. The Ark was 300 cubits long. A cubit is about 18 English inches. Three hundred cubits would be equal to about 450 English feet. Its breadth was 50 cubits–equal to 75 English feet. Its height was 30 cubits–equal to 45 English feet. The tonnage of the Ark according to the calculation of modern carpenters must have been about 32,000 tons. Now the largest ship of war carries only about 2500 tons burden. Therefore the Ark must have been equal to 17 first-rate ships of war. If armed as war-ships are, the Ark would have contained much beyond 18,000 men and provisions for them for 18 months. Buffon has stated that all the four footed animals may be reduced to 250 pairs or species, and the birds to a still smaller number. On a fair calculation then, the Ark would have carried more than five times the necessary number of creatures and more than five times the quantity of food to maintain them for 12 months. And this only by a little common sense and the rules of practical arithmetic.

Look at this from Ingersoll. He says: "I don't believe that Moses knew, that the earth was turning on its axis at the rate of 1000 miles an hour, because if he did, he would have understood the immensity of heat that would have been generated by stopping the world. It has been calculated by one of the best mathematicians and Astronomers, that to stop the world would cause as much heat, as it would take to burn a lump of coal three times as big as the globe." See Tyndalls Heat as a Mode of Motion, sixth ed. p. 11., for similar views on this question. Now what is all this superfluity of sciences gotten up for? simply to discredit the story of Joshua, commanding the sun to stand still, or as the common interpretation has it–the earth. Skeptics say, if the earth had stood still, the stoppage would have generated heat enough to burn it up. Hence they say this sun-standing-still story is a myth–a figment of the imagination. On the history of this long day we refer them to Prof. Totten, of Yale University, who can give them astronomy till they are satisfied. On the theory that sudden stoppage generates heat, we have this to say: "This theory of heat generation is founded on Joule's "Unit" discovery, which has recently been overturned. Captain R. Kelso Carter, of the Pennsylvania Military Academy at Chester, has tested a new law discovered by Wilford Hall, of New York—namely—that no heat whatever is generated of a moving body, however suddenly, or whatever its size or velocity of motion, and that any heat observed in a body thus instantly stopped, is caused not by the stoppage of motion per se, but by the friction of its substance rubbing against itself, through the process of indentation or becoming flattened." This was tested and found true by a practical experiment on this wise: Two bullets, one lead, the other steel, were shot against a target. The leaden bullet flattened in the process and thus generated a little heat on the bulb of a sensitive thermometer. The steel bullet not being indentated or flattened produced no perceptible heat.

This fact suggests that Moses was not mistaken, and Ingersoll and Tyndall are scientifically, very much off. The earth,—a substantial mass could instantly stop and not generate very much heat either. Woe to infidel criticism and logic when the giant common sense walks the earth! The prating infidels used to make much ado over Christ feeding five thousand from five loaves and two fishes. They have ceased to prate since they have learned about the stupendous and mighty multiplication of the monerma and the oral insects by germination and self division. If Christ or God can multiply a monerma till it becomes thousands of individuals in a few hours, could he not multiply five loaves and two fishes into enough to feed five thousand persons? most certainly he could. Again Infidels are constantly dealing in glittering generalities about evolution, spontaneous generation, the great ages of the Geologists, and such questions. Sometimes they think us fools, because we do not follow them in their wild goose chase, after visions and mere theories. A few years back on a Sunday evening, a lecturer in Music Hall, Boston, delivered to his audience such trash as the following: "Now the population of the earth is one billion, and a generation dies every thirty years. In every thirty years, then, one billion of human beings, go out of the world, and one billion come in. Forty years ago the church taught that the world was 6,000 years old. She does not to-day pretend to guess within a hundred thousand years, how old the world is. Very well! What has been the population of the world, since the race began? Who can estimate the number? By what arithmetic shall you compute the swarming millions? Take the globe and flatten it into a vast plain 24,000 miles by 24, and would it accommodate but a fraction of the human beings that have lived upon its surface? Where is the locality of the Judgment to be then? Can it have a locality?"

Professed Christians men and women sat and heard this deliverance of the Rev. Mr. Murray and did not detect its bald infidelity. A little arithmetic and common sense would have set them all straight, but instead the vast audience accepted this utterance as the verriest truth. Now let us make the broadest estimate concievable. Suppose the human family have existed on the earth one hundred thousand years, and that the population has never been, from the first day, less than the above estimate —one billion. To make it easier of calculation, say instead of 30 years to a generation, three generations a century. There will then appear to have been 3000 generations of one billion each, who demand, when assembled, standing room. For a crowded meeting of men and women, two feet square would be ample room for each one. Now a square mile contains in round numbers twenty-five thousand square feet, and twelve million five hundred thousand persons would stand on it. Therefore 80 square miles would hold a generation, and three thousand times that space would hold the population of one hundred thousand years.

In other words 240,000 square miles would contain them, and a parallelogramm six hundred miles long and four hundred miles broad would give them abundant standing room. So then a little common sense tells us that the Judgment, which infidelity says is impossible, could be easily held in one or two of our states; and if they were all dead and buried, our wild lands, as yet unoccupied, would make for them a spacious cemetery. But away with this unmitigated nonsense about 100,000 years. There are just as many good people, and just as many great scientists as ever, who still believe that the human race is not greatly over six thousand years old. Faith in Moses is still prevalent in home, church and college. All the ethnologists are agreed that man's age on this earth is about 6,000 years. If this be true, then there have been about 180 generations.

We will be safe also in estimating one-half of the present population as the average in all the generations. Then 180 generations, each of five hundred millions give us 90 billions for the whole human race. A number of our states, each, could comfortably bury them, and when the Judgment sits, God, if he wished, could gather all this awful assembly of mankind, in a circle around the white crested dome of Mount Blanc, or Mount Washington, or even Mount Sainai, so near that every eye could see the great King on the summit, or hear the rumblings of his chariot wheels as he descends to render the final verdict. Bad must be the spiritual digestion that can feed on such nicknacks. We prefer Moses still. We cannot give up the Bible, till we have better reasons than the above. We will trudge along with our Bibles under our arms, and our hearts full of the Commandments of our Lord, sure that our burdens are easy and our yokes light. We pity the skeptic, we revere our God, we believe our Bibles. To all infidels we cry:

"Go tell the night that hides thy face
Thou sawest the last of Adam's race,
On Earth's sepulchral clod;
The darkening universe defy,
To quench his immortality,
Or shake his faith in God."

Fish On Dry Land.

In some foreign countries walking fish are quite common. This singular creature is one of a group in which the carpers form arms that support the pectoral fins, and thus enable the fish to walk along the ground almost like a quadruped. On the rocks of Ceylon washed by the turf, there are other little walking fish which run up the wet stones with the utmost ease and rapidity. By the aid of the pectoral and ventral fins and gill cases they move over the damp sands, ascend the roots of the mangroves, and climb up the smooth face of the rocks in search of flies. Many of the freshwater fish of the same island possess the same power of leaving their native element and returning to it again after long pilgrimages on dry land. When the pools they inhabit get low in the summer season they start off, led by an unexplained instinct, to the nearest considerable body of water. The fish most often seen on shore excursions is a species of perch. It grows to about six inches in length. Aided by an admirable apparatus with which Nature has gifted its head, the little creature issues boldly from its native haunts, and proceeds on a toilsome march to its new habitation. The expedition is made at night or early in the morning, while the grass is wet with dew. In its distress, however, it is sometimes compelled to move by day.

At a recent meeting of chemists in London, a gentleman described a little microphone which would render audible the footsteps of a fly. The little apparatus consists of a box with a sheet of straw paper stretched on its upper part. Two carbons, separated by a morsel of wood and connected with the two circuit wires, are fastened to it, and a carbon pencil, placed crosswise between the two, is kept in this position by a groove made in the latter. A very weak battery is then sufficient to set the instrument at work, and when the fly passes over the sheet of paper it produces vibrations strong enough to react energetically on an ordinary telephone.—New York Ledger.

A WORD ABOUT CHRISTMAS.

The first and only time that mortals on earth ever heard the angels sing was on the night of the Saviour's birth. Peaceful silence rested on the hills and valleys of Judea, and a cloudless Syrian sky displayed its starry splendors above, casting a mellow radiance on a landscape consecrated by a thousand sacred associations. The mountain pastures, where "shepherds watched their flocks by night," had often echoed the sweet notes of David's harp. They were now to hear a new song, and to send its echoes down the centuries to the end of time. Suddenly, as if the sun had flashed out in the dome of midnight, "the glory of the Lord shone round about," and an angel voice was heard saying to the astonished shepherds: "Fear not; for, behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy, which shall be to all people. For unto you is born this day in the city of David a Saviour, which is Christ the Lord." Then "a multitude of the heavenly host" broke forth with the Christmas anthem. "Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, goodwill toward men." The light faded from the hills, the angels went away into heaven, and darkness and silence covered the land again.

Such was the manner in which the angels celebrated the first Christmas. How ought we to keep this holy season? Surely not with unbecoming levity and sinful mirth; not with bacchanalian revelry and drunken rioting, but with joy and gladness, with holy reverence and profound gratitude, with songs of praise and thanksgiving, and with loving acts of charity and good-will. It is a time for happy reunions, for family greetings, for religious meetings, and for social entertainments. It is a time for the exercise of the sweet charities of life, and the gentle ministries of religion; a time to remember the poor, to cheer and comfort the afflicted, to forgive offenses, to heal breaches, and to strengthen the bonds of Christian friendship and brotherly love.

Let us make our homes bright and happy as possible, that our children may learn to love and serve the Son of God, who has blessed our world with his presence and ministry of love. Give the dear ones some token of affection as a memento of the season, but not "costly gifts only for show." There is danger of abusing the beautiful costum of "Christmas presents," and making it an occasion for the display of vanity, pride, and selfishness. There is often a great "waste of material" — good material, if properly used. Large sums of money are worse than wasted in expensive toys for children — useless trifles, which the children do not value. Costly gifts are made to those who do not need them, and the needy poor neglected, and the claims of common charity disregarded. Many persons who really cannot afford it are forced to spend money on others merely "because it is expected," and thus a beautiful costum is made to oppress and embarrass more than it pleases or benefits. A trifle may answer as a token of love among equals, and the richer gifts may go to the cause of God and humanity. S. S. Magazine.

About Union.

During the recent session of the Ecumenical Conference, not a little was said concerning the union of various branches of Methodism and particularly of the M. E. Churches, North and South. It was much the same at the Centennial Conference at Baltimore in 1884. As a rule this talk about organic union comes from one side of the house, the stronger side, which would have control of the body when united and would dictate the terms of the union, which is much like that of the snake and the frog, with the position understanding that said proposing party is not to be the frog.

We fear that much of this talk, where it is really sincere, is prompted by a vain spirit, a disposition to glory in numbers, and wealth, and power, like that which prompted the numbering of Israel in the days of old; and we doubt the real sincerity of much that is said, and fear that it is only for effect. Knowing that there is no sacrifice to make, according to the only terms that it would listen to, while the other side would sacrifice all it has, and that their is really no danger of its terms being accepted, these professions of love are made prominent at ecumenical gatherings and sounded out before the world with great gusto, while the absence of favorable responses from the minority, who are too busy "doing a good work" to leave it and come down to the plain of One for the discussion of minor questions, is interpreted as evincing a lack of fraternity and the spirit of Christian charity and unity, and of being behind the times generally. This, in turn, is made the occasion of renewed denunciation and fresh supplies for the "Southern work," against the earnest protest some of the best men at the North [Bishops Foss and Foster] and a renewal of the crusade to make other conquests and win still greater "belts" of country [as Bishop Mallalieu puts it] from those who but yesterday, [in word], were loved so dearly! It is a significant fact that where our Northern brethren are strongest they are loud in their pleadings for union, but when, as in much of the South, they are in a hopeless minority, and the Church South would reap what little benefit that would be gained, in point of numbers, it is opposed to it at all hazards. What selfish creatures we mortals are!

When by the authority of the General Conference, after finding it impossible to have a united Methodism and do the work that God would have it do, the Church South became a separate body, desiring fraternity as the next best thing, almost its first act was to appoint a messenger to seek the establishment of Christian fellowship between the two bodies. When this offer was formally rejected by the North, it announced its readiness to receive overtures at any time looking to this end when made upon the basis of the plan of separation. They wanted no sham, but a fraternity that was according to Christian principles and honorable to all concerned. And history shows that when fraternal messengers went South, though it was after their country had been invaded and many of their colleges, churches, and parsonages had been taken from them, that they [the Messengers] were met even more than half-way in suggesting and devising measures to secure such a fraternity. Thus they have ever sought to preserve the unity of the spirit—the true union—in the bonds of peace. And to-day no class of people upon the face of the earth more deeply deplore the strifes between brethren and the friction and waste of force in portions of the South, and along the border, and in some of our mission fields than does the M. E. church, South; which all might have been avoided by adherence to a certain "Plan" that some would-be unionists do not like to be reminded of now-adays. But, while this is the case, and while we rejoice at the success of the M. E. church, North, as well as of all other sister denominations, that is gained in a legitimate way, and while we advocate co-operation, so far as is possible and practicable, yet we are constrained to believe that at present organic union is utterly impracticable. It would only be a tremendous farce, a curse instead of a blessing, a hindrance instead of a help to Christianity in general and to Methodism in particular.

To say nothing of the difference upon the episcopacy, one of the questions involved in the separation, and of political agitation in the Church, so prevalent at the North; of the six month's probation system, lay delegation and other things; the difference between the two Churches upon what is called the "woman question" and also upon the negro question, which have been virtually settled by us, but are perplexing problems agitating our sister church from center to circumference, are enough to justify the separate existence of these great bodies. It is better for two families to live side by side in peace than try to live under the same roof and keep up a continual strife. Until there is a unity in spirit it is useless to talk of organic union. Until then, God is honored, and His cause more fruitful and prosperous by their separate existence.

Then, why all this clamor about fraternity and union. Our observation is that when two persons, whether married or single, are always parading their friendship before the public, the depth of their devotion is doubted and future trouble is predicted. We are taught to "let love be without dissimulation," and to "love not in word only, but in deed and in truth." If as churches and as individuals we will look to our marching orders, attend faithfully to the work of preaching the Gospel, saving souls, and building them up in the most holy faith, the question of organic union will take care of itself. If there were less talking and more doing it would be better all around. The growth of our Methodism during these years has been a marvel. It is of the Lord and by following where He has led. His leadership is our only pledge of future success. Let us go forward and be careful how we lay hands upon the ark of God.

News and Notes.

—Over two hundred native Christians have suffered martyrdom in the land of Uganda rather than renounce their faith in Christ.

—Samuel Morris, "not colored, but black," of the Vey tribe, West Africa, worked his way over on a bark, and has been sent to Taylor University by Jane Street Sunday School. He knows the Holy Ghost, and will be educated for work among his people.—African News.

—Evangelist Morrison says that Christians who burn up money, while millions of heathen are perishing without Christ, may have some smoking to do in the next world.

—The North Texas Conference was organized in 1867 with 36 preachers and 7,000 members. It now numbers nearly 200 preachers, 40,000 members, has $500,000 worth of church property, and 115 parsonages worth $100,000. Surely our Methodism finds a congenial home in the black waxy soil that abounds them. It yielded last year nearly $10,000 for foreign missions. We wonder that Bishop Foss said "there is one church that seems to be doing a good work as we are."

—Bishop Haygood, in writing to the "Wesleyan Advocate" of the two Conferences, the Pacific and Los Angeles, that he held in California, says: Sorely, sorely do we need for these two Conferences, before Jan. 1st, at least six young men; not mere boys, nor old men, nor soft and tender men; nor timid, nor salary-anxious men; nor men seeking place rather than work—men through and through, men who "go bound in the spirit" to fields where the laborers do not crowd each other—fields where the "harvest is plenteous but the laborers few." The preachers of both these Conferences went away full of revival fire and I believe that the coming year will show progress in all directions. But this we know, whether the results show to men's eyes or not, results there will be, for one cannot do his best for God and fail.

What the Bishop says of the character of the men needed there is applicable to other fields than California. The Bishop is doing heroic service over there,and we hope to see his genial face in "the Country of the Mountains"—the interpretation of the Indian name for Montana.

—Heaven is not a miracle of omnipotence independent of the spirits of just men who are to possess it forever; nor yet is its architecture the product of angelic genius and labor, but rather a consummation of human faith. Human spirits have toiled, and do toil, in its building. Its foundation stones and its gates are inscribed with the names of the Twelve Tribes of Israel and the Apostles of the Lamb.—Pacific Methodist Advocate.

—On the 28th of November the west span of the new bridge of the Great Northern road near Columbia Falls,fell, killing three men, fatally wounding three, and injuring three others. It will delay the extension of the road at least two weeks.

—The Burlington system is rapidly extending its line towards Montana, and its movements are being watched with great interest, and its coming is hailed with delight by our people. It will afford us direct communication, by way of the Black Hills with Kansas City, St. Louis and the South-east.

—There is much talk of the extension of the line of the Montana Central road from Butler to Anaconda. It is expected that it will at no distant day reach the Bitter Root valley, surveyors have been at work between Anaconda and Grantsdale for several months. Its advent here will bring new life to this valley and cause it to blossom as the rose.

—The Helena Independent states that a copper refinery is to be established at Anaconda, and intimates that the Anaconda company is to be capitalized at $25,000,000.

—While in Helena sometime ago, in company with Brother Price we attended the meeting of the Murphy Gospel Temperance Union, which holds religious services at its hall every night. Mr. W. D. Smith, the present chairman of theExecutive Committee,was converted while Mr. Murphy was there. He and his wife are earnest workers. The crowds who go there are those who have made the saloons their headquarters. They love to hear their former companions in vice tell of their wonderful deliverance. Pastors can learn valuable lessons by visiting such places, and hearing these (in many cases) uncultivated men tell their experience in their plain simple way. One of the most noted of the converts is James Pilditch,who was a perfect wreck of a man, had "come down from a salary of $250 a month to sweeping out a saloon for a drink of whisky." He had been in jail in St. Paul, Minneapolis, Great Falls, Helena, and many other places. He now makes a good living at his trade, and is doing good work in other ways. He thinks if there was help for him—and he found it the worst need not despair.

—On Saturday Dec. 5th a company of neighbors and friends gave a pleasant surprise to Mr. and Mrs. Burroughs, at their residence near Corvallis. It was the occasion of their silver wedding—the 25th anniversary of their marriage. Mrs. B. S. Chaffin was mistress of ceremonies. A beautiful repast was served. The evening was spent in social chat and in song. It was an enjoyable occasion.

—The new bridge across the Bitter Root river just west of Corvallis is completed, and is pronounced the best bridge in the county.

—There is general complaint of scarcity of money, though all are hopeful of better times in the near future. What would we do were it not for hope?

—Rev. J. M. Patterson writes from Queen City, Mo., enclosing a dollar to renew his subscription, and says; "I subscribed for the Montana Methodist at Gallatin in '88 and have received every number since. The last number, Nov. 15, I like better than any yet." Well, we hope that the last will be the best all the time; and such substantial tokens of appreciation greatly assist in making it so.

—Mr. J. T. Farris, editor of the "Western News" and Miss A Goff, both of Stevensville, were united in marriage at the home of Brother and Sister Flowers, near Stevensville, 1891. Rev. T. W. Flowers officiating. We extend hearty congratulations and wish our brother and his fair bride, whom we have known from childhood, a happy voyage over the sea of life and a safe landing on the ever green shore.

—There is a dearth of news from the front this week. Possibly the falling weather has prevented protracted special efforts, or hindered their success to some extent.

But let us not be idle. The devil does not lay up for bad weather, but rallies his regulars, rain or shine, and is even now decoying our young people away to the silly dance or other places of sinful amusement where their influence will be lost to the cause of Christ, and their souls possibly lost in perdition. Let us pray for revivals, work for revivals and never rest until we have genuine sin-destroying and soul-saving revivals on every charge in all this great North-west.

—Brethren, do not neglect longer to take up your collections for domestic missions, and forward it to Rev. D. B. Price, (in the absence of A. G. Clarke), Helena, Montana. Our preachers on the outparts are suffering for lack of the money that is justly due them now. Please act promptly in this matter.

—Don't forget that Christmas gift for missions on Christmas morning. Let there be a response from each member and friend of the church to this urgent call. Give back to the Master something of the bounty that He has lavished upon you. We know of nothing more appropriate than a Christmas gift for missions.

—Don't forget to send the dollar or two that you owe for the renewa of your subscription just as soon as you can. We do not want to crowd any one, but think perhaps that some fail to renew just through neglect. It is only a small amount to each subscriber, but amounts to several hundred dollars to us.

—Southern Advocate: Bishop Keener is going to publish his long-promised book, giving to the world the benefit of his theory of the wonderful deposits in the phosphate beds of this state, and perhaps locating Eden not far from the door of some very desirable churches in the old metropolitan district.

—Bishop Haygood held the Los Angeles Conference, and preached every day of the session. There were penitents and converts. He went, after adjournment, to the field, preaching twice a day. The "Coast" is recalling Marvin, who spent 18 months in California, in the pulpit nearly every day. Haygood must have been reading the journals of the "preaching prelates"—Wesley, Asbury, McKendree.—Ex.

--The "Methodist Times" believes in Sunday preaching on week-day sins, of which as we all know there is too little. "Whether or not," it says, "the preacher says anything about the sins of which he reads in the Book of Genesis, he is bound to say something of the sins which he reads in the daily newspaper; and if he does this faithfully he may hope to bring about the ethical reformation which the times sorely need, and which, when once it is effected, will make this land in reality what we now sometimes thoughtlessly call it—a Christian country."

—The finest mission building in the world will soon be completed in New York, the Temple of Rescue. Mrs. W. H. Vanderbilt is erecting it at a cost of $225,000 on ground which her son Cornelius bought for $75,000. Nearly a third of a million will go into it.

—Before us is a table showing the proportion of liquor dealers to the population in all the states of the Union. In Alabama it is 1 to every 1,118, and pretty near the same in Arkansas, Mississippi, and several other Southern States; while in California it is 1 to 96; in Nevada, 1 to 71; in Idaho, 1 to 147; Washington, 1 to 287; and in Montana, 1 to 90. Surely there is urgent need of both moral and legal suasion to arrest the progress of this giant evil which is becoming so strongly entrenched amid the mountain fortresses of our great and growing West.

—The "Texas Advocate:"—"The Presbyterian does not magnify the relative power and importance of the pulpit too much in the following,and if we are not mistaken it discerns a true need of the times. Let the whole Church consider the matter prayerfully:

'The PRESS can never supersede the pulpit. The cry that the preachers' work is a work of supererogation in our day, because of the printed page, has no warrant for it. The newspaper, magazine, tract and different forms of religious instruction, by means of type and ink, are doing untold good, but the living voice has its mission, and nothing can ever take its place. God has ordained preaching a living and enduring agency in his Church. We have more culture and breadth in the ministry generally than formerly, but not as much of the simplicity and fervor of the Gospel. What we want now is greater spirituality, zeal, directness and fervency. Let the pulpit of the land be baptized from on high, as it is capable of being, and the results will convince all gain-sayers of its supremacy and effectiveness.'"

—The "Nashville Christian Advocate" very truly says: "The Church of the future seems to weigh upon the minds of many Church leaders in Europe and America. They invoke the spirit of prophecy and all human ingenuity and fancy to portray it. It does not concern us very anxiously. The Church of the present engages our solicitudes and energies. Christ puts an arrest on anxiety for the future, which applies to the Church life as well as the individual life. 'Take no thought for the morrow.' To be concerned about the interests, absorbed in the duties of the present, is the surest way to direct the future. The Church of the future will take its color and character from what we make the Church of to-day. The future lies in the issues and duties of to-day."

Railway Statistics.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29.—The third annual report on the United States railway statistics, issued by the interstate commerce commission says in part: The railway mileage of the United States on June 30, 1890, was 163,597.05 miles; increase during the year 6,030.60; total mileage including tracks, etc., 209,030.67 miles. The number of railway corporations is 1,797. Forty companies operate 47.51 per cent. of the total mileage. The total gross income of railways was $1,051,877,632, and seventy-four companies receive 80 per cent. of this amount. The total number of locomotives is 29,928, the number of cars, 1,164,138. The total number of men employed is 749,301. The total capitalization of railway property $9,894,483,400. The passengers carried during the year amounted to 492,430,865; freight transported, 636,441,617 tons. The number of persons killed in accidents during the year was 6,320,; injured 29,034.

Wheat shipments from Baltimore will exceed anything ever known before in one season. Seventy vessels have been chartered for January and February to carry 3,500,000 bushels of grain to Europe.

—There is also great difficulty found in getting cars to transport the grain over the roads east of Chicago, which is very embarrassing to farmers and dealers.

—There is no little excitement over the insurrections, in portions of China, which have resulted in the cruel murder of many native Christians, as well as foreigners. Men, women and children. There is evidently a very general desire to rid the country, especially the interior, of foreigners and Christians. It is really shared in by many of the officials. What will be the outcome is hard to tell. If China expects to be regarded among the civilized nations she should be given to understand that such business must be stopped and that speedily. News comes that the insurrectionists have been defected by the government forces and about 600 of them killed.

—"The Texas Advocate," in reporting the Texas Conference, says: "When it was announced that a conference picture would be taken, Dr. Morton arose and wanted to know if Dr. McLean was present. He said that when he was at the Ecumenical he and Dr. McLean stood on either side of a colored brother while a group was being taken and he called the picture a Ham sandwich. He wanted one with the Ham left out.

—While the number of business failurers throughout the country has seemingly been large of late, Dun's agency reports only 252 during the past week as compared with 247 in the same week last year. Some disappointment has been expressed that with our big crops and general prosperity there should not by a more marked revival of business. The fact should not be lost sight of, however, that the condition of finances at European money centers has retarded business enterprises in this country. So far as the United States is concerned all the conditions exist here for a period of great prosperity. The time is near at hand when the scanty crops in Europe will all be consumed and a big demand for our own surplus products will set in. Dun's review reports large sales of steel rails in the West, 175,000 tons in two weeks, which is one of the surest signs of activity for the coming year.—Ex.

The Divorce Evil in Denver.

The divorce evil in Denver has grown to alarming proportions. This city has come to be a Mecca of men and women who dishonestly and illegally seek to break the ties that bind them together, disregardful of the vows they made before God and the law. Denver out-Chicagoes Chicago, out-Dakotas Dakota. It seems almost incredible the practices outlined in the article on divorce printed in yesterday's "Times" could obtain a foothold in the courts under the law; that the procurers of divorce could become so bold and shameless in their methods. But the evil exists, and it is increasing. What shall be done to abate it?—Times.

ALONG THE LINE.

DEMERSVILLE.

Dear Brother Stanley:—On Nov. 1st the pastor began a protracted meeting at the above place. On the following Tuesday, Bro. Parnall came, and for nearly three weeks preached the Gospel, earnestly, fearlessly and in all of its phases. The Spirit was manifestly present, some were convicted but as yet are not willing to pay the price. The church was revived, and we hope the results will be larger than have yet appeared upon the surface. We labored under at least seeming disadvantages. It was raining or snowing most of the time Bro. P. was with us; and then the nature of the work at this time makes it very hard to arrive at definite results. The people are unsettled and excited about the boom; the congregations are variable, not so much in size as in the individuals who compose them. So, generally speaking, if a man is saved, the Spirit has to be there in such power that the whole work of convincing, convicting, justifying or pardoning must be done at one service, if accomplished at all in the meeting. Under such circumstances even if good seed should fall into the ground, "the cares of the world and the deceitfulness of riches" choke the Word that it becomes unfruitful.

Bro. P. left this morning, Nov. 23rd, on board the steamer "State of Montana." It is a good thing he did not start just three days earlier, for on the 20th, the same boat encountered the roughest sea ever known on the Flathead lake. Though she is the largest and best equipped vessel on the lake, she seemed like a toy tossed about by the angry waves. She made her way out of the mouth of the river and across the bar, but could go no further. The captain tried to turn her about and enter the river again, but found he could not control her, so had to let her drive with the wind and steer clear of the rocks. Fortunately the storm drove her into a little bay. Part of her rigging was broken, not seriously disabling her, however. The next morning bright and early the Crescent, steamed out from the wharf in search of the missing vessel and found her safely moored, repairing her damages.

During the gale an incident occurred on board which brings forcibly to our minds the truth of the old adage "necessity is the mother of invention." One of the passengers thinking that the vessel was likely to be wrecked, and, either not being ready to take his exit from this world, or not desiring so watery a route, emptied two demijohns [into the lake] and corked them tightly and fastened them to his neck as a life preserver.

We are credibly informed that neither of the large steamers that ply these waters is supplied with life preservers. Sometimes they have aboard from seventy-five to one hundred passengers, and all they have in case of an accident or storm is one little skiff which would probably hold three or four persons. If there is a law compelling steamers to have on board and in convenient places a sufficient supply of life preservers it would be enforced in these cases.

E. L. Lee.

We would that such a storm of indignation could be made to sweep over this land, as would cause every demijohn, wine cask, beer bottle, and whiskey barrel and everything else of the kind, to be emptied in the manner related above. The empty bottles and barrels would outnumber all the life preservers on all the packets and carriers of Christendom, and would save more lives than all the life boats now afloat upon all the waters of the world. That was a sensible act. We would like to shake hands with that man. There is virtue in a demijohn emptied in that way. But when the contents take the usual course the virtue is lost. The subject becomes so completely "soaked" that it is almost impossible to keep his head above the waves, and it is only a question of time when he goes down to rise no more.

SPOKANE.

Rev. B. Swift, in a private note, says: "Bro. W. H. Hodges, the P. C., has been on hand about three weeks. He is starting off well. We all like him. I trust he will be enabled to do a good work here." The Lord bless you, brethren, in all your work on the mountain tops.

HELENA.

Brother Price sends two dollars for the "Montana Methodist"—one for a subscriber at Port Townsend, Wash., and adds, "Brother Couey was here, and we had a fine day yesterday, one valuable accession."

GENESEE, IDAHO.

Rev. H. T. Burger, in a private letter, writes: "We are having very much rain now, and not much progress is being made in building up the church.

PENDLETON.

R. G. Isbell:—Collections all subscribed. Domestic missions fifty per cent. in advance of assessment. A new baby at the parsonage. Congregations good; five subscribers to "Montana Methodist," and more to come. Health not very good. [With the exception of the last item, that is a fine report. We congratulate our brother, and trust his health will improve.—Editor.

FAIRVIEW, WASH.

F. St. Clair:—Just closed a glorious meeting. Bro. Hornbuckle was with me. He preached with more power than I ever heard him before. The church stood by him, though, and that is a great help always. There were some sky-blue conversions and reclamations and the people of God wonderfully built up. Last night, nearly every member, children and all, said they would do anything they were called upon to do. Hallelujah! Hornbuckle is a Gospel preacher. We open another meeting next Sunday. God bless you. [This was all on a postal card, and not very closely written either. Let us have many such.—Editor.

FAYETTE, MO.

D. F. Bone:—The first month in the conference year found all our collections up for 1891-2, on the Fayette Circuit; and up to that date thirty precious souls added to the Church.

Fayette Circuit is coming to the front on all the lines of church work, and we hope to be able to make a good report, both spiritually and financially, at our next Annual Conference.

Our beloved Dr. E. K. Miller, P. E. of the Fayette District, got badly hurt about a month since, by being thrown from a buggy, but, we are thankful, is up and about his Master's work again. He is a grand good man, and much loved by the brethren on the district, as well as throughout the Mo. Conference.

Rev. W. A. Hanna is holding, at this time, a revival meeting in his church in Fayette. Dr. Bowling, of Covington, Ky., helped him ten days. The Dr. left for home last Monday, but the meeting did not wane, but grew in interest and power. Quite a number have been converted in the old Methodist way—at the Mercy-seat. [That's the right way.—Editor.]

Central and Howard Colleges are being greatly blessed by the revival.

Last night, Thursday, the 19th, there were two added to the church, several conversions, and twenty or more at the altar for the prayers of the people.

The meeting will go on, doubtless, a week or two yet, when you may expect to hear the results.

I often think of the grand, brave, and true men of our church in the West, who are fighting the battles of the Church, and earnestly pray them God-speed. I often wish I could be with them and help push the battle to the gates of the enemy. I would have been with them many years ago, but for one of our beloved and now sainted Bishops.

Mr. Hugh Price Hughes, discussing in the "Independent," the question of organic union on this side of the Atlantic, seems to take in the situation. He says:

"On the American side of the Atlantic the desire for re-union is not nearly so strong as on the British side, and that for two reasons. In the first place this Continent is so much bigger than our "tight little island," that there is plenty of elbow room for many churches. Different sections of Methodism are not treading upon one another's toes and interfering with one another in the disastrous way with which we are familiar in England. On this vast Continent overlapping and friction do not exist to the same extent. Further, the opposition to organic union exhibited especially by many of the Southern brethren was simply opposition to the one particular method of organic union. They do not unreasonably object to such a union between the Northern and Southern churches as would place the whole of the United States under one General Conference. Such a church would be too vast. It would be unwieldy and unmanageable. But I find that the most representative of the Southern Methodists have no objection whatever to a redistribution of all the white American churches into four General Conferences neither of which should intrude into the territory of the other three. That arrangement would be, in the judgment of the British Methodists, the very essence of re-organic union, because it would entirely prevent overlapping and friction which are so great a curse."

Crossing the Plains in '62.

BY L. B. STATELER.

In 1861 I was appointed to labor on the Grasshopper circuit, Kansas Conference, which embraced the counties of Jefferson, and Jackson in Northern Kansas.

During that year the excitement, caused by the seceding of the Southern states and the issuing of the President's proclamation calling for volunteers to suppress the rebellion, became intense, so much so that our preachers laboring in Kansas were very much disturbed in their work.

In the spring of 1862, while I was laboring on my work, threats were made by desperate and wicked men to the effect that myself and others would be hanged; not for any offence committed, but because we were Southern men and "Southern sympathizers," as we were called. So I soon perceived that I could not labor successfully where there was so much prejudice, nor could I stay with any safety. I at once communicated with Bishop Kavanaugh, asking that he would change me from the work in Kansas to that in Colorado, it being all in one Conference. This he readily did, sending me to take charge of the church at Denver. Having no means to go with, I took such things as I could haul in a wagon fitted up for the trip, as cornmeal and other articles that could be gathered conveniently, and for which it was thought a good market could be found in Denver, which was the general supply point for the mines that had recently been discovered in the Rocky Mountains in Colorado. A man was hired to drive the team of oxen, of which there were five yoke. All being ready, we started in June upon the long journey. I rode on horse back and drove along a few head of cows.

Before leaving I made preparations for the comfort of my family and left my wife and little adopted daughter at our home near Tecumseh, Kansas.

The journey was long and tedious, a distance of seven hundred and fifty miles. We arrived there early in August. I made disposition of what stuff I had brought with me in the wagon, sold the cattle that I had driven through, and sent back to my family something for their support.

I went there expecting to take charge of our church, a very neat brick structure which had been built under the superintendence of Rev. William Bradford, and was the first church built in Colorado. But the first Sunday after I arrived, upon inquiry about preaching I found that the Protestant Episcopals were holding the house built by us, and that day had been set as the time for its dedication, or consecration, as they call it, according to the forms of their church; Bishop Talbot officiating upon the occasion. Thus, I had the privilege, if it can be called such, of sitting in our own house and witnessing its dedication and passage into the hands of another denomination.

The preacher of our church who had been there, thought it best on account of the excitement about the war to return to the states, and, having no means, borrowed a small amount, giving the house into the hands of Col. Chivington, who was the Northern Methodist preacher, and also commanded the military forces at that place. The trustees foolishly sold the church to the Episcopalians for a very small sum, and thus it passed away from us. Hence, I had no place where I could preach in the town of Denver. I preached, however, as opportunity offered. There were very few members.

I disposed of what things I had, and was preparing to return home, the whole country being under intense excitement, just then I received a letter from my wife, stating that our home had been set on fire by an incendiary, that all we had was in ashes and that she and our little girl had barely escaped with their lives. She also told me that such was the excitement there that I must not return, else I would surely be assassinated; and that she would meet me at Fort Kearney on the Platte river about two hundred and fifty miles west from our home, and about four hundred miles from Denver.

After months of effort to procure some one to come with her and assist her, late in the fall, she was ready to start, having hired a man to drive the ox wagon, and she driving her own, a two horse wagon, drawn by two faithful animals that we brought with us all the way to Montana. A man was also hired to drive the loose stock, a few cows and calves that were brought along. The man who drove the team was Mr. Oscar Clark, who now lives near Victor, in Bitter Root Valley. My wife was so delayed, that, when she arrived at Platte river, stern winter had already set in. I had waited for her a whole month while yet the weather was good. When she arrived at Fort Kearney, immediately we started on our dreary journey, facing the severe storms of a rigid Northwestern winter over the bleak and snow covered plains for four or five hundred miles.

We were poorely prepared, not having a sufficent tent to protect us from the cold at night, nor a good stove on which to cook our food. At first we had fuel along the Platte river, but soon it gave out, leaving but a vast open waste before us, and nothing in the shape of timber but a fringe of willow brush along the river bank. When we came to the last timber we put all we could haul into the wagons and suspended it with ropes under the axles that it might last as long as possible. Our suffering during the day were often intense, for we were very poorly clad. At night we were but little better off under our miserable tent and by the broken stove which my wife had brought along, the best she could get. The cold was severe. We had to use iron pins which were driven in the hard frozen ground to hold our tent, under which we laid us down on the ground and got what sleep we could. The snow was from six inches to a foot deep, which we would scrape away the best we could to get a place where we could make our beds down.

About the Workers.

—The following note from our gentlemanly publishers explains itself: "Your paper of Oct. 15th is late coming out. We have been moving into larger and better quarters and could not avoid the delay. Now we are settled and are determined to give you the best paper published." We are glad to hear this. We already have a good paper, but let subscribers, contributors, editor, one and all unite with the publisher in a determined purpose to make the Montana Methodist "the best paper published," especially in the great Northwest.

—We could not keep back the warm tears as we read that thrilling report from Rev. D. F. Bone, and we did not try. The revival fires are burning about Fayette—they generally are where Bone is. He is one of the most successful men in the Missouri Conference; and seems to have inherited in a large measure the mantle of his father-in-law, Rev. Joseph Devlin, who, at the time of his death, had received as many persons into the church and witnessed as many conversions under his many, perhaps, as any man in Missouri. May our brother's prayers for the men and the work in the West be answered, and his own heart and life and home be abuntantly blessed with increased happiness and success in winning souls to Christ.

—Rev. L. B. Stateler writes us from Eureka Springs, Nov. 21st: "Brother and Sister Clarke and myself arrived here on the 19th inst., all in reasonable health, having stood the journey very well. I spent some weeks with our friend, Dr. Morton, and family, in Louisville, Ky. We are comfortably situated here, and are determided to give the waters and climate a fair trial. We cannot now say how long we will remain here—may stay all winter. We have met the preachers here who have received us very kindly—Bro. Williams, P. E., and Bro. Walden, station preacher; they both live in the town."

--Brother Parnall is looking better since his return from the Flathead country. He is busy as he can be about the Master's work. The holding of the protracted meeting at Stevensville has been postponed until after the holidays. The second quarterly meeting for Stevensville circuit will be held at Stevensville the 19th and 20th of December.

—The second quarterly meeting for Wallow will embrace the 26th and 27th of December, and that of Corvallis and Grantsdale the 2nd and 3rd of January, 1892.

—As the next issue of the "Methodist" will not reach its readers until early in January, we take this opportunity of wishing our readers a very Merry Christmas and the happiest New Year possible.

—o—

Christian people in this country, who have never been in a heathen land, have but little conception of the moral and religious degradation of heathenism. Social life is thoroughly corrupt, rotten in every part. Domestic life has none of the pleasures of a Christian home, and the family relations are abused and perverted to a degree which cannot be imagined by one reared in a Christian land. The devil has poisoned the fountain of life, and all its streams are bitter and turbid.

Letter from Washington.

By F. St. Clair.

I want to write you a short sketch, and, it being against editor's rules to use a pencil in correspondence, I scarcely know what to do, as a recent accident to my thumb almost precludes the idea of my writing at all; but I am going to risk a few items any way, and begin by asking your printer's pardon, promising to use a pen as soon as I possibly can.

Our first Quarterly Meeting for the current year was held at Pleasant Valley, Oct. 24–25. Bro. Swift being sick, I was compelled to preside.

I suppose we might as well learn now, as any time, for we expect to reach that dignity some day in the far future, of course!

There was keen disappointment, and this made it only the harder for us to even try to preach; but, trusting in Israel's God, we "went forward," and we feel that we did not go in vain.

The "Love Feast" was glorious. We expected an old time shout, but feeling ran too deep, for utterance, and all the Lord's elect seemed to be filled with quiet Halleluahs!

We have had no accessions during the quarter, but have baptized five children.

I fear, brethren, that we do not pay the attention we ought in getting the parents to consecrate their little ones to Jesus in Holy Baptism. I know we have old prejudices to fight, for we have the most cosmopolitan membership in the great North-west, that it has ever been our lot to meet; but if we are lethargic, other denominations will instil their heresies, into the children's minds, and, instead of preserving the youth for Methodism, they either wander into other folds or out into darkness and eternal despair!

Let us raise a trumpet sound on these lines, and may God help every Christian parent to give their children into His hands, while they are young, so that the evil days may not come when they shall say "I have no pleasure in them."

The financial report was small; but we trust to have our assessments well in hand by the second Quarterly Conference.

In the Sunday School department there is everything to encourage us. We have as Godly a set of men for superintendents, as any church, or work, can produce. Give me a hundred such men as Priest, Gobbert and Spencer, and I will take this country for God and for Southern Methodism. If all of you preachers had such a financial Agent as we have, we could send back the answering cry of a self-supporting Conference in a very short time. Try the plan, brethren.

We have begun a protracted service at one of our new points. We are praying for a time of refreshing from the presence of the Lord. All over our Circuit the revival fires are ready to burst out. We are preaching almost exclusively to the church, now, knowing that there the power must begin. Suppose you have a meeting at which many are converted, and the membership is cold, or lukewarm, or dead, who will nurse those "babes in Christ?" Zion must "travail" before sons and daughters will be born unto the Lord. If there is hard feeling between two members, that alone often keeps back the blessing. Awful fact that we, as Christians, by not paying our vows unto the Lord, will keep sinners from being converted around us. There must be deep heart-searchings, confessions of sins, renewed consecrations, and earnest prayer for the baptism of the Holy Ghost, before there will be a very far-reaching revival. Brother Hornbuckle struck a responsive chord in my soul, when he said the revivals on his work last year, "began at the parsonage." "Go preach my Gospel"—but "Tarry ye at Jerusalem, until ye be endued with power from on high." A man says, "O I am a revivalist!" Well, you are to blame, not your Lord, and here is a never-failing recipe, which we heartily recommend, and, instead of preaching essays, and musty sermons, you will become a flaming herald of the Cross, and sharing the "joys of God's salvation." Sinners shall be converted under your preaching, and scores will be added to the Church of such as shall be saved, instead of only an occasional one or two.

We have much to make us rejoice, in regard to our work here. The desert garden blooms awhile, and the sweet perfume of the "Rose of Sharon;" the "Lily of the Valley," is wafted upon the breezes, and where ribald song and silly dance held undisturbed sway, Christ, the Lord, reigns, and "Jesus lover of my soul" floats out upon the scented air, and happy homes filled with cheerful faces, abound, from whose altars prayer, like an incense divine, rises to Heaven's Throne; and the Father of us all dispensing blessings so profusely among the children of men. We once more have a manifestation of the uplifting, ennobling power of the Gospel of the "Man of Galilee."

Even infidels are compelled to acknowledge that something has happened, for one told me that he did not believe what I was preaching, but that a week's preaching which he heard me do was worth six months' schooling in the neighborhood.

Napoleon's Testimony to Jesus Christ.

Conversing one day at St. Helena, as his custom was, about the great men of antiquity, and comparing himself with them, the First Napoleon suddenly turned round to one of his suite and asked him: "Can you tell me who Jesus Christ was?" The officer owned that he had not yet taken much thought of such things. "Well, then," said Napoleon, "I'll tell you." He then compared Christ with himself and with the heroes of antiquity, and showed that Jesus far surpassed them.

"I think I understand somewhat of human nature," he continued; "and I tell you all these were men, and I am a man; but not one is like him; Jesus Christ was more than man. Alexander, Cæsar, Charlemagne and myself founded great empires, but upon what did the creations of our genius depend? Upon force. Jesus alone founded his empire upon love, and to this very day millions would die for him."

"The Gospel is no mere book," said he at another time, "but a living creature, with a vigor, a power, which conquers all that opposes it. Here lies the Book of books upon the table," touching it reverently; "I do not tire of reading it, and do so daily with equal pleasure. The soul, charmed with the beauty of the Gospel, is no longer its own; God possesses it entirely; it is his. What a proof of the divinity of Jesus Christ! Yet in this wonderful sovereignty he has but one aim—the spiritual perfection of the individual, the purification of his conscience, his union with what is true, the salvation of his soul. Men wonder at the conquests of Alexander, but here is a conqueror who draws men to himself for their highest good; who unites to himself, incorporates into himself, not a nation, but the whole human race!"

"From first to last," said the great Napoleon, on another occasion, "Jesus is the same; always the same—majestic and simple, infinitely severe and infinitely gentle. Throughout a life passed under the public eye, he never gives one occasion to find fault. The prudence of his conduct compels our admiration by its union of force and gentleness. Alike in speech and action, he is enlightened, consistent and calm. Sublimity is said to be an attribute of divinity; what name, then, shall we give him in whose character was united every element of the sublime?

"I know men and I tell you that Jesus is not a man. Everything in him amazes me. His spirit outreaches mine, and his will confounds me. Comparison is impossible between him and any other being in the world. He is truly a being by himself. His ideas and his sentiments, the truth that he announces, his manner of convincing, are all beyond humanity and the natural order of things.

"His birth, and the story of his life; the profoundness of his doctrine, which overturns all difficulties, and is their most complete solution; his Gospel; the singularity of his mysterious being; his appearance; his empire; his progress through all centuries and kingdoms—all this to me a prodigy, an unfathomable mystery.

"I see nothing here of a man. Near as I may approach, closely as I may examine, all remains above my comprehension—great with a greatness which crushes me. It is in vain that I reflect—all remains unaccountable. I defy you to cite another life like that of Christ."—Florida Christian Advocate.

Among the historical relics which will attract attention at the World's Fair, in 1893, but few will be looked upon with more interest than a large Spanish cannon, which the Governor of San Domingo has permitted Mr. Ober to bring to this country for exhibition at the fair. It was used to guard the citadel of San Domingo while Columbus was a prisoner in the hands of the Spanish authorities. It has been in the same place ever since until recently. It has been shipped to the Chief of Construction at Chicago, and will be used in some way to ornament the Exposition grounds. Do.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.—The plan of attempting to raise a half million dollars yearly for missionary work through Christian Endeavor Societies each member giving two cents a week, is meeting with great success. One hundred and fifty societies report 5,000 names — that means $5,000 which sum will support seventy first-class native preachers in India and China.

TWO PICTURES.

One sunny day, many years ago, an English artist was sketching a bit of landscape scenery not far from Naples, when a pretty little round-faced boy, wtth bright eyes and long curls, approached him. As the painter looked at the lovely child, the thought occured to him that his innocent, dimpled face would afford an excellent subject for the head of a chernb. Young Guiseppe was easily prevailed upon to stand in the proper position, and the sketeh was speedily made.

About twenty years later the same painter happened to be in Rome, and casually strolled into a court of justice, where a band of brigands, who had been captured after the commission of atrocious crimes, were on their trial. The artist was struck by the villianous aspect of these ruffians, and especially with one more forbidding than the rest, whose scowling countenance, defaced by scars, gave ample evidence of his brutal disposition. He thought he had never looked upon a more ferocious visage, and thereupon made a hasty sketch for a picture, which should appear in striking contrast with that of the cherub, still in his possession.

The two paintings were exhibited under the names of "Innocence" and "Guilt."

Subsequently a strange fact came to light. The artist was shocked to learn that the two portraits represented the same individual! The artless, innocent child, and the blood-stained, callous criminal, were one and the very same! What a contrast!

The most beautiful object in creation is a lovely infant; its sweet smile mirrors perfect love, and its confidence teaches simple trust. And yet, sad to say, even here the taint of Adam's sin is inherited, and ere long it becomes developed into actual transgression; ere long anger, self-will, evil dispositions of various kinds are manifested. proving the truth of the words, "Behold, I was shapen in iniquity, and in sin did my mother conceive me" (Psalm. li. 5). "The imagination of man's heart is evil from his youth" (Genesis viii. 21.)

Well, then, as it canuot be denied that we were born in sin, and have committed many transgressions, there must of necessity be a radical change, —we must have a new heart,—ere we can enter heaven, and appear in the presence of a Holy God. "Verily. verily, I say unto thee, Except a man be born again, he cannot see the kingdom of God" (John iii. 3.)

How can the great change be wrought? How am I to get a new heart?" By looking unto Jesus. "Look unto Me," says the Saviour, "and be ye saved, all the ends of the earth." "For God so loved the world, that He gave His only begotton Son, that whosoever believeth in Him should not perish, but have everlasting life" (John iii. 16)

By trusting in His atoning death. "In whom we have redemption through his blood, the forgiveness of sins, according to the riches of His grace" (Ephesians i. 7).

"The blood of Jesus Christ His Son cleanseth from all sin" (1 John i. 7).

For to all who come to Jesus He gives His life-giving Spirit, to create them anew. "As many as received Him, to them gave He power to become the sons of God, even to them that believe on His name: which were born, not of blood, nor of the will of the flesh, nor of the will of man, but of God" (John i. 12. 13.)

—o—

'Tis Worth It All.

Yes, to get hold of the grand truth that God loves the poor fallen world, and that he loves me, one of the fallen ones in it, is worthy any trouble, care, pain—anything which one may have to go through in order to get a firm hold of it. And yet so many esteem it so lightly that they would not go through even a little for it. St. Paul counted all things but "loss" that he "might win Christ." Many an one counts any thing, every thing, precious above Christ. Would that there more of the spirit of the poor, old negro among us all. The poor, old fellow was very anxious to be able to read his Bible. He lived a long way from the missionary's house, and yet he would come, whenever he had time, to learn a lesson. It was such hard work, and he made so little progress, that the missionary got tired, and told him one day that he had better give it up. "No, massa," said he with great earnestness, "me neber gib it up until me die." And then pointing to the beautiful words which he had just spelled out in St. John iii:16: "God so loved the world," he said, with tears in his eyes, "Its worth all de trouble, massa, to read dat one verse." And in truth, it is worth all that the world can give to know that one word "so"—to know it as much as we can know it, for, in truth, it is illimitable, and I am glad that it is so. If God had said He had loved the world or my poor soul up to any specified value—millions of pounds, millions of worlds, if you like—I might always have been saying, "Ah! my sins are so great they exceed all this." But when he gives me the illimitable, then I know his love covers my all of sin and want. —Selected.

"I Can't Afford It."

"Indeed I can't afford it," was the frequent reply of a merchant when asked to contribute to religious or missionary objects. He was doing an extensive and apparently lucrative business, and professed to be warm in his devotion to Christ. Yet his givings were very meager, when he gave at all; and, generally, his ready excuse was at hand, "I can't afford it," as his apology for refusing even a trifle.

A well known gentleman, who lived in the same city, and sometimes acted as unpaid collector for a very important missionary society called one day at the merchant's dwelling house to solicit a contribution. Often had he been denied at the office with the words, "I can't afford it," and in the grand residence his eyes rested on the magnificence which several open doors unveiled, he began to see that there was some truth in the apology after all.

The owner of the house shortly appeared. His visitor explained the reason of his call but immediately added, "I see, sir, that you really cannot afford it, and I cannot think of presenting any claim upon you. Such a scale of expenditure as I see indicated by every thing about me can indeed leave you little, if anything, for the cause of Christ. I must look elsewhere for support to our operations, good morning sir."

The well-meant reproof did its intended work. The merchant ere long, sought an interview with his faithful monitor, and thanked him warmly for his straightforward but brotherly remarks. Handing him a check for $200, as a donation to the missionary society for which he was collecting, he said that henceforth he meant to act as a steward of God and that never again would his style of living prove a hinderance to the exercise of ardent piety and practical love.—Ark Methodist.

EDITORIAL.

The Year 1892.

The year 1892 will be hailed with delight by millions of men and women, and especially by the sixty millions of America's loyal sons and daughters. It is to be a monumental year, the marking of a mile-stone in the march of the centuries, when we will pause to see how far we have gotten, and receive the congratulations of our neighbors who are getting nearer to us as the years roll on; an elevation from which we will look back over four hundred years that have elapsed since the New World was discovered, and possibly try to look forward with prophetic ken to future possibilities. The name of Christopher Columbus will be repeated and honored, and his deeds rehearsed by millions, in all languages, and in all lands. And he is worthy of the honor bestowed by a world that is reaping the fruit of his genius, and his toil, his faith, and indomitable perseverance and courage. His achievement was not by mere chance, but the fruit of honest toil, directed by care intelligence and a determined purpose. The titles and honors conferred upon him by courts and kings, were not won by deeds of violence on fields of blood and courage, but by intellectual acumen and genius in utilizing the gifts of God, in imparting rather than destroying life, in extending and building up civilization rather than tearing it down. Alexander conquered a world and covered it with graves, while Columbus created one—brought to light the New World, and peopled it and filled it with life and joy; and his achievements even quickened the thought and stimulated the enterprise of the Old World as it had never been before.

The world was not ready for the conquest of North America, when it was first discovered; and it is well that this was so, for the papal power with its worse than heathen darkness and superstition, would have prevailed and spread its blighting curse over our fair land as in Mexico and South America to-day. But God, in his mercy, held back the tide until after the Reformation, when the love of liberty and the desire for freedom of conscience, free speech and free government began to burn in the hearts of our fore-fathers; and they were thrust to plant the germs of a true faith, and of republican government in this virgin soil which has been so congenial and productive.

What wonderful changes, what mighty achievements have been wrought! Where, at the beginning of the year 1492, all was the blankest and blackest abyss of darkness to the then civilized world—thought by the masses to be but a wild watery waste, now flourishes one of the greatest nations that the sun shines upon. The minute mustard seed, so small and unpromising in appearance, has grown unto a mighty tree that is spreading forth its branches invitingly to the birds (the inhabitants of the nations) to come and light upon it.

If so much has been accomplished, with such capital to commence with and under such conditions, as have attended its development, what with the wonderful accretion of intellectual, moral and material forces, with our schools, churches, homes; with steam and lightning harnessed to our ships and railroad trains, and flashing our thought from continent to continent in the twinkling of an eye; with sixty millions of enterprising inhabitants to utilize these forces, carrying them on to still higher stages of development, and with the sympathy and co-operation of the world which is studying to learn war no more—trying to settle its difficulties by arbitration, and to spend the force,s once wasted in war, in seeking and developing a higher civilization; and with the Sun of Righteousness shining upon us and directing our energies—what may we not expect even in the century to come? The resources of this Hemisphere are yet in the infancy of their development. We are inclined to think that the life and strength and powers and glory, that have characterized the nations that in various ages have ruled the Old World, will in course of time be reproduced and, to a great extent, concentrated in this Western Hemisphere. Westward the star of empire has been taking its course for nearly six thousand years. And who knows but God in his providence will use the fires and the forces that are being concentrated here, with which to move on "to the East by way of the West," and regenerate the heathen world and subdue its millions to the Prince of Peace? Who knows the part that our great and growing West, will take in this work? Let every Christian stand in his place and do his whole duty.

The Old Year and The New.

The old year is past and another is come in to take its place. No, not that, but to fill its own place or space in the cycles that are sweeping us on to eternity. It is a fit occasion for sober thought and reflection, and for action. Another volume of the Book of Life that we are writing is now closed, sealed up and laid away until that great day when "the books shall be opened" and "every man shall give account of himself to God." We will have to face the record that we are now making. Is it not well to pause and see how the account stands to-day? What have we to show for the "pound" entrusted to us by the Nobleman who has left us, and kept us, and fed and clothed us here upon His estate, with the injunction, "Occupy till I come?" The year has gone very rapidly, alas, it has "flown away but too fast," but it has brought many changes. We are none of us just what nor where we were, when it began—all better or worse—which? There has been much to cause sorrow and grief at times, but also much to be thankful for. Life itself is a precious boon, especially when in harmony with Him who is "the Way, the truth, and the Life." The Everlasting Arms have been beneath us. Our trials have only "made the promises sweeter," and kept us closer to Him who is our refuge and strength.

While the merchant is busy casting accounts, balancing his sheets, and listing stock, and planning for business on a safer and better basis; how important that the Christian take an inventory of his spititual capital and form a closer partnership with the Lord Christ in the practice of that business which "is profitable unto all things, having promise of the life that now is, and of that which is to come.

Thank God for a new lease of life; that he forgives our follies of the past and gives us strength for time to come. A new book is opened, with pages clean and white, in which we may write during the coming year. May it not be blurred nor blotted by the blunders of the past. "Forgetting the things which are behind and reaching forth unto those things which are before," let us "press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus." A happy new-year to all!

NOTES.

—Mrs. S. R. Cox writes from St. Joseph, Mo., renewing her subscription, and says: "The paper is full of interesting matter and is full of vim. My heart is thrilled with joy as I hear of our success in that country. Montana will always have my prayers, for my heart has often ached for her servants in their heroic struggle. Oh, that means could be found for her aid. Bishop Foster's speech, at the meeting of the Missionary committee, is the most sensible thing that I have ever read from the pen of any man in the M. E. Church. Eyes are being opened in regard to the usefulness of our Church."

—In a private letter from Rev. Joseph King, of Nevada, Mo., Presiding Elder of Lexington District, we learn of the death of Rev. W. W. Jared, who was once a member of the Western Conference. On the evening of his death, he preached and returned to the parsonage, and died in an hour after retiring. The writer says he went from the pulpit, and in two hours was with the angels. How suddenly the call comes some times. But what matters it if we are only ready. This takes one of my best men from the Lexington District. But I trust the Lord will provide a supply.

—We had a delightful service on Sunday during the quarterly meeting at Stevensville. The congregations were better than usual, and very attentive. It is refreshing to witness the interest taken in the Sunday School. It is hard to tell who

The Lord is in the movement. Brother Parnall pressed the matter of a Christmas gift from each member and friend of the church for missions, and with success.

—Rev. J. D. Hammond, President of Central College, at Fayette, Mo., writes: "We are doing well this year." We always rejoice at the prosperity of old Central.

—We have received a small booklet entitled "The Modern Sunday School Superintendent and His Work," by J. R. Pepper. It contains 32 pages in large clear type, and on excellent paper. It is taking in its appearance and more so in the matter it contains. We could not stop until we had read it through. Every Sunday School Superintendent ought to have it.

ALONG THE LINE.

PALOUSE.

J. W. Compton:—Your paper is giving great satisfaction. Our church is nearly completed. Don't know when it will be dedicated, as we are making strenuous efforts to get Bishop Fitzgerald to come, and don't know how soon, he can if at all. We will notify you and want you to be on hand, too. [We would rejoice to be there on that occasion, but can not make any promises now.—Ed].

SPOKANE.

Not having seen anything in the "Methodist" from Spokane for some time, I thought I would write you a letter, thinking perhaps you might get some notes from it for the paper. I was afraid you would think we were dead. [No, we did not think that, for we knew there were too many live Methodists at Spokane for that, but we thought they were very backward about writing, and hope that they will not delay so long next time.—Editor.] We are not dead, neither are we sleeping. We were without a pastor about two months, and had no preaching, except what few times Brother Swift preached for us in the time that he could spare from his work on the District. Our new minister, Bro. W. H. Hodges, is with us, and also his beloved wife. He has made a good start. The church is growing. The prayer-meetings are very well attended. On last Wednesday night before closing the services, the pastor invited penitents. Seven came forward, and two of them joined the church. On Sunday evening eight or ten came forward for prayers and two more joined the church, but no conversions yet. Some of God's children who had wandered away like the prodigal, returned. Bless the Lord.

We are having a good Sunday-school, also a mission school. We are delighted to tell you that we are having old-fashioned class-meetings every Sunday evening before church. It reminds me of good old times. We are expecting a gracious revival this winter. It has already begun among the church members [that is the right place, and judging from the report it seems to be spreading, too.—Editor]. I will remit soon for the "Methodist." We can't get along without it. Our pastor is a consecrated man.

A Methodist.

FROM KEYTESVILLE, MO.

Dear Brother Stanley:—I have been reading your excellent little paper, the "Montana Methodist," for some time, and I thought I would scribble a little to you, for my heart is in sympathy with you, and my prayers reach out to all the missionaries everywhere. I am now in my seventieth year, and I think sometimes what a joy it would be to be with you in some of your good meetings out there. It would do my soul good. I have read your letters in the "Advocate," till I feel like I am acquainted with you. I have heard old Brother Stateler preach in Kansas, and, when I would read in the "Advocate" about his travels, I would breathe a prayer that our kind Heavenly Father would be with him. When you meet Brother Taylor give him my love and ask him if he remembers old Sister Stith, on the Bucklin work. My prayer is that God may bless the missionaries, their wives, and their children. I enclose a dollar to renew my subscription to the "Methodist."

Mrs. E. A. Adams.

We are glad to have these cheering words from our sister. The thought that mother, or wife, or sister, was thinking of and praying for him and expecting something of him has animated many a soldier on the field of battle and caused him to do his best; so the thought that so many mothers in Israel were at home praying for the preacher boys out on the western frontier, and longing to hear good reports from them has warmed and thrilled many an itinerant's heart, inspired him to deeds of valor, and helped to make conquests for the King of kings. We know whereof we speak. God bless our dear mothers and sisters who are working and praying for the extension of the Master's Kingdom.—Editor.

FROM CALEDONIA, MO.

Rev. E. J. Stanley, Dear Brother:—About one year ago Bro. Stateler sent me the "Montana Methodist." Herewith I send you one dollar to renew for another year.

I cannot, in words, express the admiration I cherish for the brave men and women who toil and suffer in planting the purest type of Methodism in the virgin soil of one of the most interesting regions of our great country. You have my sympathy and my prayers.

J. C. Berryman.

We greatly appreciate these kind words, coming as they do, from one who has been for nearly sixty years in the ranks, laboring as a missionary among the Indians of the West as a preacher of the Gospel to the people on the frontier, and as an educator of the young, doing valuable service wherever he has gone. For many years he was associated with our venerable Stateler in the Indian work in Kansas, and the wife of his early manhood fell at her post and her ashes sleep in the burying ground near the old Manual Labor School near Westport, Mo. His venerable face and his manly form, as when we were but a boy we saw him stand up in the Conference held at Kansas City, in 1867, when Smith, and Green, and McFerrin, and Schon and Marvin, and a host of other godly men—all gone now—were there, and give in his report, appears before us, in mind, again to thrill and to inspire us. It is an honor that angels might covet, to be permitted to take the banner where he and others planted it amid such privation and hardship as was endured in those early days and carry it "into the regions beyond," and unfurl it and see it wave in triumph amid the valleys and peaks of the Rocky Mountains and along the slopes of the Pacific Coast. This is our work. May we lift high the royal banner and carry it forward triumphantly, and at last, with Berryman, Newton, Stateler, Marvin, and others, have an abundant entrance into the everlasting kingdom above.

ROCKFORD.

Dear Bro. Stanley:—At the last session of the E. Columbia Conference, I was assigned to the Rockford charge as a supply. After some delay, I am in the field. My first quarterly meeting embraced the 5th Sunday in Nov. Bro. Swift was with me, preaching three excellent sermons. This is a new circuit, but by no means a small one. I have been preaching in the bounds of this circuit, occasionally, for the last eight years. We have some as true Southern Methodists on this work as I have seen on this coast. At some of our preaching places there are but few professing Christian people. But we have good congregations, and as attentive as I could ask. We hope and pray we may soon have gracious revivals all along the line. Frequently I find the "Montana Methodist" in the homes of this people. It is very popular in the Conference. May God bless its editor.

Bro. Hodges, "the new preacher" at Spokane, has started off well. He is a good preacher. A good worker and will succeed. Let all the brethren pray for a revival in Spokane.

Dear Brethren of the Columbia and East Columbia Conferences: When I met some of you nine years ago at Conference, in Walla Walla, I did not expect to live long. I left the itinerant ranks, expecting never to be one of you again in this life. I came to Spokane with nothing, so far as this world's goods is concerned. I located a piece of land and went to work to try to make a living, and if possible regain my health. Praise God for His goodness. I have plenty of this world's goods, and, best of all, I have a good degree of health, and am able once more to take my stand on Zion's walls. "Blessed privilege to point sinners to the Lamb of God." Dear Brethren, will you pray, that I may be able to continue in the "good old way." May the good Lord bless you all.

E. P. Warren,

Spokane, Dec. 3, '91.

HELENA DISTRICT—A. C. COUEY.

The pastors in the different charges have been recently sending in reports of their work, so that I need not write except in a general way.

Since Conference there have been forty-five to fifty accessions to the church. Most of these have come in during the past three months. I feel quite confident, from special inquiry, the spiritual state of the churches is on the up grade. In some of the charges it is very good. The Sunday-schools are not as full as at the end of last Conference year. Hibernation seems almost inevitable. Some of the rural schools have made great improvement in this respect however. The number of people now reached by our pulpit in the District, is considerably more than a year ago. Oh, that the Word may prove a "savor of life unto life."

There has been some growth in the material support of the church. A few of the charges are doing admirably. I hope they may "go on unto perfection." I am urging self support everywhere on the District. The very earliest day that a station or circuit can become independent of missionary help, the better for them, and of course it is greatly desired by the Board, so as to enter new fields in Montana, where we must for conscience sake.

PARSONAGE AND HOME MISSION—THE WOMAN'S SOCIETY.

The women of the Helena District are doing nobly since re-organization at the Annual Conference in Helena last summer.

Miss Maggie Evans has proven a very efficient "field" hand as District Secretary. She loves the work and makes it "go."

Organization of auxiliaries have been effected at Deer Lodge, Butte and Bozeman. Correspondence and arrangements for organization at other places, when practicable, show what a few live, devoted women can do. If Miss Evans had the funds, so not to be restrained, the whole ground would be thoroughly worked before another Annual Conference. At the places mentioned, about 60 members have been placed on the rolls. Parsonage building and repairing have received unusual attention for the quarter past. I can say this: If the Woman's Parsonage and Home Mission Society does not prove a success this year, it will be for want of proper co-operation by the pastors. Where they "help those women" there is no such thing as failure. Brethren, note this fact.

THE NEEDY FIELDS.

In the bounds of the Helena District, there are now four needy and unsupplied fields. These are Anaconda City, where we have both parsonage and church; in the Deer Lodge valley, where we have an open, unoccupied field; Townsend Circuit, where we have a splendid church and quite an open door. This includes the village of Townsend, and up and down the Missouri river, both above and below the town from ten to fifteen miles each way.

On a recent visit to Park County, on Shields River, I find four or five communities, lying from five to twenty miles apart, and containing one hundred and twenty-five families, wholly destitute of the ministry from any church of Christ, aside from an occasional spare Sunday from Bro. Warren, of Bozeman Circuit. You state in a former issue, Mr. Editor, that the work here mentioned lies 70 miles from Bozeman Circuit. It can be reached six months in the year, via Mountain route, with twenty-five miles from Bro. Warren's new parsonage at Belgrade, if old timers know distances. [We got our information from the pastor. Suppose that he referred to the distance by rail.—Editor.

I have written a letter of special appeal to Bishop Duncan, urging that he supply us if possible. I have not heard a word in response from the good Bishop as yet. I am watching and waiting. As Warren admits, the "wind blows" in a part of the Shields river Country, but the people are there, till they go up or down for eternity.

PENDLETTON DISTRICT.

Dear "Methodist":—I have been too busy to write to you for some time. I have just finished my first round of quarterly meetings. The brethren are all settling down to work in good earnest; not without opositions, and difficulties enough to give variety to the work; though with but few exceptions, well received and well pleased with their work and hopeful.

We wish to call attention to a few prominent features in the work of the first quarter: The ring-leader of horse racing in the neighborhood of Bro. Barnhart's first quarterly meeting, called on Bro. Barnhart on his way home, after the quarterly meeting had closed, and requested Bro. Barnhart to pray for him; he and Bros. Barnhart and Crossen stopped right there and got down on their knees in the dusty road in the darkness of the night and held a prayer-meeting, and the horse-racer was converted; the services were re-called for Monday night and he joined the church. We held a Camp-meeting in Pine Valley, on Bro. Crego's work, Sept. 17-27; the wind blew, and the rain and snow fell, and the frost came and beat upon that camp-meeting, and it fell not, for it was (spiritually speaking), founded upon a rock—nine conversions and additions. One man reclaimed and licensed to preach at Bro. Yoakum's quarterly meeting; he entered the work with zeal.

Our new transfer, Bro. Shelton, is taking hold of the work with a master's hand; we like him and bid him welcome. O, that the Lord of the harvest would send us more such men. When Bro. Larkin closed his last year's work on Pomeroy Circuit, he left a subscription of over $1,000, to build a church at Covello. When Bro. Gibbs (Larkins' successor) went up there after Conference, a conversation took place between him and a minister of another Methodist church; which was substantially as follows:

Pompous Preacher.—"You do not intend to build that church here, do you?"

Gibbs (meekly).—"Yes, sir; I think we will."

P. P.—"Well, you can't do it."

G.—"Well, we will try."

P. P.—"Why did you appoint members of our church on your building committee; do you want us to build you a church?"

G.—"I presume it was thought best to show a fraternal spirit and get the co-operation of all."

P. P.—"These people are not your people, they are our people; they are not in sympathy with you, they are in sympathy with us."

G.—"Well, Bro. M."—"I am sent here by the authority of our church, and I intend to to take the matter in hand and examine it thoroughly and act on my own judgment."

P. P.—"Well, you can't build."

Sequel.—The carpenter's finished their work, Dec. 4th; the bills have all been paid as fast as they have been presented; all the church lacks is painting and seating; and the Pompous Preacher has returned to Bro. Gibbs and apologized for his uncharitable words.

Bro. Gibbs has appointed the first Sunday in January to commence a revival meeting in the new church. The new church is a credit to the people of Covello, as also to Brother Gibbs. It is a neat frame 30x50 ft; 15 ft. from floor to ceiling, and substantially built.

E. G. Michael.

P. S.—The people at Dayton have completed a neat parsonage there.

M.

FROM WALLA WALLA.

Dear Bro. Stanley:—After a long time I write you a line. I have read the "Methodist" with pleasure and profit. I feel a growing interest in Montana Methodism and rejoice in your success. I have been here several months, and have become acquainted with my people, and think our work is growing in interest.

We are not a numerous people in Walla Walla, but are in love with the church, and believe the Lord will give us an increase, and we are praying for a revival. We have been wonderfully blessed of the Lord in this Conference, and are expecting to see yet greater display of His power to save all that will believe on "Him."

Bro. Stanley, you know most of the preachers of the East Columbia Conference, and I may say they, as a body of men, are as consecrated and zealous as any men I ever knew.

Led by such a devoted band of men, I believe our Zion will have a large share in the evangelization of this Western country. Bro. E. G. Michael has finished his first round, and starts to Boise to commence the second. He reports progress on every charge, and the pastors all at their posts of duty. Our District Conference is to be held at La Grande. Can't you come?

In love,

M. V. Howard.

FROM DAYTON, WASH.

Dear Bro Stanley:—To let you know that some of us at Dayton, Wash., are still mindful of you and the spicy little "Methodist," I drop you a line. Our pastor, Rev. J. H. Shelton, transfer from the Mo. Conference, is at his post. He was detained in coming on account of sickness in his family. We think we have the best pastor in the Conference, and we think every charge should think that way. Bro. Shelton is a good preacher, with a highly cultivated Christian lady for his companion. Three lovely little children make up his happy family. We have just completed a cosy parsonage at a cost of about $700 on our church lots, and our pastor and family are comfortably domiciled in our own house. With a new church and parsonage, a good preacher, only one thing is wanting to insure a reasonable amount of success at Dayton; that is that our little flock live godly, be as humble as we are dependent. If this be so, I feel confident we will see grand results during this Conference year. Pray for us, that it may thus be; amen. So far as I know the work in the Conference is very prosperous. I hear that Bro. Isbell, at Pendleton, is in very poor health. May the Lord deal gently with him.

M. R. Hanger.

About the Workers.

—We were wondering what had become of Brother Michael and the men about the Blue Mountains. We feared there was a lull in the battle, and little to write about. We might have known better. His letter in this issue reveals our mistake, "Too busy to write," explains it. But he has tidings when he does send. We rejoice that the battle is still being pressed with such vigor in that direction and that victory perches upon our banner.

—The strange freak of grace that changed a railroad engineer into a Methodist preacher seems to be repeating itself in the labors of our brother who was so wondrously saved. Last year a dancing club was turned into a class meeting, and a man who was engaged in the sport of scaring rabbits from under the house were the meetings were held and shooting them while they would run away, was brought under deep conviction (the devil overdid the thing) and was powerfully converted. Now then we have it from the presiding elder's own pen, that a horse-racer overtakes the ex-engineer preacher— Barnhart —in the road with a heart all broken up on account of sin; a prayer-meeting is held in the dusty road, right there in the darkness of night and the man is convert- and joins the church. Thank God that we have preachers who are in sympathy with men in all conditions and can get close to them, and that the Gospel, as preached by them, is proven to be the power of God unto salvation. What news shall we hear next from La Grande? We shall not be much surprised at anything from that quarter.

—We rejoice to hear of that successful camp-meeting on Brother Creog's work, and we are not much surprised at it, either. Bro. Crego is not the man to stop his work for floods and storms. How is that church building enterprise in Eagle Valley progressing? We wish that our Brother Saunders could make the speech before the Board of Church Extension, when application is made for assistanee then, that he made at the Pendleton District Conference last spring. We would have no doubt as to the result. Our Brother Morton and the Board delight to help such cases as that.

—The news of Brother Gibb's success is refreshing. He is the man to conquer a peace, and do it in a peaceful way, too. It requires grace in the heart to win and retain the esteem of those who have opposed us and who have been thwarted in their purposes

—We missed Brother Couey from his place in our columns for several issues, and welcome him back again. We are refreshed by the good tidings he sends. While we accept his excuse for the present, yet in the language frequently heard in the love-feast we say "speak up, brethren; let not one wait for another."

—We are pained to learn of the death of Rev. M. R. Jones, of the Missouri Conference which occurred Nov. 24. He was a good and useful man.

The Montana Methodist.

—Rev. W. M. Prottsman helped to bring out the first issue of the "St. Louis Christian Advocate," and was its first paid subscriber. He is generally first in every good enterprise of which he has any knowledge. He is and always has been a good friend of our Montana work.

—Rev. L. W. Flowers is preaching with his accustomed earnestness to good audiences. His second quarterly meeting will be held at Corvallis the second Saturday and Sunday in January.

—Sister Robertson, one of our efficient church workers at Stevensville, has returned from a visit to her brother in Washington.

—Brother Squires writes: "The work is prospering all along the line at Butte. If there is any virtue in the fumes of burning brimstone to influence men in the right direction, then our brother up there ought to have crowded houses just now."

—They tell us that the Missoula District is progressing. On the 16th of November there came into our midst a personage who was at once styled "the young preacher." He is not a "transfer," but from all indications has come to stay. He possesses good lungs with the disposition to cultivate them day and night —particularly the latter—and has the happy—or unhappy—faculty of making the subject interesting and of keeping his audience—the entire house—awake, often till a very late hour. He wears the cognomen of "E. J. Stanley, Jr." We join most heartily in the wish expressed by a good lady sending congratulations, "that he may be a much better man than his father."

—The Rocky Mountain Methodist says: "Our Montana brethren are pressing the battle. God give them the victory. We rejoice in their prosperity and success." So do we rejoice most heartily at the success of our brethren in Colorado and New Mexico. Many times, long before we had a paper of our own in Montana, have we been filled and thrilled while reading in the Colorado Methodist the notes of victory from Needham and Buch and their co-laborers in that field. We always welcome the Methodist to our table. Long may it wave.

—We greatly regret to see the announcement that Rev. D. Atkins, of the Columbia Conference, has gone to Hendersonville, N. C., where he has been assigned work for the ensuing year. The ill-health of his wife is given as the reason for his return. Our readers well remember the article entitled "House Raising" written by Mrs. Atkins, in the interest of Parsonage Building.

General News Notes.

—According to the New York Sun, the latest and most authoritative estimate of the world's population gives a total of 1,480,000,000, divided up as follows:

Europe, 357,379,000, or 94 to the square mile.

Asia, 825,954,000, or 47 to the square mile.

Africa, 163,953,000, or 14 to the square mile.

The Americans, 121,613,000, or 8 to the square mile.

Australia, 3,230,000, or one to the square mile.

Polar regions, 80,400.

Grand total, 1,479,729,400.

—Governor Toole has issued a proclamation calling for a convention to meet at Helena, Montana, Jan. 7, 1892. It will be composed of delegates from all parts of the state. The object is to consider the question of irrigation, and we suppose to take steps to procure assistance from the General Government in reclaiming our arid lands by increasing the facilities for husbanding the water supply and conveying it to the arid districts. It is a subject of vast importance to Montanians.

—Of the 5,500,000 persons carried last year on steam vessels, but 65 were killed. This is a safer mode of locomotion than walking.

—The new Chilian government is greatly displeased by the President's message. They will sober down ere long. If our flag means anything, and our government is what it claims to be, it should protect its citizens, especially its servants (seamen and soldiers) in foreign lands.

—A bill has been introduced in Congress for a Standard Car-Coupler to be so devised as to dispose with the necessity of any person going between the cars to couple or uncouple them. Such an arrangement would save hundreds of lives every year.

—The election of Mr. Crisp, of Americus, Ga., as Speaker of the House, naturally gives great pleasure to the people of that noble state and of the South generally. He is said to be a clear headed and very unassuming man.

—The people of Butte have taken it in hand to abate the smoke nuisance to the extent of preventing the roasting of ores in heaps, as heretofore practiced, inside, or within three miles of the city limits. For several days in December the fumes were so dense as to disable a great portion of the men laboring at the smelters. There were seven deaths in one day, attributable, largely, to the poisonous fumes from the roasting heaps.

—One of the most startling events of recent date occurred in an office on Wall Street, N. Y. on the 4th of December. A man called at the office of Russell Sage, the banker, or financier, and presented a letter demanding $1,200,000, with the threat that if it was refused, he would blow him and the house to atoms. The demand was refused, a satchel containing dynamite was thrown upon the floor, which was followed by an explosion like an earthquake that could be heard for a mile. The strange man was literally blown to atoms, the house wonderfully wrecked, one other man killed and several injured, among them Mr. Sage, who will recover. What next!

—Dom Pedro, the ex-emperor of Brazil, died at Paris, where he had gone from his home in Portugal, for medical treatment. He was a good man, an excellent ruler and a true patriot.

A Resident Bishop for the North-west.

Bishop Haygood, it is said, has gone back to Georgia to get men to supply vacant fields in the conferences under his charge. We doubt not that he will succeed.

A new impulse has already been given to our work in the South-west because of his presence there. We had the privilege of grasping the Bishop's hand a few moments after his ordination to the office of a general Superintendent, when we took occasion to express the desire to see him in our Western mountain land before long. We were not a little surprised, and were more than pleased, at the hearty response he made, which was to the effect that he expected to be with us. What he does, he does with his might. When he was elected Bishop, and when he came West, he threw himself, body and soul, into the work before him. This is necessary to success in any undertaking. Particularly is it true with reference to our work in the West. A whole conference composed of men who are known to be transient and ready to depart for other fields when their time is out, and presided over by a Bishop who lives three thousand miles away and perhaps never expects to be at that place again, no matter what the ability of the men composing it, cannot, in the nature of things, get a hold on the people and arouse enthusiasm among them, as if its members were anchored to the soil and their interest and sympathies more fully blended with those of the people living there. Often when it is even whispered that a preacher contemplates a transfer it becomes difficult to hold the interest up to what it was before until the time comes for him to go.

This is why the Lord commissioned men and not angels to preach his Gospel. This accounts, in a large measure, for the success of Methodism. Under God, its preaching is "of the people, for the people, and by the people"—those who have common interests and common sympathies. The work of Bishop Marvin, who spent almost a whole year on the Pacific coast, visiting among the charges and preaching the Gospel of the kingdom everywhere, inspired more confidence and gave greater impetus to our work in that region than it had ever received before. He was there, not simply as the representative of a great ecclesiastical organization, but as a "man full of faith and of the Holy Ghost," preaching, exhorting, advising, praying, weeping and rejoicing with the people; "and much people were added unto the Lord." We rejoice when new men come to help us, and especially when they come to stay. We are elated at the thought of two Episcopal residences west of the Rocky Mountains. But in view of the rapid growth of our population and the increasing demands for more laborers in this interesting section of our great country, we earnestly plead for the establishing of an Episcopal residence here in the North-west, either at Helena, Spokane, Portland or Seattle. It is nearly or quite a thousand miles from Helena to San Francisco, and much farther to Los Angeles. Several of our brethren—Compton, at Palouse, and Waggener, at Wallace, in particular—have new churches completed, and greatly desire the presence and assistance of one of our chief pastors; but, alas! there is not one within two thousand miles of them. This is a bigger country than many of our big men believe it to be. It is destined to be densely populated and immensely wealthy. It must be taken for Christ, or given over to the prince of darkness. Now is the time to secure the strategic points. Who of our "Bishops or other clergy" will say, with Hay good, "I have been preaching 'go' to others for a long time, and I think it is about time I was going"—West.

The article on the "holding of Political Meetings in Church Buildings" that appeared in a recent issue of the "Methodist" was not our writing nor selection. We knew nothing of it until it was in print. We have often held temperance meetings in our churches, but to open a church building to every lecturer that comes along, or to a political organization, just because he is in favor of Prohibition, or because there is a temperance plank in the party platform, is contrary to our faith and practice. The Church of the living God is something more than a temperance organization. It is the pillar and ground of the truth, and its temples and altars are to be kept sacred as places of divine worship.

CROSSING THE PLAINS IN EARLY LIFE.

WEARING THE WINTER OUT.

BY L. B. STATELER.

Our stock—oxen, cows and horses, we had to turn loose and let them get what grass they could and browse upon the willow-brush, and then hitch them up in the morning and go on again. Thus we traveled, suffering with hunger and cold, until we wore the severest part of that winter out, never thinking of going into a house. There was no travel upon the road except by the stage-coach, which we would meet every day. The cold was so intense that the noise made by the wheels grinding upon the snow and ice, could be heard for a great distance, which only added to the dreariness of the surroundings. It was one vast snowy wilderness, as far as the eye could reach, in every direction. There was not even a tree, nor even a hillock, to break the force of the bleak winds that swept the wild wintry waste. We traveled only a few miles—eight or ten—each day.

When we arrived at Denver we had not one dollar—not even a cent of money—to our name. In order to make a living, we rented a house, promising twenty dollars a month, and put in it what little we had. We spread our table with three plates and three knives and forks, our object being to keep a boarding-house. We found a friend at Denver who had come from Missouri. They called him "China" Clarke. He learned whence I came, and something of the distress I was in, and at once, without any security, loaned me fifty dollars, thus proving the truth of the old adage, "a friend in need is a friend indeed." He is now better known as A. G. Clarke, of Helena, Montana.

By that timely friendship in furnishing me the money, I was able to pay off the kind man who had come with me and have something left with which to fix up for housekeeping.

Our boarders gradually increased in number, so that we were enabled to pay our rents and increase our facilities, and erelong we had quite a housefull. By diligent labor we not only supported ourselves, but also made something to go upon.

The opportunity to accomplish much by preaching was not favorable, the town being under military rule. However, I arranged a circuit with several preaching places. The most remote point on it was about thirty miles down the Platte river from Denver. The people were very kind, and without regard to section or party came out to the preaching of the word. At one point they raised forty dollars for me, which was the extent of my salary that year.

We continued there a year and a half, and, seeing but little opportunity to preach to the people or do any good, we concluded it was better to get away from military rule, and where we could live in peace. The place was under marshall law, and it was common for all those who came from Missouri, and all who came armed, upon arriving, to be relieved of whatever weapons they had, though it was known that they were necessary for protection to all those who were crossing the plains, or who lived, or should want to live, upon the frontier, away from the city. Not a few were thrown into prison, and that without any charge of his disloyalty having been made against them.

In the spring of 1864, with many others who had set their faces northward, we gathered up what we could and started for a distant country then called Idaho. During our journey thither, Congress organized another territory, which was called Montana, and in the bounds of that we finally landed.

The company that we came with, numbered nearly three hundred persons, with sixty-two wagons. We were regularly organized under the direction and guidance of Major Bridger, the famous mountaineer, and traveled in regular military order. Mounted armed men would go before and behind. In the morning the teams were harnessed and hitched up, and we would make one move, or drive, a day, traveling till about three or four o'clock in the afternoon. When we came into camp the wagons were driven close together, one behind the other, in a circular form, thus making a strong corral sufficient to hold all the stock, and affording a place of defence from attacks by the Indians, should they come upon us.

When we camped the horses were unharnessed, the oxen unyoked and sent out to grass under a strong guard. About sundown all the stock—horses and cattle—were driven into the corral; the gate was closed and they were kept there until morning. When it was dark, guards were posted all around the camp, so that we could not be surprised by an enemy. At daylight the animals were again sent out and grazed until about seven o'clock, when they were driven in, hooked up, and the march commenced for another day.

There were several families—quite a number of women and children—along. It was soon noised around that a preacher was among the emigrants, and, without ever speaking a word to me, they decided to lay over and not travel on Sunday. From that time on, we had regular Sunday preaching. Quite a number of religious people were along. The emigrants were civil, respectful and quiet. We usually camped near where there were trees, and our services were held under the shade of these friendly pines. The woods and country around were often made vocal with the songs of worship and praise to God, as we thus halted by the wayside on our journey through the trackless wilderness.

During the afternoons the camp presented a scene of activity. The men who were not on guard, were preparing wood, bringing water, mending harness, or greasing the wagons; the women (and some of the men, too,) were baking bread and cooking, while the children were enjoyed in the childish sports, all seemingly forgetting, for the time, where they were, in the heart of a great wilderness and surrounded by numerous savage foes.

Serving God in Small Things.

[BY MISS MAGGIE EVANS.]

"He that is faithful in that which is least is faithful also in much; and he that is unjust in the least is unjust also in much."

The boy who tries to do his duty, who obeys his parents, who can be trusted with an errand, who never plays truant from school nor tries to deceive his teacher, may be said to be a faithful child, and nine cases out of ten he will grow on to a noble, good man.

The little girl who about the home is ready to save mother a step whenever possible, who washes the dishes well, sweeps the floor nicely, carries a bucket of water or tries to make home pleasant for father, when he returns tired and hungry from his work, is the girl who, when grown, will make the best housekeeper, the most loving wife, the most dutiful mother and the most conscientious Christian. She, having been fathful in the least, is faithful also in much. As "Little drops of water

Make the mighty ocean," so it is the little deeds that make up one's life. We cannot all be great and renowned; perhaps the great world will never hear of us. But if we do well the small things that lie in our pathway, God will not overlook our work. If in everything we do we think of our Maker, and do all for His honor and glory perhaps in the last day the stars in our crowns will shine more brightly than in his, who was greatest among us in this world. "The first shall be last and the last first."

Once in the dark of night the little parsonage in Epworth, England, caught fire. The father rushed about trying to save his children. At last all were out but one boy. It seemed evident that he would perish. The flames were all about him. No help could reach him. He awoke to find the bed under him an fire and the building crumbling. He rushed to a window and two peasants seeing him, made a ladder of their bodies by which he descended safely to the ground. That boy was the great and noble John Wesley, the founder of Methodism. Those two peasants may have died "unwept, unhonored and unknown." But what does the world owe to them? John Wesley lived and founded the Methodist Church in which to-day are more than 33,666 itinerant peachers, 77,-931 local preachers and 5,216,186 lay members. In this country alone are about four million lay members.

Think of all this vast multitude saved by the doctrines taught by John Wesley. Will not God greatly reward those two humble men for thus serving him?

On the Pitcairn Island, surrounded everywhere by cannabalism, is a Christian colony with churches, schools and beautiful homes with a high style of civilization and religion. Did you ever hear how this happened? No missionary had landed there in fifty years. If he had, he had made a fine repast for the heathen within a few hours after his arrival. No, they did not get religion from one who had started out to be a missionary; but one day a ship was wrecked near the shore of the island and one of the sailors finding he could save nothing he took from his trunk a small Bible that his mother had given him, and with this between his teeth he swam ashore. The book was read, and the rough people became civilized, and in fifty years we see the place as described above.

Taking that book from his trunk seemed a little matter. Perhaps it seemed to the man, battling with the great, rough waves, that it made little difference whether he held it or dropped it. But see what a mighty work wrought by it. See the people now enlightened, who before sat in darkness and sin.

Then why not be faithful in little things, and, though the tempests are raging, and the waves of sin and temptation are strong, let us still hold to the precious Book, and the Christ of that book.

A Christian lady was once engaged to a man who repented, but did not profess religion. She, wishing to please her lover, and thinking he enjoyed dancing, proposed that they both go to a ball. To her surprise he refused. He was greatly astonished that one who professed to follow Christ "in the narrow way" should offer to enter with him the "broad way that leadeth to destruction." In a short time he withdrew for the evening, and the next time he called he asked that their engagement be broken off. She, greatly mortified, demanded an explanation. He replied, "You have solemnly vowed to Christ to be His, yet you propose to turn your back upon Him and mingle with sinners in a dance. Your relation to Him is more sacred than your relation to me could be if we were married. If you are untrue to God, in your offer to forsake Him, what reason have I to believe you would not be untrue to me and forsake me?"

"The greater always includes the less." This was very severe, but she could not call it unjust. With these words before you let me exhort you to faithfulness, beginning with the small things, and then you will be ready to be faithful in the greater things.

And now, as the apostle said, I would say, "For this cause I bow my knees unto the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, of whom the whole family in Heaven and earth is named, that he would grant you, according to the riches of His glory, to be strengthened with might by his Spirit in the inner man; that Christ may dwell in your hearts by faith; that ye, being rooted and grounded in love, may be able to comprehend with all saints what is the breadth and length, and depth, and height. And to know the love of Christ, which passeth knowledge, that ye might be filled with all the fullness of God.

Now unto Him that is able to do exceeding abundantly above all that we ask or think according to the power that worketh in us, unto him be glory in the church by Christ Jesus throughout all ages, world without end, Amen."

The Earthquake in Japan.

The earthquake that visited Japan the 28th of October, says Rev. W. E. Towson, one of our missionaries there, will go down in history as the severest that that land has ever experienced. While the people were yet in bed, their houses began to sway and creak most violently, producing an indescribable sensation, something akin to the roll of a ship in a heavy swell. Those on their feet could scarcely stand. Our church in Kboe was badly damaged. Dr. Lambuth and wife narrowly escaped. In one town of 10,000 houses, not one is left standing, and in one town of 3,000 people, 765 were killed, besides many wounded. It was estimated that 12, 000 were killed, 18,000 wounded, 75, 000 houses destroyed, while the loss of the government in property will amount to millions. At one place the railroad track sunk one foot for a distance of a mile. The scenes of distress and suffering as witnessed by travelers on the roadside were heart-rending. Mothers were lying by the roadside with crushed limbs, without bed or shelter, suckling their babes at their breasts. Not a missionary was killed, though Rev. Mr. Van Dyke was injured. Vast fields of wavnig rice beckoned the reapers to thrust in the sickle, but, alas! the reapers themselves had been cut down by the sickle of Death! It was a literal fulfillment of the words of the Psalmist: "Thou hast made the earth to tremble; thou hast broken it; heal the breaches thereof; for it shaketh. Thou hast showed thy people hard things; thou hast made us to drink the wine of astonishment."

Let us be devoutly thankful that God has been so merciful to us here in this favored land, and let us ever be ready to send help to those of our fellow-men, upon whom such calamities fall whether on this or the other side the great sea.

THE HARVEST.

BY MISS LULU BIGGS.

Perhaps there has never been a more abundant harvest in Montana than this year. The hearts of the husbandmen are made to rejoice at its abundance. Let us look at the wheat fields just before the reapers come. There the grain stands waving its golden heads to the gentle breeze. "How beautiful!" falls unconsciously from our lips. Let us look more closely; we see intermingled there, worthless thistles and beautiful flowers. The reaper comes; the thistles and the tender flowers are cut with the wheat. The wheat is now waiting the thresher's pleasure, and it shall not wait in vain. The wheat is separated from the thistles, and the flowers are left to die and bloom again. I see another harvest in the grain-fields of this life, in which we are the golden grain or worthless thistle. We are either looking for God and the advancement of his cause, or are against Him, and are the confriars of Satan, in the downfall of God's Church.

"We cannot serve two masters." God wants no work by halves. It must be whole-hearted, whole-soul work. The reaper, Death, is surely coming to us all. He often takes the tender flowers and leaves the thistles and wheat, that one may grow moreflower -like, and the other more ripe. The flowers will bloom again in perfection, in perpetual glory, in the garden of God. And the thistle may become more flower-like, while the wheat is ever ripening for the reaper.

In this mighty harvest are we wheat or thistle? Are we using every opportunity to do good, to speak some kind word to some poor bleeding heart? Or are we going carelessly on, regardless of the teachings of the Holy word of God, serving the world, and seeking its so called pleasures? O! Brother, Sister, examine your heart; see who you are serving. If you are following the steps of the lowly Nazerene, strive to follow more closely. If you are following the world, let me entreat you to turn and follow Jesus before it be everlastingly too late, for "now" is the day of salvation. In the last day may we all kneel with the wheat and flowers at the Master's feet and be received of Him.

Bozeman, Montana,–Sept. 30, '91.

Bishop Hendrix On Church Extension.

Says the "New Orleans Advocate" in speaking of the North Mississippi Conference:

The Board of Church Extension made their report. Bishop Hendrix addressed the Conference in a short, but strong and pointed speech. His remarks were substantially as follows:

"Church Extension of the present day is not a thing of recent date. It dates centuries back. It began on the Mount of Transfiguration. Peter preached the first church extension sermon. His text was, "Let us make here three tabernacles." These were prophetic words. He uttered what he did not conprehend, as did all the prophets of old. He spake out of a heart of love. He felt the need of an abiding-place. His thought has been taken up by the generations following. Everywhere love has built abiding-places--monuments to the God worshiped. Our church comes not from the temple, but from the synagogues scattered in the country where the Jew dwelt. In these Christ and his apostles worshipped and taught. Love builds not only houses of worship, but places of rest. No sooner is love born than it plans for a nest for its loved ones. Hate builds up nothing—hate tears down. Love builds up. Love made the world. Love made man. Love builds homes for preachers and builds churches. Our church builds one house of worship every day. The work of infidelity is to tear down; of love, to build up. These are outward expressions. Churches are the expressions of the permanency of the kingdon of God. God's plan is to become identified with the soil. The result of not doing so is illustrated by the wandering gypsies, Arabs and Indians. God's plan is for the church to become identified by having a home. The homeless one is a tramp. Borrowing a home, a hall or lodge-room destroys identity. I don't like see a man go into co-partnership with anything. I don't like to see this boarding-house business. Love says; Let us build something to keep us alive among men. A town where there is no church is an expression that the morals are not good—no payment of debts, etc. Houses of worship are expressions of good morals and of life sufficient to build. We can't talk out plain in other houses, and could not, as a church, have an existence. In our own houses we can use our own forms of worship and ritual. Independent houses enable us to use our beautiful service."

At the close of these remarks a special collection was taken to build a church in Rouse, Col., and about $170 were raised.

Thoughts Upon the Life of Daniel.

In a previous article I tried to outline the life and character of Moses, famous among Old Testament heroes; but another illustrious name was that of Daniel, who I verily believe stands among the greatest in the order of excellency. He was pronounced the blameless man, and for integrity he probably stands first among Old Testament saints.

As we study his life and character we see in him everything that is high and noble; with St. Paul, whether he ate or drank, or whatever he did, he did it all to the glory of God.

He was born about 620 years B. C., during the reign of that grand and good monarch Josiah, of the tribe of Judah, and a native of Jerusalem. At the time that famous old city was besieged by Nebuchadnezzar, Daniel, then a mere youth of 12 or 16 years of age, was captured and taken as prisoner to Babylon. Here he was exposed to imminent dangers, and thrown in contact with all kinds of vice, prevalent in that great and wicked city. In a short time Daniel was chosen on account of his manly courage and bearing to the office of, page or attendant on the king in his palace, and, according to the practice, continued even to this day in service of this character. Any foreigner, as he was designated, had to take a new name, and thus Daniel's was changed to Belteshazzer, a Chaldean name, signifying the man for whom Belshazzer lays up secret treasures. His newly appointed position he filled with great credit to himself and satisfaction to the king and all his superiors. But now comes the testing period. As it will come to every Christian in the church and out of it; trials that harass, annoy, and try our fidelity. Daniel was a Jew and had espoused the religion of his fathers, determined to live in conformity to its hallowed principles.

A short time after he took his place in the king's service, a royal feast was spread, and those who participated were expected to share in all of the festivities of the occasion. But Daniel, though young and inexperienced in the costumes of the nobility around him, felt that their excessive habits of eating and drinking, were sinful and injurious, and as a reproof to those high in rank, he sought permission to live upon pulse and water for ten days as an experiment, and when at that time there was no diminution of health, vigor or beauty, he was allowed to decline eating the rich food at the king's table.

As with eating, so with the drinking customs of that day, and so they still are in our day, excessive. A bane to society, and a curse to the land. They forsook the simple beverage of nature, and when the signal was given, see the high and great, come round the festive board, and the cry was heard on every side, "Pour out the wine, let foam and bubble kiss the rim, hoist every one his cup, and drink to the sentiment of 'King Belshazzer live forever.'" Bestarred and jeweled beauty, with coronet of royalty gleam to the uplifted chalices, as again and again they are emptied." Against this pernicious custom Daniel raised his voice in loudest denunciation. He showed his true manhood at every point and exhibited the life and character of a Christian. To instance, "when the handwriting was seen on the wall," and there was none present could interpret that strange writing. As they stood in awe and amazement, and ask one another, What is it? Is it a spirit? Is it a phantom? or is it God? Out of the blank sleeve of darkness, a finger of fiery terror, trembles through the air, and comes to the wall. Circling about as though it would write, and then with sharp tip of flame, en-graves the doom of the king. None save Daniel could give the true interpretation, which he did without fear or hesitancy, even though it meant destruction to the king.

For decision of character he had no peer in all the land. He stood out alone and denounced the prevalent evils of the day, also exercised his rights as a Christian. Mark the fearful trials to which he was subjected. See him as he is thrown in the midst of the den of lions, exposed to the ridicule and abuse of all around him, but faith in God brings him safely out victorious.

But let me po nt out a few of the every day difficulties which confronted him: First of all. Civil authority sternly opposed him, and like his three Hebrew companions who refused to bow to the gigantic golden idol, he stood for liberty of speech and conscience.

Let Caesar's due be ever paid,
To Caesar and his throne,
But conscience and souls were made
For God, and God alone.

Friendly obligations were also against him. Nebuchadnezzar was his chief benefactor. For three years he had educated him in most princely style. King Darius, too, had elevated him to the highest executive office in his kingdom, and had given many indications of royal favor; yet Daniel could not surrender the claims of conscience. Again, custom was bitterly opposed to him, as in the case of refusing for conscience sake to eat and drink at the king's table, he knew he was courting the ill-favor of those high in authority, who would strive to bend his will to theirs, or have him cruelly punished.

He knew the meaning of the king's decrees, and what it meant to disobey; and yet with the prospect of being thrown to wild beasts, his faith never wavered; he stands alone for God and the right, trusting in Him for guidance and deliverance. What an example for our imitation! Think of the reward gained by the noble life he lived. His life was a stormy one, harassed with care, and beset with temptations on every hand, but blessed be God, the men who have risen high in the scale of Christian living, are those who have exercised faith in God, and lived like Daniel for the Master. Yonder in Smyrna is Polycarp. In Lyons, Iraeneas. In Pragne, Jerome; in Germany, Luther and Melanchthon; in Scotland, John Knox and the old Covenanters; in England Wesley and Geo. Whitfield, aye , and Latimer, Ridley and Baxter, and in our own country a Simpson, with his towering eloquence; Dr Eddy, and the sainted Cookman, who cried as he neared the pearly gates "I am sweeping through the gates washed in the blood of the Lamb," and many more we might mention, did space permit. All these like Daniel, lived and enjoyed the presence of the Master, and today with him are reaping their reward in Heaven, the minds sheltered from the cares and trials that daily vex and annoy in this life. The past presents no ghost-like forms of evil to disturb, and the future is bright and luminous with the dawning of an eternal day of honor and felicity at God's right hand. They have the sweetest and dearest companionships; first and greatest is the "Prince of Peace" the "King of kings" our Redeemer; and then the dear friends known and loved below, who too have lived and labored for the better land above. I now close with these beautiful lines:

Dare to be a Daniel,
Dare to stand alone;
Dare to have a purpose true,
Dare to make it known.

What Is Wanted.

The Holy Spirit is able to make the Word as successful now as in the days of the apostles. He can bring in by hundreds and thousands as well as ones or twos. The reason why we are not more prosperous is that we have not the Holy Spirit with us in might and power, as in early times. If we had the Spirit sealing our ministry with power, it would signify very little about our talent. Men might be poor and uneducated; their words might be broken and ungrammatical; there might be none of the polished periods of Hall, or the glorious thunders of Chalmers; but if the might of the Spirit attended them, the humblest evangelist would be more successful than the most learned of divines, or the most eloquent of preachers. It is extraordinary grace, not talent, that wins the day. It is extraordinary spiritual power, not extraordinary mental power that we need. Mental power may fill a chapel, but spiritual power fills the church. Mental power may gather a congregation, spiritual power will save souls. We want spiritual power. Oh! we know some before whom we shrink into nothing as to talent, but who have no spiritual power; when they speak, they have not the Holy Spirit with them; but we know others, simple-hearted, worthy men, who speak their country dialect, and who stand up to preach, in their country-place, and the Spirit of God clothes every word with power. Hearts are broken, souls are saved, and sinners are born again. Oh, Spirit of the living God! we want THEE. Thou art the life, the soul, the source of Thy people's success. Without Thee, they can do nothing, with Thee, they can do everything.—C. H. Spurgeon.

What Christ Asks.

A negative relation to Christ has always ended in his crucifixion. Pilate said: "I find no fault in Him," Herod said: "I find no fault in Him;" but they gave him up to the murderers! From the spiritual necessity of the case that was inevitable. This is the irresistible sequence. Beware of it. There is no security in negativeness. If you merely find "no fault in Him," you will assuredly give up Christ under external pressure. Christ asks for no good conduct certificate. He asks us for the loyalty of the heart's whole trust. He claims the throne of our undivided love.

"WHICH CLASS ARE YOU TRAVELLING?"

Let me ask you in all kindness, "Which class are you travelling?" There are but three. Let me describe them, that you may put yourself to the test now in the presence of "Him with whom you have to do."

1*st Class.*—Those who are saved, and who know it.

2*nd Class.*—Those who are not sure of Salvation, but anxious to be so.

3*rd Class.*—Those who are not only unsaved, but totally indifferent about it.

Again I repeat my question, "Which class are you travelling?" Oh, the madness of indifference when eternal issues are at stake! Yet are there not thousands of shrewd, far-seeing men to-day, who look sharply enough after their own interests in this life, but who seem stone-blind to the Eternity before them? Spite of the infinite love of God to helpless rebels told out at Calvary, spite of the known brevity of man's history here, spite of the terrors of judgment after death, and of the solemn probability of waking up at last with the unbearable remorse of being on hell's side of a "fixed" gulf, man hurries on to the bitter, bitter end, as careless as if there were no God, no death, no judgment, no heaven, no hell! If the reader of these pages be such an one, may God this very moment have mercy upon you, and while you read these lines open your eyes to your most perilous position standing as you may be on the slippery brink of an endless woe!

Oh, friend, believe it or not, your case is truly desperate! Put off the thought of Eternity no longer. Remember that procrastination is like him who deceives you by it, not only a "thief," but a "murderer." There is much truth in the Spanish proverb which says, "The road of 'by-and-by' leads to the town of 'Never,'" I beseech you, unknown reader, travel that road no longer; "NOW is the day of Salvation." "But," says one, "I am not indifferdeep trouble lies wrapped up in another word—

i. e. I am among the second-class passengers you speak of."

Well, reader, both indifference and uncertainty are the offspring of one parent—unbelief. The first results from unbelief as to the sin and ruin of man, the other from unbelief as to God's sovereign remedy for man. It is especially for souls desiring before God to be fully and unmistakably SURE of their salvation that these pages are written. I can in a great measure understand your deep soul-trouble, and am assured that the more you are in earnest about this all-important matter, the greater will be your thirst, until you know for certain that you are really and eternally saved. "For what shall it profit a man, if he shall gain the whole world, and lose his own soul?" The only son of a devoted father is at sea. News comes that his ship has been wrecked on some foreign shore. Who can tell the anguish of suspense in that father's heart until, upon the most reliable authority, he is assured that his boy is safe and sound? Or, again, you are far from home. The night is dark and wintry, and your way is totally unknown. Standiug at a point where two roads diverge, you ask a by-passer the way to the town you desire to reach, and he tells you he thinks that such and such a way is the right one, and hopes you will be all right if you take it. Would "thinks," and "hopes," and "may bes" satisfy you? Surely not. You must have certainty about it, or every step you take will increase your anxiety. What wonder, then, that men have sometimes neither been able to eat nor sleep when the eternal safety of the soul has been trembling in the balance!

To lose your wealth is much,
To lose your health is more,
To lose your soul is such a loss
As no man can restore.

Now, dear reader, there are two things I desire, by the Holy Spirit's help, to make clear to you, and, to put them into Scripture language, they are these:

1. The way of Salvation. (Acts xvi. 17.)

2. The knowledge of Salvation. (Luke i. 77.)

We, shall, I think, see that, though intimately connected, they each stand upon a separate basis; so that it is quite possible for a soul to know the way of Salvation without having the certain knowledge that he himself is saved; or again to know that he is saved, without possessing at all times the joy that ought to accompany that knowledge.

First then, let me speak briefly of the WAY OF SALVATION.

Please to open your Bible, and read carefully the 13th verse of the 13th chapter of Exodus; there you find these words from the lips of Jehova: "Every firstling of an ass thou shalt redeem with a lamb; and if thou wilt NOT redeem it, THEN THOU SHALT BREAK HIS NECK; and all the firstborn of man among thy children shalt thou redeem."

Now come back with me in thought to a supposed scene of 3000 years ago. Two men (a priest of God and a poor Israelite) stand in earnest conversation. Let us stand by, with their permission, and listen. The gestures of each bespeak deep earnestness about some matter of importance, and it isn't difficulty to see that the subject of conversation is a little lamb that stands trembling beside them.

"I have come to know," says the poor Israelite, "if there cannot be a merciful exception made in my favor this once. This feeble little thing is the firstling of my ass, and though I know full well what the law of God says about it, I am hoping that mercy will be shown, and the ass's life spared. I am but a poor man in Israel, and can ill afford to lose the little colt."

"But," answers the priest firmly, "the law of the Lord is plain and unmistakable: 'EVERY firstling of an ass thou shalt redeem with a lamb; and if thou wilt not redeem it,' then thou shalt break his neck.' Where is the lamb?"

"Ah, sir, no lamb do I possess!"

"Then go, purchase one, and return, or the ass's neck must be broken. The lamb must die, or the ass must die."

"Alas! then all my hopes are crushed," he cries, "for I am far too poor to buy a lamb."

While this conversation proceeds, a third person joins them, and after hearing the poor man's tale of sorrow' he turns to him and says kindly, "Be of good cheer, I can meet your need," and thus he proceeds: "We have in our house, on the hill-top yonder, one little lamb, brought up at our very hearthstone, which is 'without spot or blemish.' It has never once strayed from home, and stands (and rightly so) in highest favor with all that are in the house. This lamb will I fetch." And away he hastens up the hill. Presently you see him gently leading the fair, little creature down the slope, and very soon both lamb and man are standing side by side.

Then the lamb is bound to the altar, its blood is shed, and the fire consumes it.

The righteous priest now turns to the poor man, and says, "You can freely take home your little colt in safety; no broken neck for it now. The lamb has died in the ass's stead, and consequently the ass goes right eously free. Thanks to your friend."

Now, poor troubled soul, can't you see in this God's own picture of a sinners salvation? His claims as to your sin demanded a "broken neck." —. i. e. righteous judgment upon your guilty head; the only alternative being the death of a divinely-appointed substitute.

Now you could not find the provision to meet your case; but, in the person of His beloved son, God Himself provided the Lamb. "Behold the Lamb of God," said John to his disciples, as his eyes fell upon that blessed, spotless One, "Behold the Lamb of God, which taketh away the sin of the world." (John i. 29.)

Onward to Calvary He went, "as a lamb led to the slaughter," and there and then He "once suffered for sins, the just for the unjust, that He might bring us to God." (1 Peter iii. 18.) He "was delivered for our offenses, and was raised again for our justification." (Rom. iv. 25) So that God does not abate one jot of His righteous, holy claims against sin when He justifies (i. e. clears from all charge of guilt) the ungodly sinner who believes in Jesus. (Rom. iii. 26.) Blessed be God for such a Savior, such a Salvation!

"DOST THOU BELIEVE ON THE SON OF GOD?"

"Well," you reply, "I have, as a poor condemned sinner, found in HIM one that I can safely trust, and I do believe on Him."

Then I can tell you that the full value of His sacrifice and death, as God estimates it, He makes good to you as though you had accomplished it all yourself.

But perhaps your eager inquiry may be, "How is it that since I do really distrust self and self-work, and wholly rely upon Christ and Christ's work, that I have not the full certainty of my salvation?" You say, "If my feelings warrant me saying that I am saved one day, they are pretty sure to blight every hope the next, and I am left like a ship storm-tossed, without any anchorage whatever." Ah! there lies your mistake. Did you ever hear of a captain trying to find anchorage by fastening his anchor inside the ship? Never. Always outside.

It may be that you are quite clear that it is Christ's death alone that gives SAFETY; but you think that it is what you feel that gives CERTAINTY.

Now, again, take your Bible; for I now wish you to see from God's word how He gives a man the KNOWLEDGF of SALVATION.

How did the firstborn sons of the thousands of Israel know for certain that they were safe the night of the Passover and Egypt's judgment?

Let us take a visit to two of their houses and hear what they have to say.

We find in the first house we enter that they are all shivering with fear and suspense.

What is the secret of all this paleness and trembling? we inquire: and the firstborn son informs us that the angel of death is coming round the land, and that he is not quite certain how matters will stand with him at that solemn moment.

"When the destroying angel has passed our house," says he, "and the night of judgment is over. I shall then know that I am safe; but I can't see how I can be quite sure of it until then. They say they ARE sure of salvation next door, but we think it VERY PRESUMPTUOUS. All I can do is to spend the long dreary night HOPING for the best."

"Well," we inquire, "but has the God of Israel not provided a way of safety for His people?"

"True," he replies, "and we have availed ourselves of that way of escape. The blood of the spotless and unblemished first-year lamb has been duly sprinkled with the bunch of hyssop on the lintel and two side-posts, but we still are not fully assured of shelter."

Let us now leave these doubting, troubled ones, and enter next door.

What a striking contrast meets our eye at once, Peace rests on every countenance. There they stand, with girded loins, and staff in hand, feeding on the roasted lamb.

What can be the meaning of all this tranquility on such a solemn night as this? "Ah," say they all, "we are only waiting for Jehovah's marching orders, and then we shall bid a last farewell to the taskmaster's cruel lash and all the drudgery of Egypt!"

"But hold! Do you forget that this is the night of Egypt's judgment?"

"Right well we know it; but our firstborn son is safe. The blood has been sprinkled according to the wish of our God."

"But so it has been the next door," we reply; "but they are all unhappy because all uncertain of safety."

"Ah," firmly responds the firstborn, "but WE have MORE THAN THE SPRINKLED BLOOD, we have the UNERRING WORD OF GOD ABOUT IT. God has said; 'When I SEE the BLOOD I will pass over you.' God rests satisfied with His word inside."

The sprinkled blood makes us SAFE.

The spoken word makes us SURE.

Could anything make us more safe than the sprinkled blood, or more sure than His spoken word? Nothing, nothing.

Now, reader, let me ask YOU a question. "Which of those two houses, think you, was the safer?"

Do you say No. 2, where all were so peaceful? Nay, then, you are wrong.

Both are safe alike.

Their safety depends upon what God thinks about the blood outside and not the state of their feelings inside.

If you would be sure of your own blessing, then, dear reader, listen not to the unstable testimony of inward emotions, but to the infallible witness of the word of God.

"Verily, verily, I say unto you, He that believeth on Me HATH everlaiting life." (John vi. 47.)

"But how am I sure that I have the right kind of faith?"

Well, there can be but one answer to that question; viz, "Have you confidence in the right person; i. e. in the blessed Son of God?"

It is not a question of the amount of your faith, but of the trustworthiness of the person you repose your confidence in. One man takes hold of Christ, as it were, with a drowning man's grip. Another but touches the hem of His garment; but the sinner who does the former is not a bit safer than the one who does the latter. They have both made the same discovery; viz., that while all of self is totally untrustworthy they may safely confide in Christ, calmly rely on His word, and confidently rest in the eternal efficacy of His finished work. That is what is meant by believing on Him. "Verily, verily, I say unto you, He that believeth on Me Hath everlasting life." (John vi. 47.)

Make sure of it then, reader, that your confidence is not reposed in your works of amendment, your religious observances, your pious feeling when under religious influences, your moral training from childhood, and the like. You may have the strongest faith in any or all of these and perish everlastingly. Don't deceive yourself by any "fair show in the flesh." The feeblest faith in Christ eternally saves, while the strongest faith in aught beside is but the offspring of a deceived heart; but the leafy twigs of your enemy's arranging over the pitfall of eternal perdition.

God in the gospel, simply introduces to you the Lord Jesus Christ, and says: 'This is My Beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased." "You may," He says, "with all confidence trust His heart, though you cannot with impunity trust your own."

Blessed, thrice blessed, Lord Jesus, who would not trust thee, and praise Thy Name!

"I do really believe on Him," said a sad-looking soul to me one day, "but yet, when asked if I am saved, I don't like to say yes, for fear I should be telling a lie." This young woman was a butcher's daughter in small town in the Midlands. It happened to be market-day, and her father had not then returned from market. So I said, "Now, suppose when your father comes home you ask him how many sheep he bought to-day, and he answers 'ten.' After awhile a man comes to the shop, and says, 'How many sheep did your father buy to-day?' and you reply, 'I don't like to say, for fear I should be telling a lie.' " "But," said the mother (who was standing by at the time), with righteous indignation, "that would be making your father the liar."

Now, dear reader, don't you see that this well meaning young woman was virtually making Christ out to be a liar, saying, "I do believe on the Son of God, and He says I have everlasting life, but I don't like to say I have lest I should be telling a lie," What daring presumption!

"Bnt," says another, "how may I be sure that I really do believe? I have tried often enough to believe, and looked within to see if I had got it, but the more I look at my faith, the less I seem to have."

Ah, friend, you are looking in the wrong direction to find that out, and your trying to believe but plainly shows that you are on the wrong track.

If we receive the witness of men, the witness of God is greater: for this is the witness of God that He hath witnessed of His Son. He that BELIEVETH NOT GOD HATH MADE HIM A LIAR; because he believeth not the witness that God gave of His Son. (1 John v. 9. 10.) Abraham believed God, and it was counted unto him for righteousness. (Rom. iv. 3.)

An anxious soul once said to a servant of Christ, "Oh, sir, I can't believe!" To which the preacher wisely and quietly replied, "Indeed, WHO is it that you can't believe?" This broke the spell. He had been looking at faith as an indescribable something he must feel within himself in order to be sure he was all right for heaven; whereas faith ever looks outside to a living Person, and His finished work, and quietly listens to the testimony of a faithful God about both. It is the outside look that brings the inside peace. When a man turns his face towards the sun his own shadow is behind him. You cannot look at self and a glorified Christ in heaven at the same moment.

Thus we have seen that the blessed PERSON of God's Son wins my confidence. HIS FINISHED WORK makes me eternally safe. God's WORD about those who believe on Him makes me unalterably sure. I find in Christ and His work the way of Salvation, and in the word of God the knowledge of Salvation.

Take heed to thyself, and keep thy soul diligently.

A Life Wasted.

About thirty years ago a gentleman from New York, who was traveling in the South, met a young girl of great beauty and wealth and married her. They returned to New York, and plunged into a mad whirl of gayety. The young wife had been a gentle, thoughtful girl, anxious to help all suffering and want, and to serve her God faithfully; but, as Mrs. L—, she had troops of flatterers. Her beauty and dresses were described in the society journals; her bon mots flew from mouth to mouth; her equipage was one of the most attractive in the park. In a few months she was intoxicated with admiration. She and her husband flitted from New York to Newport, from London to Paris, with no object but enjoyment. There were other men and women of their class who had some other worthier pursuit—literature, or art, or the elevation of the poor classes— but L—and his wife lived solely for amusements. They dressed, danced, flirted, hurried from ball to reception and from opera to dinner. Young girls looked at Mrs. L—with fervent admiration, perhaps with envy, as the foremost leader of society. About ten years ago she was returning alone from California, when an accident occurred on the railroad train in which she was a passenger, and she received a fatal internal injury. She was carried into a wayside station, and there, attended only by a physician from a neighboring village, she died.

Dr. Blank had said that it was one of the most painful experiences of his life.

"I had to tell her that she had but an hour to live. She was not suffering any pain; her only consciousness of hurt was that she was unable to move, so that it was no wonder she could not believe me.

" 'I must go home,' she said imperatively, 'to New York.'

" 'Madame, it is impossible. If you are moved it will shorten the time you have to live.

"She was lying on the floor. The brakeman had rolled up their coats to make her a pillow. She looked about her at the dingy little station with the stove, stained with tobacco, in the midst.

" 'I have but an hour, you tell me?'

" 'Not more.'

" 'And this is all that is left me of this world? It is not much, doctor,' with a half smile.

"The men left the room, and I locked the door that she might not be disturbed. She threw her arms over her face and lay quiet a long time; then she turned on me in a frenzy:—

" 'To think of all that I might have done with my money and time! God wanted me to help the poor and the sick; it's too late, now. I've only an hour!' She struggled up wildly. 'Why, doctor, I did nothing—nothing but lead the fashion! Great God! The fashion! Now I've only an hour! An hour!'

"But she had not even that, for the exertion had proved fatal, and in a moment she lay dead at my feet.

"No sermon that I ever heard was like that woman's despairing cry, "It's too late."—Selected.

HINTS FOR TEACHERS.

When you were appointed to teach that class of boys and girls it made you faint. The responsibility and your unfitness rushed over you and made your heart flutter. It will be well for you to constantly feel the need of walking "softly" before the Lord, for in your class you are shaping or mis-shaping characters.

You are chiseling at random and marring the angel in the marble; or, shaping demons; or, by neglect, leaving unchiseled that which you should have rounded into marvelous beauty; or, Sunday after Sunday, with God-given patience, you are cutting and chiseling and smoothing and rounding, with the Word of God for your hammer (Jer. 23: 59), a living Christian experience for your chisel, and the great Christ for your model.

"But," you ask, "how shall I commence with my class?"

The ante-preparation needed is—

1. A will baptized with the purpose of standing before your class just as you believe your Saviour would have done had such a place been assigned to him.

2. A sincere love for each pupil's soul, in spite of naughty ways, or bad habits, or stupidity, or unlovableness.

Armed with these, you can give to each scholar a cordial hand-shake and a few pleasant words of greeting. In a blank-book or manual procure the autographs and ages of your pupils. No matter if they work laboriously, or not write straight, it forms a link between you, and gives you an insight into their characters.

Little by little learn the influences which are at work on the children's hearts during the week. It is well to keep a private account of these. I will give a sample.

Sammy—Christian home.

John—Working for his board in a careless family.

Harry—Loose-principled father, good mother.

Willie—Fashionable mother, skeptical father.

Nellie—Boarding with a fretful woman.

Study to have an illustration or application which will reach each one. Study the bent of each mind, and you will be surprised to find judges, statesmen, philosophers, ministers, teachers, and mathematicians in embryo. Let your judges decide the rights and wrongs of the lesson, and your statesmen pore over the national problems of the lesson. Let your philosophers bring out their queer little sayings, your ministers preach, your teachers teach, and give statistics to your mathematicians.

Draw out, DRAW OUT, do not crowd in. Appoint your scribbling boy secretary of the class, to keep account of attendance, etc. Appoint another boy your treasurer, to collect and report pennies. Utilize every crude talent. Make the Bible the most delightful book in the world to them; take hold of its very covers as though you loved it. Drill them on finding references rapidly.—Our Young Folks.

A Rich Man on Riches

The following story, says the Wayside, is told of Jacob Ridgway, a wealthy citizen of Philadelphia, who died many years ago, leaving a fortune of six million dollars. 'Mr. Ridgway," said a young man with whom the millionaire was conversing, "you are more to be envied than any gentleman I know." "Why so?" responded Mr. Ridgway. "I am not aware of any cause for which I should be particularly envied." "What, sir!" exclaimed the young man, in astonishment. "Why, are you not a millionaire? Think of the thousands your income brings you every month!" "Well, what of that?" replied Mr. Ridgway. "All I get out of it is my victuals and clothes, and I can't eat more than one man's allowance or wear more than one suit at a time. Pray, can't you do as much?" "Ah! but," said the youth, "think of the hundreds of fine houses you own, and the rental they bring you!" "What better off am I for that?" replied the rich man. "I can only live in one house at a time; as for the money I receive for rents, why, I can't eat it, or wear it; I can only use it to buy other houses for other people to live in; they are beneficiaries, not I." "But you can buy splendid furniture and costly pictures and fine carriages and horses; in fact, what you desire." "And after I have bought them," responded Mr. Ridgway, "what then? I can only look at the furniture and pictures and the poorest man who is not blind can do the same. I can ride no easier in a fine carriage than you in an omnibus for five cents, with the trouble and attention to drivers, footmen, and hostlers; and as to 'anything I desire,' I can tell you, young man, that the less we desire in this world, the happier we shall be. All my wealth cannot buy back my youth, cannot purchase exemption from sickness and pain, cannot procure me power to keep afar off the hour of death; and then, what will all avail when, in a few short years at most, I lie down in the grave, and leave it all forever? Young man, you have no cause to envy me." The fountain of content must spring up in the mind, and he who has so little knowledge of human nature as to seek happiness by changing anything but his disposition, will waste his life in fruitless efforts, and multiply the griefs which he proposes to remove.

—o—

FALSE ECONOMY.

You "do not believe in making the Sunday-school room so fine?" "This giving of rewards is all nonsense; paying the children to come, indeed!" "They never did it when you were young, and the children came without all this waste of money that ought to be given to the poor."

No, Jeremiah, they did not do so when you were young. They had not as much light on the Sunday-school question, else they would have made their rooms equally attractive. Besides, Jeremiah, the times have changed since then; the devil holds out more fascinating allurements now.

The gilded bar-rooms of to-day bear about the same relation to the tavern of your day as our pleasant, well furnished Sunday-school room does to the rough walls and wooden benches of your youth.

Yes, the times have changed, Jeremiah, and you had better change, or by-and-by you will awaken to find that while you slept the army of the Lord has moved far onward in its homeward march.

We have splendid material in our young army, and plenty of it. There is a company of young soldiers you might train if you would only make up your mind to fight with the weapons of to-day. Put up your battering-ram and your cumbersome shield, and buy a sword. Cut yourself loose from the old narrow ideas and false notions of economy. Set it down for a fact that money spent in making the Sunday-school attractive is a direct defiance to Satan, and a sure method of winning souls for Christ. Put out you own diminutive candle, Jeremiah, and you will see the Gospel light shining in glory from some brightly illuminated, well-furnished, aggressive Sunday-school.

Follow the light, get your soul warmed and fed, and then put your hand in your pocket; give, and go to work. The Lord wants you and your work and your money, and when you stop grumbling and obey his call, you will be amazed to find how happy you are.—Our Young Folks.

—o—

SELECTED.

—Keep the home near heaven. Let it face toward the Father's home. —James Hamilton.

—Some things may be old, yet they are indispensable. Nothing new can take their place. The sun is as old as creation, but no substitute in the way of light and heat can supersede it. The atmosphere is coeval and coextensive with nature; but no chemical combination is capable of dispensing with it as a source of life and well-being. In like manner the Gospel is old; but as long as the human nature is corrupt and requires divine cleansing, and as long as creature power is inadequate to its purification, so long will the Gospel of Jesus Christ be an "all-in-all" to every man upon the face of the globe. —Presbyterian.

A Living Thief.

At one of the Baptist Anniversaries in the North, Dr Lorimer related the following dialogue, which penurious Christians would do well to ponder:

Talking with a man who had professed to be converted the minister said:

"Have you joined the church?"

"No; the dying thief did not join the church, and he went to Heaven."

"Have you given anything to missions?"

"No; the dying thief never gave anything, and he went to Heaven."

"Well, my friend, it seems to me the difference is that he was a dying thief, and you are a living one."

Noble work is the true educator Idleness is a thorough demoralizer of body; soul, and conscience. Nine-tenths of the vices of the world proceed from idleness. Without work there can be no active progress in human welfare.—Smiles.

IT DOESNT PAY.

It doesn't pay to stay away from prayer-meeting.

It doesn't pay to be a do-nothing in church work.

It doesn't pay to trifle with children.

It doesn't pay to stifle the voice of conscience.

It doesn't pay to let the preacher do all the Bible reading for you.

It doen't pay to see how little religion you can get along with.

It doesn't pay to take one step away from where God wants you to be in.

It doesn't pay to stable your horses and cattle and let your boys run wild.

It doesn't pay to be careful about your money and careless of what becomes of your soul.

It doesn't pay to go to church and take the store, and the farm, and the house, and the factory along with you.

——o——

A Correct Interpretation.

A laborer told his wife, on awakening, a curious dream which he had during the night. He dreamed that he saw coming toward him, in order, four rats. The first one was very fat, and was followed by two lean rats, the rear rat being blind. The dreamer was greatly perplexed as to what evil might follow, as it has been understood that to dream of rats denotes coming calamity, He appealed to his wife concerning this; but she, poor woman, could not help him him. His son, a sharp lad, who heard his father tell the story, volunteered to be the interpreter. "The fat rat," he said, "is the man who keeps the saloon you go to so often; the two lean rats are my mother and me, and the blind rat, father, is yourself.

——o——

Every man who lives a goodly life is doing something to help lift this world nearer to God for all the people who are to live in it after him.

——o——

People who stay out of the church because there are so many hypocrites in it, couldn't do anything to please the devil better.

NEWS AND NOTES.

—The Morning mine, located near Wallace, Idaho, has been sold recently to a Milwauke company for the neat sum of $500,000. The miner says: "It is no wild guess to value the ore blocked out there at a million dollars. The price paid, together with the $100,000 set apart for improvements, will be returned to the owners within eighteen months of steady operation." It will be remembered that Mr. Hussy, the former owner of the mine, was principle owner in the bank that failed at Wallace (and one also at Spokane) last winter. The suffering depositors will be reimbursed out of the proceeds of the mine. The promise of this causes much good cheer among the people of Wallace, as does also the prospect of having the mine developed.

Twenty-five tons of silver ore is an average car load. The present freight rate from Wallace to Omaha is $18 per ton or $450 for a car load —pretty high tariff.

—The holiday edition of the "Pacific Methodist Advocate" is neatly gotten up, contains cuts of some of California's leading preachers and a number of our principal church buildings there, also of the Pacific Methodist College, and is filled with choice matter. Brother Dubare is making it a live paper.

—We publish elsewhere the speech of Bishop Foster before the Missionary Committee of the M. E. Church, (North). It will do much to open the eyes and quicken the consciences of the people of that great church. We are glad that our brethren are waking up. The truth is bound to prevail. Such candid utterances, if they were heeded, would do much toward establishing a truer fraternity and harmonizing the forces of Methodism in America, and hastening the millennium.

—This issue of the Methodist is made up in the midst of severe family affliction, by snatching intervals between ministering to a sick wife and watching till the wee small hours with a suffering and crying child. This will account for the limited amount of Editorial matter. Perhaps they will like it better on that account.

—During our last trip to Bozeman we met our friend and brother, J. Seaton, former pastor of the Disciple church at Corvallis. While he is one of the best preachers, he is also one of the most spiritually and liberal-minded ministers of that denomination that it has been our privilege to meet. He has hosts of friends in Bitter Root Valley. We sympathized with our brother, though we had to laugh a little over it, for having to take the precious time of one Sunday service to defend himself against the charge of having "assisted in sprinkling a baby"—or rather in explaining how the report started.

—Rev. Edwin M. Ellis, of the Presbyterian church, preached a splendid sermon recently at Corvallis on "Long Faces, their cause, and their cure." The deceitfulness of sin, its workings in the hearts and lives of men were forcibly presented.

—The Christmas Tree services at Corvallis, were largely attended. The two schools united. The exercises consisted principally of the trial of Santa Claus. He's acquitted by the judge was followed by sounds of applause. The exercise is instructive and very interesting. The different parts were carried out nicely, and the singing excellent.

—The editor and family, by invitation spent a delightful Christmas at the home of Bro. H. B. Bell and wife. The traditional turkey and other competent parts of the splendid dinner were duly discussed and the society of the family, and Brother and Sister Parnoll, together with other kind friends much enjoyed.

—Brother James Bradley, one of our old friends at Elkhorn, sends a New Years greeting with three dollars to pay arrearages and renew for the METHODIST. Such greetings gladden us. God bless our Brother and Sister Bradley.

—Brother Price writes from Helena: "My wife left for Arkansas, Dec. 12th. While there is considerable abatement in business in Helena there seems to be none in the work of our Church. There were two accessions on Sunday on profession of faith."

—A friend writes from Marshfield, Mo., "Your paper is worthy patronage of the Church all over the land."

—Another writes from Meadon Creek, Montana, "I feel that I am better informed in regard to the workings of Methodism in the West, from reading your paper."

—Let our friends rally to the help of the paper with the beginning of the new year. We added twenty-five new names to our list with this issue. Let us have fifty for the next. What say you?

ABOUT THE WORKERS

—Rev. R. G. Isbell, of Pendleton, Oregon, has the manuscript about ready for a new book to be entitled "Live Issues." The following are some of the subjects discussed: "Christianity and Agnosticism;" "The Evangelist John;" "The Bible and Christian Institutions the Best Friends of Education and Liberty;" "Sanctification;" "Positive Institutions of Christianity;" etc. The book will comprise about 200 pages and sell for 75 cents per copy. Brother Isbell wields the pen of an able and ready writer. We wish him success in his enterprise, and hope he will get subscriptions sufficient to justify the publication of his book.

—Brother Warren writes a cheery letter. He is one of the honored superannuated members of the Missouri Conference. We rejoice that there is anything in the Methodist to remind him of the days of his early ministry, for they were days of self-sacrificing toil, of heroism and of aggressiveness in winning souls and extending the borders of Zion. May the mantle of the fathers rest upon their sons.

—Rev. W. A. Hanna is succeeding grandly at Fayette, Mo. We gave him the plan of the first circuit he ever traveled—Irving Mission in Western Kansas, and in company with Rev. H. H. Hedgepeth, in the church after the Conference had adjourned at Weston, Mo., in 1868, instructed him how to get to it. This writer had been initiated there the previous year and had doubled the membership. Hanna doubled it again and fairly set the country on fire by his soul-stirring eloquence, and his zeal. Brother Israel Cook, one of the solid men of the church at Rock Creek, and a warm friend of all the preachers, used to say "Last year we had Moses"—referring to this writer because of his slowness of speech— "but this year we have got Aaron"—referring to Hanna because of his ability to plead the cause of Israel so earnestly before the hardened Pharaohs of the land. He has been growing ever since. The students at Howard and Central Colleges are fortunate in having him for their pastor.

—The church in California greatly mourns the loss of Dr. Rankin. He was the brother of the Misses Lochie and Dora Rankins, who went as missionaries to China many years ago, one of whom, Miss Dora, fell at her post in that far off land.

—Sure enough, Bishop Haygood has returned with nine picked men from Georgia for the work in California, and says he could have gotten twenty-five if they would have been provided for. He doesn't stand back and say "go," but "come with me." That is true Episcopacy, such as was practiced by Paul. Asbury, McKendree and Marvin. The "go" of a great commission would be robbed of more than half its potency without the "Lo, I am with you," uttered by our Father's Son.

—Say what you will, but there is something about the "Nashville Christian Advocate" that causes one to look with anxiety for its coming and after its arrival to scan its pages without delay. Its editors have opinions on live topics and discuss them in a lively way.

From Father Warren, Fayette, Mo.

Dear Brother: I have been prevented from writing sooner on account of affliction in my family and other causes. We are much better now. My own health is quite good this fall and winter. I have not had a spell of rheumatism, such as it is my custom to have, spring and fall. I see from the Methodist you have heard of Bro. Hanna's meeting. It closed the last week in November. It was a good meeting; results about thirty conversions. There have been about eighty additions to the church since Conference—most of them by church certificate. It is no uncommon thing for persons to join the church at the regular services. I hope and pray that they may be faithful unto death. Bro. Hanna is a good preacher, and a faithful, good man. I hope he will be increasingly useful.

I receive the Montana Methodist and read it with pleasure and profit. I hope it will continue to come, for it reminds me of my ministry of forty years ago in North Missouri, when I traveled a circuit with twenty-six appointments to fill every four weeks. We had to preach from one to three times every day in the week except one. But I was happy in my work. [We have no doubt of that — Editor.] and many have been the happy seasons I have spent with those poor and simple-hearted people of the Northern and Western part of the state. Then, I like to hear from those brethren beloved that travel in that Conference, for whom I earnestly pray. God bless you and them. I send you two subscribers for the Montana Methodist, with two dollars to pay for the same. Give my love to the brethren.

Yours in Christ,
WM. WARREN.

ALONG THE LINE.

BUTTE STATION.

Dear Methodist: I greet you and all your readers with "A Happy New Year," and earnestly wish you all many returns of the season. We have had a prosperous closing with the year, and celebrated the last night with the old-time "watch-night service."

My 2nd quarterly meeting showed good progress along most lines. Nine (9) additions during the quarter, finances well up. Good congregations, and good spirit in all the worships.

A Mission S. S. in the Kemper edition is one of the promising features of our work. From 25 to 40 children gather each Sunday afternoon. A nice chapel in that part of the city would develop into a second station in Butte within 3 or 4 years. And I would not seriously object to being their pastor, after my four years at this place. I had rather be either than P. E. such a day as this.

I must not forget to say a word about the "pulpit efforts" of our P. E. the last round here—and I am not given to "courting"—even if I am a widower now. He preached at 11 A. M. on the duty of the church to support its ministry, and gave some ponderous strokes that ought to have been heard by our church all over Montana and the West. It is a shame that strong communities use the missionary money which ought to go to weaker charges and new ones. The evening sermon was on "Lost Opportunity," in which he showed that unusual power of faith was, after a time withdrawn, and all the fearful consequences of "given over to believe a lie and be damned" followed in their train. By common consent both of these were "tremendous efforts"—and my people ought to know.

Our Murphy Gospel Temperance Union prospers. I led the Sunday service and five men signed the pledge, and came to church at night and some seemed deeply moved during the preaching. Alcohol is the head of the serpent in this place, and who so kills, or cripples him much must strike him there.

We have a formal opening of our "Reading Rooms and Library with Lunch counter and Bath-tub attachment," on Jan. 1st. The ladies of the city take the lead, and serve free lunch and kindly welcome everybody. The city is concerned as never before in this matter, and they see some hope for practical results.

Bro. Barret joined his family last week, but did as J. W. Kemper—paid up P. C. for the time to be absent.—J. E. Squires.

OAKESDALE CIRCUIT.

Editor Methodist: A happy New Year:—We are engaged here in a combat with Satan. Preached last night on Repentance. The outlook is good for a gracious revival. As I write to-day, I retrospect the past and ask what has the record of 1891 been; and what will be the record of 92? The Lord has been good to me, his servant. We have just got fairly organized for the conference year, and everything looks bright for a good and prosperous year.

To-night I shall, under God, preach on conversion. There are already some convictions, and that I deem very important. We must first get the people convicted of sin, then tell them how to get rid of the guilt. But how can we convince the people of sin, unless we Preach the Law? It is a school-master to bring them to Christ? This is long enough and I will close. More anon, as the meeting progresses.

—W. S. Hornbuckle.

DEER LODGE.

Our work at present is encouraging, there is life and development.

The Epworth League is doing well, both in its development and Literary work. All our members, except three or four, attend prayer-meeting.

Christmas Eve, when the Superintendent, in the name of the Sunday School, presented the pastor one of the nicest silver watches you ever looked at, said, "A year ago our school numbered 35, now 75." Yes sir; a year ago it took 35 pounds of candy and nuts, this year it took 75 pounds. We have had to buy more chairs to seat the congregations that attend our services.

Yesterday morning, Dec., 28, 1891, at five minutes to five o'clock, the death angel entered the home of Brother Nat Evans, snatched from their fond embrace their sweet little babe, John Marvin, who was just six months and seven days old. To-day we committed the little lifeless form to the ground to wait the resurrection morn. While the parents may not understand the Father's dealings with them, they do not question His wisdom or goodness. They have our heartfelt sympathy.

Rev. Owen Gist, of the Christian church, has recently resigned his pastorate here. He goes this week to Wakefield, Washington, to take charge of a church there. We regret very much to see him go. A sweeter spirited Christian gentleman we have not met. Our prayers follow him.

How the Battle Is Going.

BOULDER.

R. S. Clark: Yesterday—Sabbath—and to-day have been full of labors and results. I preached twice on Sabbath, took eleven into the church; and to-day, Monday, have married two couples and taken two persons into the church, and attended our Jefferson County Reading Circle at night for three hours.

[We greatly rejoice that the tide has turned, and the work at Boulder is moving forward so grandly. May the Lord continue to bless the labors of Brother Clark more and more—Editor.]

PENDLETON.

R. G. Isbell: After a long delay, and what may seem a very grave neglect, I send you the promised list of subscribers to the "Montana Methodist." I have been confined to my bed for some days. My wife is still sick, only able to sit up a little. In all my life I have not had such a sore trial of affliction, [we know how to sympathize with you brother Editor] but God has kept us so far; He only can keep us to the end. Our people have been full of the Christly spirit toward us. Glory to God! the Christ life lives in his people. If you will come to see us sometime soon we will give you a long list of subscribers to the Methodist, I think. [Nothing would please us more, were it in our power. How it would rejoice us to get that list of subscribers, and thus be in correspondence with such a noble hearted people! Their co-operation and their prayers would greatly inspire us and assist the Methodist in its mission in the great Northwest—Editor]

We have announced to be in a meeting here all through January. By all means come then. Brother Warren, the pastor of our sister Methodist church in Pendleton, has had a good meeting. It was a great treat to me to be in several of his services. Brother and Sister Warren have been very fraternal. So have other Christians, particularly the Baptists and Presbyterians. What a blessing in a strange land to meet the world-wide Christian fellowship! Truly we find houses and lands, brothers and sisters, fathers and mothers—yea, a hundred fold more in this life, and in the world to come life everlasting. [There is nothing like it, and nothing that takes the place of it in the universe—Editor]

WALLACE.

Rev. W. O. Waggener writes in a private letter (we ask pardon for this extract) dated Tuesday the 29th ult: "I fear you had a dreary time at Saltese. The train has not reached here yet. We had our Christmas entertainment for the children on Thursday evening. It was a "House" instead of the regulation Tree. Santa Claus was first seen by the children coming down the chimney. Before delivering the presents we had music and recitations by the children. The whole affair was a very pronounced success. We have 114 on roll now; and on the Sunday succeeding Christmas had over sixty out—a right good attendance for that time.

PLEASE LOOK THROUGH OUR ADVERTISEMENTS.

A Narrow Escape.

On Tuesday Mrs. McNall, her sister and two children started in a sleigh from Mr. McNall's ranch to Wallace. A short distance above East Wallace, at a point where the road is very narrow, the horse was attacked with something like blind staggers and he started over the embankment. Just at this juncture Mr. Dodson, who, luckily, was walking just behind the sleigh, grasped it, and at the same time very fortunately the singletree broke and freed the horse. Half over hung the sleigh and its frightened occupants. The horse fell a hundred feet or more and was instantly killed. A narrower escape from death than the ladies had is seldom heard of.—Coeur d'Alene Miner.

We remember while we were on our first trip from Murry to Wallace, by stage, that, when on one of those high grades, we met a loaded freight team. The road was very narrow. In order to pass we had to unhitch our team, lift our vehicle to one side so that the inside wheels were in the outside ruts and the other side of the stage fairly hung over the precipice. If it had gone over it would hardly have touched anywhere inside of one hundred feet. The driver held his team; the passenger clung to a wheel of the stage to hold it in place, while the loaded team, claiming the "inside track," which meant something in this case, by hugging the bank, passed by on the other side. A collision would have proven fatal. While spinning around those sharp angles, going at breakneck speed along the ragged edge of precipices that were frightful to behold, we felt a deep sympathy for poor Mr. Greely when he was in the hands of Hank Monk, and were happy when Wallace was reached and the ride ended.

—The condition of things, religiously, in portions of New England is said to be deplorable. At a conference recently held in Maine to consider methods for the better maintenance of religious service in the country the following information was brought out: "In some seventy towns in the State no religious services are held; in a great many others two or three little Churches are struggling along without vitality enough to keep themselves going without outside aid, to say nothing of extending their influence; and that some 55,000 families in the State do not attend church services, in some counties the church-going population amounting to only 31 and 38 per cent. of the total." We wonder if Old Virginia could spare them another Jesse Lee. This state of things calls loudly for the services of such a man of God as he was. Why not spend some of the labor that is being worse than wasted among the "poor white trash" in the Sunny South with its thousands of churchs and many hundreds of thousands of church members, in releasing this distressing destitution in land of high moral ideas?

—From an editorial in the "Richmond Christian," discussing Rev. Hugh Price Hughes and his work in West London Mission we take the following:

Mr. Hughes has charge of a mission in London, where nearly a million of people are without Methodist service. He is working among the "Outcasts" of the world's greatest city, whose "bitter cry" has caught the ear at least of some followers of Mr. Wesley.

Mr. John Wesley found and fed with the Bread of Life this class. His direct successors aping the State Church, lost sight of them somewhat. A little while ago it occurred to a few men like Mr. Hughes to seek the "submerged" masses, to preach the Gospel to the poor. These Reformers in the Wesleyan Conference had "sharp contention" with the starched systematic and slow apostles in their own body. The scandal of carrying the Gospel to the slums did not deter these men. They work with a will among the vilest and with wide success.

Mr. Hughes spoke for an hour at Broad Street to a large audience with telling effect. His hearers were choice citizens, chiefly of the Churches. Of what is called "oratory" a lot of pied adjectives tacked to nouns and fluttering fore an aft, from verbs—Mr. Hughes was guiltless. He gave opinion how Jesus would conduct the campaign against sin and Satan—confessedly a true view. There was nothing new in it. Merely Methodism as Wesley managed it, and Asbury, McKendree and that race of Bishops led it.

Jesse Lee was the formost man of Methodism—missionary, historian, statesman, daring, armed with wit, conjuring with humor—he was not passed from Conference to Conference at the call of "First Churches," but sent with axe into the forest of New England, where no Wesleyan pioneer had ever blazed the way, far less "boxed out" an Arminian chip. And Asbury plodded through mud, heat, ice, day by day, year in and year out, from the verge of civilization in the frozen North across paths where savage tomahawks had been wiped of blood on the bushes by the wayside, to the cabin on the frontier in the South. Hughes is leading English Methodism back to its primitive mission. Would God American Methodism could bring to birth a John of the hair cloth!

With the Acts of the Apostles, Wesley's Journals and Asbury's Itinerancy wide open to the eye, how modern Methodism can look in a mirror without a blush is a puzzle.

Bishop Foster on the Southern Work.

We have been and are successful among the colored people, and we have gained a great constituency. There is progress there towards satisfying results. I stand fully committed to that work. As to white work in the South, I have believed from the first it was a mistake. I have never varied from my conviction, except in boarder States, where we had a constituency to begin with equal to that branch of the Christian Church to which we are so nearly related. In Texas, Missouri, West Virginia, and Kentucky I have always made an exception. There is a reason why we should exist in Florida. I have even excepted a part of Tennessee. I believe in all these sections we have been doing Christian work with regard to the new work of the South. I always have to pause to still my emotions and passions before I speak. I disapprove of every atom of it in all that country. It is time for us to give ourselves to reflection about it. To consider the case without party prejudice or passion. To look at the facts just as they exist. Think for a moment of the Church which is a part of us—our sister Church, has our spirit—concerning which it would be a Christian shame for us to assume any superiority as to social position, dignity worthy and honorable labor, great and conspicuous spiritual power.

A large part of this Nation it has as completely and as savingly filled with power as our Church has the State of Ohio, or any other section. It would be a Christian shame for us to assume any difference of superiority in temper, spirit or character. We ought not; we cannot do it. Now, in the State of Texas you have this fact to consider. There are 150,000 Methodist people in Texas. They have able ministers and good churches in every town, hamlet and village in the State. Their gain was 12,000 conversions last year. They have four Annual Conferences. [The M. E. Church, South, has seven Conferences in Texas—Editor METHODIST ADVOCATE.] We have a beggarly representation of 1,500 white members, including the Scandanavians, and large part of these members are in those strong Churches which we think need no help. We are preparing to spend money to evangelize down there, when this great world is full of need and want; when our own land is but an atom to the continent of want existing in the world. It is a discredit to us that we are presuming to go there and spend money, which leads to the supposition that we are in competitive conflict with the Church that is doing good work in the whole State, and has as able ministers as we are, and Christians as true and loyal to God as we can claim to be, filling the land with churches, giving it all the opportunity it wants. The same is true of every State South of the boarder States. We have committed this great wrong against that Church and against ourselves. We have undertaken to project ourselves upon a population—neglected may be in some places, as some places are neglected in the North, and under circumstances of disadvantage, which have outlived our power. Circumstances, I may justly say, which make it a question whether it has been any benefit to the white population of Alabama, Mississippi, Georgia, Louisiana, North Carolina and South Carolina, to have us there. I believe, weighed in the balance of fair Christian judgment, it is a just question whether we have done more harm than good. It is impossible to go anywhere and not do some good. But if our Methodism starts influences which are damaging in other directions, that balance must be counted against us before we can count the good we may do, as a reason for our existence there. The evil we do must be considered before determining whether we should be in any place. Sir, I would not dare to recite in this committee what I know about this territory. You would not hear me state it. I would not dare. I am convinced that while we are compelled to remain until we can decently retire, until we can correct our blunder—but I have to hold myself; I have to put chains on myself when I think of the facts. I dare not speak of them. They are disgracing facts to us (Let me calm myself a little.) We cannot retire at once from any of these fields. We are bound hand and foot to a dead body. O wretched man that I am, who shall deliver me from this body of death! We must stay, but wisdom demands that we should diminish the appropriations in all cases save the exceptions I have named. When I look into the eyes of this man (Dr. Curl), I know he is honest, but I do not believe in the wisdom of that work. I don't know much about Arkansas. I never was there. I don't want to be there. I never intend to be there, unless these Bishops send me as a punishment. There ought to be a curtailment in the amount appropriated to all these stations. In some cases one-half, until those who come to us simply to get the fat will leave us.

—If asked what is the remedy for the deepest sorrows of the human heart—what a man should chiefly look to in his progress through life as the power that is to sustain him under trials, and enable him manfully to confront his afflictions, I must point him to something which, in a well known hymn is called, "The old, old story," told of in an old, old Book and taught with an old, old teaching, which is the greatest and best gift ever given to mankind.—W. E. Gladstone.

Texas Advocate: The following is what a newspaper reporter called Bishop Fitzgerald's famous darkey, wind and mule story. "The Bishop spoke in strong terms against the chromo or premium system of booming the circulation of our Church papers. He said he had an experience on the subject when he was editor of the general organ, and it reminded him of a sick 'nigger.' The sick darkey met a brother-in-black who saw that he was looking worsted and inquired the cause. He answered: 'I's feelin' porely. My mule done gone and got sick, an I went to de hoss doctor and he tole me what to do. He giv me er whole lot er medersin and told me how to giv it to de mule. He tole me to git er tin tube an put de medersin in de tube an put de tube in mule's mouf and den blow de medersin down his froat So I got everything ready to blow, but de mule blowed fuss, and I tell yer, brudder, dat ah mule medersin was too much for dis here nigger.' Such methods of business, said the Bishop, always blow at the wrong end."

—In Christ's name you must go down to the people in order to raise them. This is what Jesus Christ himself did. He came down to us that he might raise us to himself. The teacher always goes down to the pupil. The parent always goes down to the child. The strong must go down to the weak if ever the weak are to be lifted up to strength. Ye know the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ, who, though he was rich, yet for your sakes became poor.—Exchange.

—Bishop Fitzgerald at one of the Texas Conferences: "Every presiding elder is the evangelist of his district. Every Methodist preacher is a soul-saver. Let him expect revivals as the result of his own labors. If he will trust in the Lord and do his duty, he need not send for an evangelist to convert his people."

PURITY.—Purity is power. The rose, among the sweetest and most beautiful of God's creations, is armed with thorns, nature's sharp bayonets for warding off attack. Purity is the defense of beauty; modesty is the safeguard of innocence. "Keep thyself pure." The severe chastity which repels familiarity is an absolute essential for the safety of the soul genial attractiveness is for beauty.—A. J. Gordon.

—BISHOP MALLALIEU, who at the Southern California Conference met the courteous and fraternal address of the representative of a sister church with fustian and contempt, at a late meeting of the Bishops of his Church, spoke of "running" the ministers and representatives of the M. E. Church, South, "into their dens," meaning that his policy was to supersede them in those places where they have had honorable and perpetual inheritance. Bishop Mallalieu needs a "second blessing" or an antidote of some sort for the virus of his sectional spirit.—Pacific Methodist Advance.

The Church of the Future.

Bishop Hendrix read an essay before the Ecumenical Conference upon the above topic, from which "Zion's Herald," the organ of New England Methodism, made the following extract. Our readers will thank us for publishing it:

"There will be a 'church in the future.' The New Zealander who, 'in the midst of a vast solitude, takes his stand on a broken arch of London Bridge, to sketch the ruins of St. Paul's, will be a Christian. It is the Christian religion alone which can teach the cannibal either to cross the ocean or to sketch. Whatever the future has in store, we confidently expect the survival of Christianity, the mother of commerce and art to the once pagan South Sea Islands. The spiral movement of the race tells of the presence of a power which makes for righteousness. Civilized society rests on religion, and free government prospers best among religious people. The progress of the race no less that its evangelization rests upon the Church. Persecution cannot destroy her, and revolutions cannot stay her advance. The blood of her martyrs has always been seed, and she gathers her harvests from the furrows of revolution.

Why the Church? Because the Christian religion is a divine life in the soul whose instinct is to propagate itself by diffusion, and to this end must have organization. It is only in a social state that man's faculties, whether intellectual or moral, attain any high degree of development, and man seeks communion with other believers for the nourishment, of his spiritual life. It is religion instinct with life that furnishes its outward expression and organization in the Church. We must not make too much of externals. Where the Spirit of Christ is, there is the Church. The Church has existed in the house of Aquila and Priscilla, whether in Corinth or Ephesus or Rome, as it existed long afterwards in the Catacombs and in the mountain fastnesses of Italy. While it is not the imposing character of its outward expression which constitutes its strength, yet a low estimate of its mission diminishes activity, and a weak and uninfluential pulpit will both effect its outward form and neutralize its hidden power.

The Church cannot survive her credentials. Nor will she have other credentials than her Lord's. The Church cannot represent her Lord by becoming the Church of a class.

The Lord's ministry was to ruler and nobleman; to Dives and Lazarus; to Zaccheus and Bartimeus. It was a happy hour in Paul's life when permitted to stand before kings. While the Gospel would not represent the mind and heart of Jesus which was wholly for the upper class, it would not a whit more represent His mind and heart if it never addressed itself to them. It has been a weakness of Methodism that it has neglected the rich. Pioneers have often avoided the centres and been content with rural audiences. We have made provision for the poor, and failed to reach or mold and retain the rich. That religion is a failure which makes men prosperous, and permits them to sink under the temptations to luxurious living; which makes men intellectual, and does not feed them.

The Church exists to meet a demand, and can cease to exist only because she allows other agencies to better meet that demand. That demand, as deep seated and as enduring as humau nature, is for truth and sympathy. The majesty of truth and the power of sympathy constitute the glory of the Church in whatever age. The Church must be formost to know and proclaim the truth, and readiest and most practical in the manifestation of sympathy. The Church cannot cease to grow intellectually and maintain the respect of an intellectual age. The power of French infidelity a century ago was due to the fact that orthodoxy was the badge of ignorance and stupidity. The age is one of trained minds in all departments, and the Church must have the most severely trained minds if she would measure up to the demands and opportunities of the hour. All truth is hers—let her fear none and despise none. Dogmatism may proclaim a new truth what is little more than conjecture, and some of her own sons may become light headed and irreverent before great questions; but the Church must not be placed in a threatening attitude toward the eager search for truth. The Church must be known both as the champion of truth and the defender of the faith. Especially must she lead in all investigation relating to the Holy Scriptures which may give added light either upon their history or their contents. The pulpit and the Bible stand or fall together. Men respect the pulpit only so far as it stands for the truth.

But Christianity proclaims no truth which is not the motive to the better performance of some duty. Men are active as they have faith, and all truth is for the betterment and uplifting of the race. Positive beliefs mean better morals. In the Christian system man stands next to God. Angels are but His ministering servants. The doctrine of the divine Fatherhood taught oneness of origin in place of manifold origins under polytheism. Human brotherhood means sympathy and mutual help. The Church must not only keep abreast of, she must lead, the progress of the world in those things which will harmonize men. She must be many-handed to minister to human need. The age of humanity followed Christianity, and our religion will be judged by what it does for man. The men and women which the Church produces are unanswerable credentials.

Home Training of Children.

God gave the child to the parent, and says, "Nurse it for me." God ays the duty on the Church, and says: "Of such is the kingdom; suffer the little ones to come; feed my lambs." And just so far as any effort for the spiritual training of the child recognizes that the duty of such training begins at home on the one side, and the object of such training is to be Church membership and a religious life at the other, only so far can there be strength and safety in the effort.

Let Christian parents and the Christian Church remember that the blessing promised "to you and to your children" can only be fully secured when the sacred and solemn obligation of the parental relation are fully realized, and the tender ties of the home-circle are most carefully protected.

In the holy ordinance which makes of twain one flesh; in the abiding love and tender pity of parents for children; in the quiet and retirement of Christian homes; in the sweet communion of fireside affections; in the gentle restraints of the household; in mother's kiss and father's counsel; in the daily reading of the family Bible; in the sacred breathing around the family altar—here are the springs of the great river which is to bear our children into the Church and unto good. And every blow at the natural or legal protection of these dear home interests is a vandal act—a crime that must bring to society and the Church its certain and baneful result. Well, then, may the Christian look with horror at the constantly increasing tendency to loosen the marriage tie. ***

Are we not more careless than our fathers were of what our children read, where our boys spend their leisure hours, and what society our daughters seek? Or, rather, have we not forgotten that our children must have books, entertainment, and society; and that if home is not the place where they can find these things, the place where they do find them will be a home for them?—REV. T. B. APPLEGATE at the "Ecu."

People who stay out of the church because there are so many hypocrites in it, couldn't do anything to please the devil better.

About Sunday.

The law was not re-enacted by Christ, and if it was repealed by Him, we are without authority on the subject. The opponents of infant baptism hold that the Old Testament, like the Drake Constitution of Missouri, has been superceded by the New. They therefore demand New Testament enactment They deny that our Sunday takes the place of the Sabbath, in order to deny that baptism takes the place of the circumcision, or the Lord's Supper takes the place of the passover. Nevertheless it is a fact that the human conscience must be instructed from the decalogue and held by the authority of the law, or it is without law as to keeping holy the day of the Lord, doing no work therein. The greatest danger that has ever threatened our Sabbath arises in this quarter of the moral heavens. With one blow these desciples of the Lord would break forever the grasp of law on the conscience of mankind, by declaring that the law had been repealed. How errors breed among themselves, showing that they are of one species. Exclusive immersion, opposition to infant baptism, baptismal regeneration, the repeal of half the Bible, the destruction of the decalogue and church salvation all grow together.—Methodist Times.

Caught In a Snow Blockade.

The second quarterly meeting for Wallace was appointed for Sunday, December 29th. The desire to spend one Christmas with his family prompted the Presiding Elder to defer starting on his journey until Saturday morning. At Missoula we were informed that the road was open and we could get through to Wallace all right, but upon arriving at Saltese we found the road blockaded with snow which was falling fast, and learned that the rotary snow plow which left Wallace that morning, bound eastward, and followed by the passenger and also a freight train, had not been heard from, and was supposed to be stuck in the snow, on the mountain side, which proved to be the case. Late that night two of the conductors walked in through the snow which was more than a foot deep on the track, and reported that the rotary had broken down, the engine was off the track, the trains behind it could not get forward nor back, and all were snow bound about ten miles from Saltese. The train that we came in on started back to Missoula, got a mile from the station and stuck fast, and next morning word came that the engine of a relief train that had been sent from Missoula was off the track. So we were hemmed in on both sides, and it was still snowing. Already it was four feet on a level, the depth increasing six inches or more to the mile as you ascend the mountains. We had to go down into our boarding houses, though it stands on level ground. The depot and yards presented a busy scene on Sunday as troops of dagoes shoveled snow from the tracks and monstrous Mogul engines coupled together with snow plows in front of them rushed to and fro sending the snow in every direction; the rumble of their machinery and the sound of their puffing pistons and screaming whistles wakening the slumbering echoes of the wild forest and canyon around us as never before in that region. Superintendent Ramsey, of Missoula, arrived during the day, and with a train of three heavy locomotives, two cars and a score of shovelers, got only half way to the blockaded train, and returned to await the arrival of another rotary which was ordered from Livingstone, about 350 miles distant, was then on the way, and would arrive next day. The train on the mountain-side was known to be near a section house where there was plenty of provision, and as there was no wind and the weather was very mild, no special uneasiness was felt for either passengers or crew.

The officers and employees were very courteous and obliging. We were provided with a cot and comfortable quarters by the gentlemanly agent, whose wife was a Methodist, and a very pleasant lady quite recently from Toronto, Canada. We worshiped with them in their home in "an upper room" of the depot building and performed the pleasant service of baptizing their sweet little babe, Bertie Cecil. Thus it is, in the roughest and wildest, and most out-of-the-way places in all this Northwest, the minister of the Gospel is sure to find some Gaius or Lydia, whose heart the Lord will open to extend a welcome, to entertain or encourage him in his labor of love.

It is against our principles to turn back before accomplishing a purpose, and we greatly regretted an inability to visit Brother Waggener and his poeple; but as important official duties limited our stay on Monday morning we telegraphed our regrets to W., boarded the train and returned to Missoula and thence home. The disappointment was all on account of a breakage in the machinery of a rotary snow plow. We talked with the road master of this division, who says that he is determined that the road shall be kept open. It will be a difficult task, as the road is new, and the snow falls very deep here in winter time. The country as yet is sparsely settled, but it abounds in minerals, several good mines, of which are already being rapidly developed, and the route will be a pay ing one. Already the products of the great Bitter Root Valley are beginning to find a good market in the Coeur d'Alene County. We met the rotary at Frenchtown on our return and greatly desired to see it in action, but it was not rotating then. We are told that it will go right through a body of snow six or eight feet deep, even cutting it out between the rails, and make time at the rate of four miles an hour. We hope to have one in front of our train, with assurances that it will not break down the next time we start to Wallace, so that we will not get caught in a snow blockade.

Is Life A Great Thing?

A singular question you say, why ask it? Because life is great to only one class. To the pure in heart life is great. Life to the beast is the condition of an animal existence, in which its organs are capable of performing their functions. When the organs of the life become incapable of performing service, the body dies. Does not the conduct of some members of the human family lead us to believe that that is their highest conception of life? They seem to overlook the fact that they have a moral existence as well as a physical. Man was the crowning work of Deity. He was formed of the dust of the ground, and into his nostrils the Lord God breathed the breath of life, "and man became a living soul." Animal life is a created life, but man's life is the breath of Jehovah, hence eternal. But eternal life is forgotten. Men act, drink, dance and revel, wishing that death may end all when it does come. "The fool hath said in his heart there is no God."

Life is an expenditure. "We have it, but are continually losing it." We hold a position in society, but are continually losing it, not because we are declining, but because the giving of our life to society has enlarged its scope. Higher positions have been created, and we are called upon to expand our force in promoting some one to the position. This loss is a gain. This seeming paradox is a literal truism. The sacrifice in society perpetuates one's life. If there is a shadow of the eternal in social life, why not see the substance in the realm of the Divine? Why should we refuse to view life as eternal? To those who do not, life is a small affair, only serving an opportunity of pandering to the appetites of the flesh and enjoying the fruits of the world for a season. Friend, is not your life an empty and hollow thing, a vain show, having the appearance of living, when it is only the form of existence?

Life is a journey. It is a journey to death, death a passport to life. Shakespeare says of a certain woman, "She shows a body rather than a life." Ah! we adorn body, cater to appetites, and bow at the shrine of the monster self, and fain would have our fellows think ours was a life, while it is only a "body." Life is the period between birth and death, and this is the smallest conception of life. But the conduct of many leads us to believe that they think that all the opportunities of life are crouched up between those two events, birth and death. Contrary to the wishes and opinions of many is the word of God, declaring unto us that they who convert this earthly period of existence into self indulgence and glory, shall at last receive their evil things and be sent "away into everlasting punishment."

To the pure and good, life is a great thing, freighted with numerous opportunities and wonderful responsibilities, and possessed of unlimited possibilities. "Man devoid of religion is like a horse without a bridle." A life without the Christ in it is a tremendous failure. You may be moral, honest, respectable, yet if Christ and his words abide not in you, you are none of his. Christ is the only name by which men can be saved. You can never go to heaven any other way than by the manger, the cross and the empty tomb. A life morally good and spiritual, personal and not copied, is great beyond measure. It is a source of power. It is often said, he was the life of the company, the enterprise, a real source of power. The life of the pure is full of energy and vigor, rightly using all the faculties, of pleasure and enjoyment, and living in favor with God. Another phase of life is the impartation of power, influencing others, molding their thoughts, controlling and commanding their service for God. To the pure life is eternal; it is only measured by eternity. To them life has a history, not written in books, or on monuments of stone or brass, but like that of our Saviour, written in the hearts of the people. Jesus said to his disciples, "I am the Life;" and then gave them life, and life to me is real, and its duties more easily performed because of the pure and holy lives of those who have just preceded me. Is life sunnier, happier, larger, and its responsibilities more easily met, because of your life? If so, life to you is truly a great thing, and eternity alone shall reveal its manifold greatness. This convinceth me, "Because I live ye shall live also." (John 14:19)

IT DOESNT PAY.

It doesn't pay to stay away from prayer-meeting.

It doesn't pay to be a do-nothing in church work.

It doesn't pay to trifle with children.

It doesn't pay to stifle the voice of conscience.

It doesn't pay to let the preacher do all the Bible reading for you.

It doen't pay to see how little religion you can get along with.

It doesn't pay to take one step away from where God wants you to be in.

It doesn't pay to stable your horses and cattle and let your boys run wild.

It doesn't pay to be careful about your money and careless of what becomes of your soul.

It doesn't pay to go to church and take the store, and the farm, and the house, and the factory along with you.

—God weigheth more with how much love a man worketh than how much he doeth. He doeth much that loveth much. He doeth much that doeth a thing well. He doeth well that rather serveth the common weal than his own will.

THOS. A. KEMPIS.

TWO PICTURES.

One sunny day, many years ago, an English artist was sketching a bit of landscape scenery not far from Naples, when a pretty little round-faced boy, wtth bright eyes and long curls, approached him. As the painter looked at the lovely child, the thought occured to him that his innocent, dimpled face would afford an excellent subject for the head of a chernb. Young Guiseppe was easily prevailed upon to stand in the proper position, and the sketeh was speedily made.

About twenty years later the same painter happened to be in Rome, and casually strolled into a court of justice, where a band of brigands, who had been captured after the commission of atrocious crimes, were on their trial. The artist was struck by the villianous aspect of these ruffians, and especially with one more forbidding than the rest, whose scowling countenance, defaced by scars, gave ample evidence of his brutal disposition. He thought he had never looked upon a more ferocious visage, and thereupon made a hasty sketch for a picture, which should appear in striking contrast with that of the cherub, still in his possession.

The two paintings were exhibited under the names of "Innocence" and "Guilt."

Subsequently a strange fact came to light. The artist was shocked to learn that the two portraits represented the same individual! The artless, innocent child, and the blood-stained, callous criminal, were one and the very same! What a contrast!

The most beautiful object in creation is a lovely infant; its sweet smile mirrors perfect love, and its confidence teaches simple trust. And yet, sad to say, even here the taint of Adam's sin is inherited, and ere long it becomes developed into actual transgression; ere long anger, self-will, evil dispositions of various kinds are manifested. proving the truth of the words, "Behold, I was shapen in iniquity, and in sin did my mother conceive me" (Psalm. li. 5). "The imagination of man's heart is evil from his youth" (Genesis viii. 21.)

Well, then, as it canuot be denied that we were born in sin, and have committed many transgressions, there must of necessity be a radical change, —we must have a new heart,—ere we can enter heaven, and appear in the presence of a Holy God. "Verily. verily, I say unto thee, Except a man be born again, he cannot see the kingdom of God" (John iii. 3.)

How can the great change be wrought? How am I to get a new heart?" By looking unto Jesus. "Look unto Me," says the Saviour, "and be ye saved, all the ends of the earth." "For God so loved the world, that He gave His only begotton Son, that whosoever believeth in Him should not perish, but have everlasting life" (John iii. 16)

By trusting in His atoning death. "In whom we have redemption through his blood, the forgiveness of sins, according to the riches of His grace" (Ephesians i. 7).

"The blood of Jesus Christ His Son cleanseth from all sin" (1 John i. 7).

For to all who come to Jesus He gives His life-giving Spirit, to create them anew. "As many as received Him, to them gave He power to become the sons of God, even to them that believe on His name: which were born, not of blood, nor of the will of the flesh, nor of the will of man, but of God" (John i. 12. 13.)

—o—

'Tis Worth It All.

Yes, to get hold of the grand truth that God loves the poor fallen world, and that he loves me, one of the fallen ones in it, is worthy any trouble, care, pain—anything which one may have to go through in order to get a firm hold of it. And yet so many esteem it so lightly that they would not go through even a little for it. St. Paul counted all things but "loss" that he "might win Christ." Many an one counts any thing,every thing, precious above Christ. Would that there more of the spirit of the poor, old negro among us all. The poor, old fellow was very anxious to be able to read his Bible. He lived a long way from the missionary's house, and yet he would come, whenever he had time, to learn a lesson. It was such hard work, and he made so little progress, that the missionary got tired, and told him one day that he had better give it up. "No, massa," said he with great earnestness, "me neber gib it up until me die." And then pointing to the beautiful words which he had just spelled out in St. John iii:16: "God so loved the world," he said, with tears in his eyes, "Its worth all de trouble, massa, to read dat one verse." And in truth, it is worth all that the world can give to know that one word "so"—to know it as much as we can know it, for, in truth, it is illimitable, and I am glad that it is so. If God had said He had loved the world or my poor soul up to any specified value—millions of pounds, millions of worlds, if you like—I might always have been saying, "Ah! my sins are so great they exceed all this." But when he gives me the illimitable, then I know his love covers my all of sin and want. —Selected.

Vol. 1. FEBRUARY 15, 1892 No. 59.

News and Notes.

—The Prince of Wale's eldest son, the Duke of Clarence and Avondale, died on the 14th of January. The queen was strongly attached to her grandson, who is said to have possessed a charming disposition, and her grief is very great. Royalty is in tears, as he was the heir to the throne of England.

—The death of Cardinal Manning, which occurred on the 14th of January, is a great loss to the Roman Catholic world. He was a prominent leader, a man of broad views and great sympathy, and if he had lived, there was good prospect for him to have filled the papal chair at some time.

—Senator Shoup, of Idaho, has introduced a bill in Congress, which, if passed, will bring five per cent. of the gross proceeds of the sale of lands in Montana, Idaho, Washington, Wyoming and the Dakotas into the treasury of these several states. We hope it will pass.

—Mr. E.G.Brooke, of White Hall, writes a spicy letter to the Jefferson County Centinel, concerning the proceedings of the Irrigation Convention held at Helena in last month. Mr. B. thinks that Congress will act favorably upon the proposition to assist our northwestern states by making appropriations to construct ditches and reservoirs, so as to save the vast volumes of water now running to waste, and turn it upon our arid lands. He says that millions are appropriated to repair breaks in the levees in the lower Mississippi, and these breaks are caused by the great rush of waters from the eastern slopes of the Rocky Mountains in the Northwest, and that millions of dollars worth of property is destroyed annually. Why not turn these floods upon the vast areas of fertile lands and convert them into rich grain fields, which will also save the Mississippi bottoms from overflow, and add to their productiveness, Every dollar spent in this direction will have a double value and bestow a double benefit upon the country at large.

—Says Mr. E. G. Brooke, in writing about the Irrigation Convention, in the Jefferson County Centinal:

During the second day's debate on the land question as formulated to the Salt Lake congress, the convention being in committee of the whole, the ready-witted lawyer, Sam Word, had been called on for a speech on the question then before the committee, whether they would adopt the amendment offered by Judge Strevell, of Custer. When Mr. Word stepped to the platform, he called for the reading of the two propositions now being considered. After they were read, he casually remarked that he was on both sides, (evidently meaning that there was some good in each of the resolutions), the speaker then proceeded and made a powerful speech in favor of accepting the 70,000,000 acres of the public domain within the boundaries of Montana. This was rather a disappointment to the ranchmen, we having decided that we needed water instead of more land. When Mr. Word finished, and before he left the platform, Mr. Carney raised to his feet and very politely reminded Mr. Word that he had stated at the commencement of his speech that he belonged to both sides, that if he had finished his speech against adopting the amendment, would he now favor us with one on the otherside. Mr. Word had many friends there on the floor, Mr. Carney being one of them, who had known him for twenty-five years, but none of them had ever seen him so completely non-plussed. Fortunately, a troublesome member who evidently had been using bad irrigating water, sprang to his feet for a speech. This was Mr. Word's opportunity, and he informed Mr. Carney that the gentleman who had just taken the floor would make the other speech. It is not necessary to add that before one round of applause would end, another would commence. When the convention adjourned the next day, Mr. Carney was ahead, but all who know Sam Word, will remind Pat Carney to be on the alert when in company with Sam.

—Another old-timer has been called from Bitter Root Valley. Mr. Gilbert Simmons, who departed this life after a short illness of Bright's disease, the 26th of January, aged 50 years, 3 months and 16 days. He was born in New York, but came West when a young man. He married Miss Nancy Chaffin, daughter of Elijah Chaffin, in 1878, and leaves a wife and eight children. He united with the M. E. Church in 1877. He was a man of excellent habits, though of few words; an effectionate husband and father, and enjoyed the respect and esteem of all who knew him. Rev. T. W. Flowers officiated at the funeral, assisted by Revs. W. D. Lear and E. J. Stanley. The surviving family and friends have our deepest sympathy. May the presence of the great Comforter be with them, and prepare them for a home in that better country where sorrow and death can never come.

—Brother James Cowan, one of the oldest residents of Corvallis, has been confined to his room with rheumatism for several months, and was unable to attend the revival services. He is a leading member, and one of the principal supporters of the Disciple Church, but free from the narrowness that is found among members of nearly every denomination of Christian people. We hope he will soon be out again.

The Helena District Conference will be held at Boulder, April 21–24. The Quarterly Conference will elect delegates during the third round. The District Sunday School Conference, the day preceding the Dist. Conference, Wednesday, April 20th. Let all our Sunday Schools elect two delegates each, who, with the Superintendents and pastors, will compose the Conference. Program will be published in due time.

—In his lecture to students Mr. Spurgeon says: "I aver that no pure mind ought to be subjected to the slightest breath of indelicacy from the pulpit. Christ's ministers must be without speck in their lives or stain in their speech." That suits us exactly. There are no words so beautiful and so powerful as "pure words." A preacher that uses any other in the holy place dishonors a pure Christ, puts to blush a pure religion, and ought to quit the practice or vacate the pulpit. We have had enough of this to last for all time to come.—N. O. Advocate.

—The Quarterly Review of the M. E. Church, South, for January, is on our table with a tempting bill of fare. First is an article on the late Wilbur Fisk. The "Editor's Table" is always interesting and highly instructive. Every preacher should take the Review.

—Mr. John S. Randolph, who lives near Farmington, Wash., says in a private letter that the public school land in that section recently sold for from $40 to $150 per acre. He paid $41 per acre for a tract that joined his farm, which is in Idaho. That is right in the edge of the great Palouse country, and the land is splendid for raising wheat.

—The mining interests of the Bitter Root Valley country are looking up. Some rich leads are being developed in the adjacent mountains. The Claremont, located eight or ten miles east of Stevensville, is fast coming into prominence. It is stocked, and the stock is selling rapidly.

—Rev. C. H. Spurgeon, the great Baptist preacher of London, and of the world, died at Mentone, France, Jan. 31st, at 11 o'clock a. m. There was not a struggle of any kind. He simply went to sleep and woke up in heaven. He was born in 1834. His congregation in London was the largest in the world, and no minister of his time wielded a wider and greater influence for good.

—The Chilian war cloud has passed over. It only cost this government about two million dollars to foot the bill resulting from a few drinks of bad whisky in South American saloons. Behold, how great a matter a little fire water kindleth.

A Good Man Fallen.

The departure from earth of Bro. O. C. Bundy, a member of the M.E. Church, at Helena, the 21st of December, 1891, has brought sorrow to many hearts all over Montana, and is an event that deserves more than a passing notice. Although he was identified with the M. E. Church, yet he was possessed of such a broad and liberal spirit, and had so much of the Spirit of the Master, that in one sense he belonged to all the evangelical churches, and rejoiced in their prosperity. He came to Montana in an early day, and was one of the pioneers in Christian work in the territory. While he went from one village and mining camp to another with his portable photograph gallery to engage in his business as an artist—and he was among the best in his business—he was also performing another kind of work, the extent of which he was hardly conscious, in presenting to the people an exalting type of Christian character and life. He was first and forward in every good work. We first met him and Sister Bundy at Rodersburg, where they attended upon our ministry and spoke encouraging words to us in the winter of 1871–2. Afterward they welcomed us to their hospitality and assisted and cheered us in our work in Virginia City in 1874. They frequently attended our church at Helena, and our brother was always on hand when there were any special services in progress. In our visits to the Salvation army services and the Murphy meetings in upper rooms and basements, sometimes in out-of-the-way places, and at little cottage prayer-meetings, it was common to meet up with our friend and brother, O. C. Bundy, who was always ready to give of his means to help the cause—and did give much—to sing, or pray, or testify for his Saviour, or do anything in his power for the advancement of the cause of Christ. Many from Montana will rise up in the great day and call him blessed. Who would not cherish the memory of such a man? It was natural that his death should be triumphant, and that the funeral sermon by our own beloved brother, Rev. W. W. Van Orsdel, should be based upon the words: "Know ye not that there is a prince and a great man fallen this day in Israel." The early history of Methodism in Montana will not be complete without the names of Bro. and Sister Bundy. We tender sincerest Christian sympathy to our Sister in her bereavement. She knows in whom to put her trust.

Going to Read his Own Paper.

Dear Brother Stanley:

I have been reading your excellent paper for nearly one year through Brother Larkin. I think it a very interesting relinious paper. Through its columns I get to hear how the church is progressing throughout our great Northwest. It makes my heart rejoice to hear that some of the people, at least, are on their journey to a better home. Now I am going to read this my own paper the next year, if I live Enclosed you will find one dollar.

S. J. Noyer.

Thank you very kindly. Let many others go and do likewise.

ALONG THE LINE.

Palouse, Wash.

In a private note Rev. J. W. Compton writes, "We have decided to dedicate our church Feb. 21st. Come if you can. Am confined to my bed and can scarcely move on account of pain in my back caused by lifting, but hope to be up in a day or two.

Helena.

D. B. Price: I have almost regained my usual health and strength again. The work of the Lord prospers in this city, especially in our own church. We have had six additions the past two months, two valuable ones last Sunday. Remember the Lord's servant and work in Helena at a throne of grace. You are giving us a good paper this year. Since my wife went to Arkansas, her health has improved very much, and the doctors say that they can cure our precious boy in six or eight months.

Corvallis.

The Lord has done great things for us at Corvallis, for which we praise His great Name. We have had "showers of blessing." The meeting mentioned in our last issue continued with increasing interest well into the second week, when Rev. J. E. Squires, of Butte, came to our assistance. The field was white unto the harvest. He remained two weeks, preaching and laboring and singing, increasing energy and with power, such as we never knew him to possess before. The crowds were so great that we had to remove from Disciples to the Presbyterian Church. The latter building, the largest in the place, holding 300 people, was packed night after night, and sometimes so densely that the pulpit platform would be crowded with boys and men sitting on the carpet. Twenty-five persons united with our church, only four of which accessions were by letter. At least forty were converted or reclaimed, quite a number of whom will find homes in the Presbyterian, Baptist and Disciple Churches. Bro. Pool, of the Presbyterian Church, rendered efficient aid. A fraternal spirit prevailed, and Christian people of all denominations were revived, a mighty impulse was given to the cause of spiritual religion in the community, such as it never had before.

Brother Squires captivated everybody by his singing and preaching, and in his social religious visits from house to house. We did not think it was in him to preach as he did. He surely had help from on high. His sermon on the "Prodigal Son," on Sunday night the 24th of Jan., was by far the ablest representation of that subject that we ever heard. We do not understand how men can resist such appeals. Our brother has greatly endeared himself to the people of Corvallis and community, and we are enclined to think the attachment is mutual.

It is a gratification to Bro. F. W. Flowers, and this writer and others that no language can express, to behold the wonderful work that has been wrought. For many years, we have gone forth weeping bearing the precious seed, which at times seemed all but thrown away. Thank God that the reaping time has come at last. We know of several men who were anxious to sell out, but who now have with-drawn their farms from the market. They say they want no better place to live than at Corvallis, if they can only have such times of refreshing here as those we have experienced. Praise God from whom all blessings flow. Several entire families are now in the church. We expect to proceed at once to the erection of a church building, which is greatly needed by us at Corvallis. There is no telling where unto this work will grow. Let our friends rejoice with us and pray that He who hath begun such a good work within us will perform it until the day of Jesus Christ.

Amen.

Stevensville.

At last accounts the meeting at Stevensville was progressing with good interest. They had been some twenty-five or more conversions and quite a number of additions to the church. We were very sorry that Sister Parnall and Sister Waggener, were quite unwell a portion of the time during the meeting. We hear many good reports of the excellent work performed by our brother Waggener. We shall expect a more extended report of the meeting from the pastor. Surely the Lord has greatly blessed our work in Bitter Root Valley during the past month. How can we praise him enough for it?

Eagle Valley, Oregon.

Dear Bro. Stanley: You want to know how the church enterprise is getting on in Eagle Valley. Not so well as we would like, but we are doing all we can. We have made a payment on the lumber and have about half of it on the ground, and will commence work early in the spring. I do hope you will not forget how the matter stands. Everything is still in our favor. The deed is in my hands, but if we should fail to get the aid we have made application, for the church passes out of our hands and is to be a union church. I do hope the Board will see just how the matter stands. I don't think there is any place of more import ance than this. We are fifty five miles from a Methodist church, with more than five hundred people, and our population is increasing. Several families have come in since I saw you. I think the population of this valley will be double what it is now. Help us all you can, for we need help.

D. J. Saunders.

——o——

—This is surely as worthy a case as any that will come before the Board of Church Extension at its next annual meeting, and we doubt not the application will be honored. If we thought there was room for doubt we would feel like going all the way there to plead for it, together with several other needy cases. But we have great confidence in the good sense and discretion of the members of the Board of Church Extension.

Indian Valley, Idaho

D. W. Yoakham: As my little mission only embraced two regular appointments, Brother Hunt, a noble man licensed since Conference and assigned to Indian Valley mission, called loudly for my assistance here and I came. I preached to hungry souls on my way here and left them crying for more of the Gospel. We held a week's steady siege at this place and the Lord gave us an organization and bright prospects for the future. The darkness was great when we came, but light abounds, and the people say the Gospel is what they want.

We move on to Salmon Meadows to day, forty five miles east, to assault sin at that place. What a field has opened up for us in Idaho. Bro. Eagle wants me on the Boise circuit to help him in a protracted meeting. Two more circuits are greatly needed in Idaho, and some more brave men. A man can't last a minute without. I am glad I came here and heard the wolves houl. It led me to a new consecration, as it takes more grace here than in Oregon. More in the near future.

From Whitehall.

The meeting we held at Willow Creek the first part of December did not result as I had hoped. There were large congregations and a widespread interest, but it was not deep. Bros. Couey and Warren gave me good help and did excellent preaching. Since the meeting I have received two by letter at that place, and hope yet to reap some fruit of the meeting.

Last Thursday I closed an eight days' meeting at Summit Valley. Should have continued longer but for taking a severe cold with hoarseness. It was the best meeting in many respects that I have held in a long while. The members were greatly revived, a weekly prayer meeting started, one member was received, with five others to be received at my next appointment there. Summit Valley is a promising community. They have an all-year-round Sunday School, one of the best day schools in the county—as all who know the teacher, our Bro. Black, would expect.

Jan. 18, 1892. W. M. Britt.

Deer Lodge.

Our Epworth League pledged itself to assist the pastor in raising the Conference collections. To that end we held a missionary service last Sunday evening. The service was opened with song and prayer. The leader read an appropriate Scripture lesson, and gave a talk upon the object of missions. Scriptural quotations were given by each member of the League.

Papers were read on the following subjects: "Women in heathen lands," "Women and Missions," "Unniversal Brotherhood','What has been accomplished in heathen lands," "Giving."

Our Presiding Elder gave us a brief talk upon the mission work of our church, and the needs of Montana. At the close of the congregation was asked for $15 00 the amount assessed to this congregation for Home Missions; $15.25 was contributed.

Mrs. S. B. Tabor,
Sec. of League.

Dear Bro. Stanley:—

I have held one 10 day meeting in the country. No conversions, but a general awakening, and stirring up of the church which resulted in organizing a regular Sunday evening prayer meeting. I was assisted by the lay brethren only. I will begin a revival service here, in town, Feb. 7th. I have tried to secure the assistance of several of the brethren, and we are expecting largely of the Lord. I have been working and preaching to this end for five months, and the outlook for a good meeting is favorable.

Our congregations continue good; about 95 present at Sunday School last Sunday. Finances behind. I had had a short battle with La Grippe, I am much better, but not quite well yet. Will write as the meeting prospers.

Among the Workers.

—Rev. J. A. Orman, in a private note says: "I wish you would write more in the Advocate (Nashville) concering your work in Montana, and your needs." We are glad that our brother, who is Presiding Elder of Nashville District—one of the first in the entire church, feels so much interest in our work in Montana. But it takes about all the time that we can spare at our desk, to manage the business, collect funds, and fill the columns of the MONTANA METHODIST. We would be glad to have an occasional letter from the "hub." Our brother can have an audience of several thousand persons throughout the great Northwest, who will doubtless take pleasure in reading after him.

—Rev. A. C. Couey writes that his health was never better, and his family is also well, with the exception of slight colds and that he is ready for renewed "field work," and rejoices at the good news from Corvallis.

—Our St. Louis letter is interesting and instructive. We have not forgotten the time when the racy pen of J. W. Cunningham filled the "Kentucky Department" of the old St. Louis Advocate?

—A private note from our old friend and brother, A. S. Rhodes, at Denver, says: "We are blessed with an excellent pastor. James C. Duncan, son of Dr. Duncan of precious memory, and nephew of the Bishop. He is a valuable young man and possesses fine talents and preaching ability not usual for one of his age. Our city is growing in the midst of hard times. Money is becoming more plentiful, and we think many additions will be made to our city this year."

We can never forget the kindness of brethren Rhodes and Brinker and their families when we were entertained at their hospitable home during the Conference in the fall of 1874, when the Denver Conference was organized. We rejoice that they have lived to see an elegant church building erected and a membership of 250 souls gathered into it. The faith, courage, self-sacrifice and perseverance of these noble Christian men, have contributed no little to this result.

—Many thanks to Brother Chase for his choice and cheery contribution from the "cottage by the sea." You would hardly suspect the writer of becoming a bachelor, and we don't believe he would remain one long, if he were in Montana, unless he is utterly incorrigible.

—Rev. D. B. Price sends us a card in which he heartily endorses the statements and sentiments of a letter by Rev. J. P. Parnall, in a late issue of the "St. Louis Christian Advocate" concerning Brother Stateler's donation to the Church Extension Board. We are glad to hear of the improved health of Sister Price and dear little Olive. May the Lord grant them a complete and speedy recovery.

—A private note from White Hall informs us of the departure of Rev. W. M. Britt, on a visit to Ky. Madame Rumor is rife as to the reason. Perhaps we will learn further later on.

—Brother Newton Wood and his brother Arthur deserve credit for their faithfulness in performing the duties of sexton during the four weeks that the meeting was in progress. Their promptness and efficiency contributed greatly to the comfort of the large congregation, and we doubt not had much to do with the success of the meeting. Their service was gratuitous—a free-will offering to the Lord, in which they were blessed—one converted and the other greatly revived and strengthened. God bless these Christian boys.

—Don't forget to read the extract of Brother Squire's sermon on the Prodigal Son. May it help many a soul to get back to the Father's house.

It was a joy to have Bro. Squires in our humble home part of the time during his stay. His cheerful spirit and joyful songs gladdened all our hearts, even to the wee one not yet three months old. He is a lover of children, and his sermon to them on Sunday afternoon will never be forgotten. We are sorry to learn that his own little ones now on a visit to Mo., are not in the best of health. We shall look for Sister S. and the children back before long. After all, Montana is not the worst place in the world to live.

—A Brother Goode, of the Disciple Church, has just arrived from Washington, and will carry on a meeting at Corvallis. May he do much good.

Church Ex. Items.

BY THE CORRESPONDING SECRETARY.

Increased Collections on Assessments.

We have returns from most of the Conferences, of which, however, more than a third are incomplete, and when amended will improve the showing.

To date the reports give an increase in collections on assessments of over $4500 which we have reason to believe will reach $5000 when all the Conferences are heard from.

Help us Clear our Decks.

With $2000 in addition to what we now have in hand and in sight, we can pay all outstanding appropriations, new and old, absolute and conditional, foreign and domestic, made by our Board. This is the best showing we have made for several years. If our friends will come to our help with a few special donations over and above, and in addition to the regular assessments, it will enable us to clear our decks, and be ready in April next for the most advanced movement we have ever made. Can you not?

Finish a Church.

By sending us $1000–$800–$600–$500–$300–$200 or $100. We can use either of these sums in completing a single house. If you may not send so much, let us have any sum. Who will join in clearing the decks by a prompt remittance?

Application for Aid.

All applications for aid must be made as the Discipline and our By-Laws provide, upon blank forms furnished by the Board, and in strict accordance therewith, and must be in the hands of the Corresponding Secretary at least THIRTY days before the Annual Meeting of the Board, April 13th, 1892. Blanks on which to make applications can be obtained of DEER LODGE, MONT., JAN. 27, 1892.

Dear Brother Stanley:

I read the "Montana Methodist." I like it. I find many nice things in it. My Aunt Minnie is here. Jural has a rag doll. Santa Claus has brought me lots of nice things. I study geography, arithmetic and spelling and Fourth Reader. I do not know what to say next.

MARY COUEY.

We are glad to hear from our little friend, who is only seven years old. The writing is good and the words correctly spelled. Some grown up people that we know—preachers—might profit by her example—quit when they do not know what to say next. They do not always do that. We trust that like the Mary the Bible tells about, she has chosen that good part that shall never be taken from her, and that while pursuing such nice studies as those mentioned in her nice little letter, she will read her Bible, study her Sunday School lessons and strive to know more of Jesus; for He has said "This is life eternal, that they might know Thee, the only true God and Jesus Christ, whom Thou hast sent." We may learn all about arithmetic, and grammar, and history, and music, and good manners, and all that, but without the knowledge and love of Jesus in our hearts we cannot expect to be perfectly happy in this world, and we can never be happy in the world to come. God says by the mouth of his great apostle, Paul, that though we speak with the tongues of men, and of angels, have all knowledge, and faith so that we could understand all mysteries and remove mountains, yet if we have not charity, that is, love, it profiteth nothing. He also says, "they that seek Me early shall find Me," and "suffer little children to come unto Me and forbid them not," and "remember now thy Creator in the days of thy youth while the evil days come not," and "seek ye first the kingdom of God and his righteousness, and all these things shall be added unto you," and "come unto Me all ye that labor and are heavy laden and I will give you rest. Take My yoke upon you and learn of Me, for I am meek and lowly in heart, and ye shall find rest unto your souls. For my yoke is easy and my burden is light."

How easy it is for little children to give their hearts to Jesus. How He loves to have them do so. How beautiful it was to see the little boys and girls coming up at our protracted meeting at Corvallis, with tears in their eyes, and yet with joyful faces and hear them say they wanted to give their hearts and lives to Jesus. The angels in heaven rejoiced at the scene. How many boys and girls who read this are Christians? How many who are not, but who want to be, and by God's grace are going to be from this time on? Hold up your hands right where you are. There. I imagine I see five hundred hands raised. They are in homes scattered over the prairies of Missouri and Kansas, over the plains of Colorado, and amid the mountains and valleys of Montana, Idaho, Washington and Oregon, and in other states. The Lord Jesus sees them, and hears those little prayers, and will accept you, and, if you will let Him, will bring each one of you to heaven at last. Dear children, let us begin to-day, and strive more earnestly for a home in heaven than ever before.

CORRESPONDENCE.

California Letter.

Greetings from the sun-kissed shores of our perpetual summerland—Southern California, to the dwellers amidst the stately and snow-capped peaks of the Rockies:—

Do you not think we are a little selfish? it looks so. Two Bishops and the General Conference Organ. And yet California is not wholly converted. "Great bodies move slowly," we are thus making haste.

"Bishop Haygood has just returned from Georgia with a Pullman car of missionaries for Southern California." This from the secular press savors of reflection upon this goodly land, and indicates that the Bishop means business.

The Protestant denominations are very aggressive in this coast country, and nearly all are represented in towns, villages and cities. The M. E's predominating. Our own church is established in nearly all towns of any importance. We have four good churches in Los Angels, with the fifth projected; and representative congregations at San Diego, Santa Ana, San Bernardina, Ventura and Santa Barbara, all housed in good, and some have elegant houses of worship.

The preachers of this Conference are, for the most part, of superior mould, and come from the older conferences of the East and South.

Dr. W. B. Stradley, pastor of Trinity Church, Los Angeles, and Dr. R. H. arker, P. E. at this, the Santa Barbara District, are the leading spirits, and they are men of indomitable courage, solid piety, and know how to preach, and I find these are indispensible prerequisites to a successful ministry in California, where gold is the god, and the necessities demand that you teach that God is not gold, neither is he to be worshiped with the hands, but by faith.

The suffix "South" is much in our way in California; and I suppose it is much the same all over the West.

I hope the next General Conference will relieve us of this embarrassment by our aggressive legislation upon this, the source of our defeat, in the North and West.

I am by birth, rearing and education a northern man, and mix as much with northern as southern people, but I find it the next thing to an impossibility to disabuse the mind of the average Ohioan of the political stigma they have associated with the suffix "South."

That alone ties our hands and renders our ministry absolutely successless in many portions of the West, Colorado, New Mexico and California in particular. If we confess that our commission is to the southern people alone, then rest easy; but I don't believe anything of the kind. My commission reads, "go ye into the world," etc.

We have some good northern people among us in Southern California, but under other conditions we would doubtless have three times as many. Oh, if I was ■ bishop! Communications from my true yoke-fellows of other days, Squires and Price, than whom in Methodism there is not more sterling manhood, and truer metal, and piety, inform me of the hopeful outlook in Montana. Then that bright, breezy, fresh little sheet, MONTANA METHODIST, reaches my sanctum regularly frought with the aroma of earnest piety and newly-won victories on the battle-fields of righteous warfare.

Our paper, Pacific Methodist Advocate, published at 1170 Market Street, San Francisco, is one of the best religious papers in the world, and is one of the most potent powers in California for Methodism, and in fact non-political Protestantism. The editor is to the manner born; the scholarly and gifted Dr. DuBose pushes a facile and terse pen, yet as warm hearted as a child and as pure as purity. We press on, hoping and praying for great things ere the meeting of our Conference in September; for "the sound of battle is in the land, and of great destruction," to the sons of old Anak.

Blessings upon your faithful band, upon the picket lines of the Great Northwest.

SAM. M. CHASE,
Carpenteria, Cal.

St. Louis Letter.

French Roman Catholicism introduced European civilization into this section, and gave names to some of the earliest towns, as St. Louis, St. Charles and St. Genevieve. Saint Louis has outstripped her sister Saints. The others number their children (inhabitants) by hundreds and thousands, she numbers hers by hundreds of thousands, till they verge on to a half million. In no year of her past history were there so many substantial business houses and comfortable and elegant homes erected in St. Louis, as in the year 1891, and the outlook for 1892, in the same direction, seems equally encouraging.

The French who founded this town, and the Spanish who ruled for ■ few years in the early part of this century, have given place to other nationalities. The most conspicuous are the Germans and the Irish.

Roman Catholicism has not kept pace with the increase of population since 1804, when the United States flag was unfurled over her recently acquired trans-Mississippi territory. Then, and indeed until about 1820, Catholicism was the only organized Christianity here. Now she is a recognized power and her numerical strength was last month indicated by a torch light procession, requiring two hours to pass a given point, with the torch bearers moving in rows of eight persons—thousands of whom were little boys and youths. Each torch bearer was also a cross bearer, for each lamp was formed in the shape of a cross. The fiftieth anniversary of the episcopate of Archbishop Kenrick was the occasion. Bishops and Arch-bishops from the East, West, North and South were here, and Cardinal Gibons, the only dignitary who wears "the red cap" in America was present. Five hundred priests were reported present by the papers, and for nearly a week festivities deemed appropriate for the occasion were continued.

Combined Protestantism would hardly make such a display, but Protestantism is here.

There are fifty Catholic parishes and one hundred and fifty Protestant congregations having houses of worship in St. Louis. The Catholic Cathedral stands on its original site. For fifty years or more its priests saw not a single Protestant congregation in St. Louis, but now they see three times as many Protestant as Catholic congregations. Such being facts, in this great stronghold of C atholicism, it is needless to fear that Catholicism will take this country.

Methodism, American, Foreign and African, has about thirty congregations, but all do not follow the leadership of one ecclesiastical head as in the case of Romanism. We have the M. E. Church, the M. E. Church, South and two branches of African Methodism, but all are Episcopally Methodistic.

Presbyterianism exists here under four separate organizations, North, South, United and Cumberland.

Other denominations are more unified.

It is doubtful if Protestantism had operated under one banner, name and organization, if its achievements had been what they have.

J. W. CUNNINGHAM,
St. Louis, Jan. 25th, 1892.

The Parsonage and Home Mission Society.

The Central Committee will hold its annual meeting, April 9th. There will be before this committee over thirty applications for aid to parsonages, calling for several thousands of dollars more than we shall have to give unless the Lord open the hearts of His people to give generously before that time; and we are determined to leave that with the Master and those who love his appearing. But we ask those who feel with us in this matter, who appreciate the fact that lie back of those thirty applications, to unite with us in earnest prayer that these much-needed funds be sent in before that time of our meeting, that none may be turned away with an unanswered petition because there are no funds.

These applications do not come to us as debts we owe, as far as financial obligation goes, for we do not go into debt. We can simply help to the extent of our funds and say there is nothing more—with our best endeavor we have been unable to get more; and there the matter would end as far as our responsibility is concerned. But we cannot keep our hearts from going with those to whom we must say, "We have no funds," from seeing the "sufferings of each member of the family;" from feeling the dampness, and the cold of the northwest wind that finds ample entrance into the poor unfurnished house, notwithstanding there are "bed quilts on the windows and rags stuffed in the cracks." We cannot forget the fact that these good men are enduring all these things for the love of our Saviour when only a few hundreds of dollars gathered from as many people—the dues of our society are one dollar a year—would make their families comfortable and strengthen their spirits to labor for the cause of Christ. Neither can we banish from our minds the conviction that each Christian church must go forward with unremitting zeal if our land is saved from spiritual death; nor close our eyes to the fact that at every step the progress of our church is checked by the need of a home for the Missionary who must shelter his family while he preaches the Gospel, for they are beings with needs like our own. He is sent and must go, yet he is puzzled, and burdened, and hindered, and his purpose in going often absolutely defeated, by that one unavoidable obstacle the necessity of sheltering of his family. Heretofore he has not known in this emergency which way to turn for help and simply fell back from his post when hardships became unendurable; and often turned back to die a sacrifice offered up to improvidence. This cruel improvidence of the past the church proposes to remedy by organizing "The Parsonage and Home Mission Society" to gather funds and provide the homes so essential to successful progress. Now he comes to us saying, "There is none other to whom I may go." And we must lay this matter before God's people.

There are but two ways by which we may gather funds to help those who come to us because "there is none other to whom they may go." One is to make special appeals, the other is to organize auxliaries with members paying dues. The last we greatly prefer, because the income is regular and enables us to help promptly; for delay is often fatal to the man applying though his successor may reap the benefit. But we have, from some undiscovered cause, been hindered from organizing auxilaries as rapidly as we had reason to hope we should. It is impossible for us to know the inside workings of each charge and discover the cause, and it is also impossible for us to organize or retain an auxiliary in any charge without the hearty co-operation of the pastors and the women. We cannot think this hindrance lies with the preachers, for they, of all others, should see the need, should appreciate the meaning of this effort to make the pastors the center of all home mission work; besides so many of them have written words of encouragement and invoked the blessing of God upon our work. And one may always rely on the hearts of Christian women.

The Bishops in their address earnestly commend our work to the church as a most important matter. Bishop McTyeire once said of it, "There is nothing before you more important." Dr. John says the work done by this Society gives great relief to the Board of Missions. All predict future success for so "wise a movement;" and if there be any opposition it is "to the few restricted." What then? The trouble must lie in that tendency in human nature to feel without acting to which all are liable to yield. This tendency keeps many a man from Christ, keeps many a Christian from reaping the reward of faith. It is very hard for the individual to say, "It is I who must do this thing."

Brethren, pray with us and for us, pray publicly and privately that God will so stir the hearts of His people that they shall act in this matter. Let all pray definitely that we may, before our meeting in April, receive funds sufficient for the need.

LUCINDA B. HELM,
General Secretary.

One Methodist Family.

In August, 1876, at Cape May, Commissioners Myers, Hargrove, Finney, Vance and Clopton, of the M. E. Church, South, met with Commissioners Crawford, Newman, Fuller, Fisk and Fancher, of the M. E. Church, and without objection adopted the following: "Each of said Churches is a legitimate branch of Episcopal Methodism in the United States, having a common origin in the Methodist Episcopal Church organized in 1784; and since the organization of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, was consummated in 1846, by the voluntary exercise of the right of the Southern Annual Conferences, Ministers and members, to adhere to that Communion, it has been an Evangelical Church, reared on Scriptural foundations, and her ministers and members, with those of the M. E. Church, have constituted one Methodist family, though in distinct ecclesiastical connections."

Bishop Foster of the M.E. Church has lately made some of the most advanced statements on this old question of organic Union, that have been uttered for a long while. His plainly declared position and prayer have given the subject a new phase, and this is awakening new interest to all who have concern about this matter.

Bishop Foster's declarations have grown out of his investigations in their 'White work' in the South. It has become apparent to him that a great deal of money, sacred missionary money, has been and is being wasted in the South by his church. Our church has been seeing that for many years, and has been telling them of it through the church papers. A few have believed it, many have not. Bishop Foster is winning more believers than any other agent, and our church sends up very hearty amens to the good Bishop's prayers.

Now, there is another side to this question, like there was to the Shield—that question is, Are there not many fields in the Northwest, where the M. E. Church, South, is wasting sacred missionary money? Of course, there is a corresponding answer—Some of the M. E. Church, South, think we are, some think not. Do we who are on the ground in the Northwest, have the responsibility of giving full information to the great church to which we belong?

Here is a factor which enters the question: Is the population in the South-west, to the M. E. church, what the population in the Northwest, is to the M. E. church South?

Let us consecrate some few elements. Is there a charge in Montana to instance which has been receiving missionary appropriations for fifteen or twenty years, which has no more promise of self-support than at the beginning?

If we answer, yes, then, can we agree, like Bishop Foster, that it would be a pleasant thing to cut off the appropriation to said field—and put the money where the promise is more favorable?

Now, where weakness grows out of the existence of division of the forces into two Episcopal Methodist branches, there will come a change sooner or later. Honesty, church integrity demand it. Then, the question of how it will be done will arise. Must it be done by the spirit of the Cape May Commission, or by organic Union? The answer is very simple. We have the one already, the other is not likely to come—in fact does not seem desirable, at least by the M. E. church, South. We in council have said, we are one Methodist family. Let those whose duty it is, apply the remedy for conscience sake wherever it is needed.

It occurs to us, that if each one of the preachers representing this one family, would conscientiously observe the spirit of the agreement at Cape May, we need never waste a dollar or sacrifice a man. The house would never be divided against itself. We suggest that every Methodist preacher, of this great family, study the above resolution, teach it to their flocks, make use of it, and as sure as we live, we will destroy the argument of the gain sayers.

For one I purpose to maintain the integrity of our dear church whose record I honor.

A. C. COUEY,
Deer Lodge, Mont.
Jan. 15th, 1892.

—o—

Speaking of helps to revivals, Mr. Moody says: "Prayer, accompanied by personal effort, helps. Not only pray for revival, but work for it. Many folks act as if the verse in the Bible were, "Let him that heareth pray, come." They pray for their friends, their children—they have prayed for them for years, but they have never said, come. "Let him that heareth say, come." How many men in this city to-day only need an invitation to bring them to Christ! How many mothers have talked to their children about their behavior, their dress, their studies, but never one word about their immortal souls! "Ah," you say, "I can't talk to them when my own life is so inconsistent!" And this is true. The less any Christian indulging in known sin says about religion the better; but that does not lessen, it only increases our responsibility. It is as if a father should command a child to do something, and the child should tie up his own hands, and say, "Father, I can't." Come out from that sin—from all sin—for the sake of the souls who are stumbling over you into perdition. Don't wait a moment. Go to them and confess your unfaithfulness, and ask them right then and there to come to Christ. Would not the Spirit use such a witness as that would be?

The Prodigal Son.

An Illustration of the Divine love for Sinful Men.

Rev. J. E. Squires.

"I will arise and go to my father, and will say unto him, I have sinneth against heaven" &c..... But when he was yet a great way off, his father saw him.....fell on his neck, and kissed him." Luke xv: 18-20.

The text is a part of the famous parable of the prodical son, which begins at the 11th verse, and runs to the 24th verse. In this parable, Jesus has drawn one of the most vivid and touching scenes in family life, by which he would illustrate God the father, love for wandering prodigal men and women. This, so far as we are concerned, is the meaning of the parable. The heart of God is a fountain source of love, out of which is poured, as from a great reservoir, the love which abides in the heart of a father and a mother for the child. The same in kind, but infinitely deeper and broader in measure. "When my father and mother forsake me, then the Lord will take me up," says the record.

No other figure could illustrate his attitude toward us at all adequately, and this is imperfect, but we can understand it, and be helped by it. God so loves wandering souls, and would have them feel it and come home to him.

He proceeds upon the ground that if men knew the tender love they trample under foot as they run on in sin, they would stop. "Father, forgive them, for they know not what they do," was the prayer Jesus made for his executors. The boy wastes his time and money and substance and character, and heeds not the pleadings of his mother, whose heart-strings are snapping one by one. At last when dying of a broken heart, she says for the last time, "My Son," and he sees the light fading out of her eye, he stops and weeps and prays, and cries out, "Oh, my Mother, my precious Mother, have I done this?" Had he known what he was doing, he would have halted. God would arrest the sinner by showing him, that he is treading upon the heartstrings of the Divine Father-heart-"counting the blood of Christ an unholy thing."

Let us see the picture: there are two sons in the home, the younger can be the most illy spared, but he calls for "the portion of goods that falleth to him." He would settle up all business, as if to leave for good. He is restless under restraint, and has it in mind to go into "a far country," where the name of his father will not be mentioned in his presence. So far away that nobody will know the influences under which he grew up; nor ask if he had heard lately from home. Sin bids for the whole man.

His father divides among them his living—gives up the goods of the home, to be "wasted." The last night at home has passed, and the day for the departure has come. The father commits his boy to a tender providence in touching words at morning prayers, and mother sobs and nobody can pitch the hymn. Heavy silence reigns as all is made ready, and we witness the parting scene at the gate, mother's kiss and father's blessing.

They linger at the gate, and look after their departing son, until all fades from their dim old eyes, and now they turn and sadly enter the old home from which has gone the dearest treasure, it seems to them; the light and hope of it. The current of love for their child runs deep and strong now, as it is fed from the great Reservoir of Divine love. A father's love and a mother's love thus stirred for their child, is the Divinest thing that has touched the earth among mortals, and is a fit type of the Divine love poured out for men. When alone, the son weeps awhile, and then chides himself, and says "Come let's be a man," and turns his face toward the journey. Traveling in state and with great pomp, he stays at the best inn, where amid the joy and laughter of hilarious guests, he forgets the scene of the morning, until retired, he refuses to sleep, as the picture of the loving faces from whom he has gone, stand before him, and at last he gets up and kneels besides his bed, and says the little prayer he learned at mother's knee "Now I lay me" &c.

The next night he is easier, the days are filled with the new sights and experiences, and at the end of a month, he has almost ceased to recall the things which are behind. A year spent in the "far country," and he has not written home for months, and has almost forgotten the faces of his father and mother, and the sound of their voices.

He is now "spending his substance in riotous living," and his crowd of admirers call him the most liberal-hearted generous fellow they ever met Money freely spent, and riotons living will bring friends of a sort—and he had them.

But there is an end to the capacity to "riot," a man cannot always feed the mill that wastes his substance. A time comes when he can't dance, nor game, nor carouse, and when all the seeming pleasure he once had in all these things is gone, when the very thought of them is nauseating to his stomach, when money to spend, and vitality not appreciated is gone, "wasted in riotous living."

He struggles to recover himself in that land, the sinner will try to reform and do better, but "a famine" prevails all over that country, and the friends so called, who played with him, and drank with him, refuse to help him if indeed they had anything for themselves "He began to be in want and he joined himself to a citizen of the country;" he was only a sojourner, feeding swine, the most degraded work it seemed, to those who heard it, he ate with them and was "perishing with hunger."

In such distress, he thinks of his past life, the home from which he came, the father's house where there is bread enough to spare." He thinks, feels, resolves and "arises." He had not had such thoughts for many a day, but in the old home where father and mother waited and longed and looked, there had never been a day, when they had not thought of him, and an hour, when they had not loved him. At the evening prayer his name had always been spoken in tender subdued tones.

We children love our parents some, but not like they love us. Love runs in a descending series from God the great tender father to us human creatures, from earthly fathers and mothers to their children, and we turn back some pure devotion to them. "A mother will not forget her sucking child, yet will not I forget thee," says the Lord Almighty. They are looking for his return home, the mother has prophesied it, and has placed a vacant chair at the table, the father hopes and looks.

The son "comes to himself" and then starts for home. Satan can't hold a soul in his service; when it has seriously contemplated its condition, and its royal blood and the tender love of its father. Faltered and worn he returns homeward, if he shall starve and die, it shall be at his father's gate, begging for the place of "a hired servant."

See the old man at the closing day, looking out for his returning boy—his prodigal son. In the distance a form appears, hope fills out the picture, it is the son, "and when he was yet a great way off," you or I would not have recognized him, but love sees the family favor under that shattered and bleared outline, and runs to meet him. The son begins to say "Father I have sinned," but the father imprints the kiss of forgiveness on his face, and interrupts his speech, saying "bring forth the best robe and put it on him" &c. This is my son, my dead son, "make merry." The walls of that old home echo with shouts and songs of delight at the coming back of that wanderer.

Such is the picture drawn by the master, of the father's love for the sinner who is "spending his substance in riotous living."

I saw the measure of a mother's love for her abandoned wrecked ruined boy. She bent over and kissed his forhead when he had died in shame and ignomy, and when men said he hardly deserved a coffin; and that mother cried out in a wail I shall never forget "Oh, Robert, you are the best boy I ever knew?" I said in my heart "if a mother's love reach like that, what must be the measure of God's love for poor wrecked dying sinners."

I would run home to night if I were you, and meet a father's love.

Montana Methodist.

Vol. 4. FEBRUARY 29, 1892. No. 86

NEWS—NOTES.

—There appears to be a good prospect for the revival of the stock business in Montana. It is estimated that the sales of Montana cattle will this year amount to 500,000 head. Even half this number at $30 per head would bring a snug little sum. Mr. Alfred Myers, president of the Live Stock Association, estimates that the sales of Montana cattle, horses, sheep, and wool will amount to $14,000,000 or $15,000,000. There is no country where live stock are subject to fewer diseases than Montana. The present mild winter is very favorable to stockmen. Range cattle are said to be in fine condition, and a large increase is anticipated.

—The burning of the Hotel Royal, at New York, at the corner of Sixth Avenue and Fortieth Street, on the 7th instant was an event most appalling and horrifying to the beholders. The fire started near the centre of the building, and the flames were shooting up the elevator shaft before the alarm was given, thus cutting off the way of escape. A number were killed by jumping from windows, and a great number perished in the flames. Many acts of heroism were performed in rescuing persons from the burning building.

—It is estimated that the grain yield of the Palouse County the present season will bring for its equivolent the sum of ten million dollars. No wonder that land is worth from $40 to $150 per acre, as our friend Randolph recently stated.

—The authorities in Canada have excluded from the mails certain papers published in the United States, because "they were observed to contain advertisements of an immoral or indecent tendency, and also advertisements of cheating games. In some cases the reading matter, also, was found to be of a decidedly objectionable character." One of these papers, says "Printer's Ink," has a half million subscribers. This is a sad commentary upon the moral tastes and tendencies of our people.

—The first map of America ever made will be upon exhibition in the archaelogical department at the World's Fair, at Chicago, in 1893. It is loaned by the Pope of Rome, and is said to be a rare piece of workmanship, requiring thirty years' labor to complete it.

—A bill for the free coinage of silver has been introduced into Congress and reported upon favorably by the committee on coinage. It is thought that it will pass the House, but will likely be defeated in the Senate.

—Not long since a minister, who does not believe in what is generally termed experimental or heartfelt religion, was talking with a non-professor and relating some funny anecdotes about revivals of religion and making remarks that reflected somewhat upon the believers in this way, thinking he would please and amuse his listener; when he suddenly spoke up, "Hold on there, Mr. ———, if you please, you must not ridicule religion that way in my presence!" "That is just the kind I believe in and that I expect to have if I can become a Christian at all."

"Why, I am astonished! You! what do you know about religion? I never see you at church," responded the preacher.

"Well," replied the man, "I confess I go to the saloon more than to church, and from my language you wouldn't take me to be very pious. But I've got a heap of faith in my old mother, and she was a shouting Methodist. She knew what she was about, and that was her kind of religion. She enjoyed it; it made her happy, and she lived it. I know it is true, for my mother was no hypocrite. You needn't talk to me about that."

It is needless to say that the minister missed his mark that time. He waked up the wrong man. He was completely non-plussed, and dropped the subject instanter. That man has since been converted, and can testify personally to the truth that he formerly accepted and defended simply upon the testimony of another. Thank the Lord for Christian mothers. Although they are away back in Missouri or Michigan, or it may be some of them—many of them possibly—are in heaven, yet they are exerting an influence in the hearts and lives of many thousands here in these Rocky Mountains, that the world knows nothing of. What would this world come to without them? We have a deep sympathy for the boy or girl that has never had a Christian mother.

—There is good hope of lively times in Bitter Root Valley this season. The mines are beginning to attract attention, and it is now thought that some very rich leads will be developed before long. A large saw mill will be built at Hamilton, which is about five miles south of Corvallis, and is the general expectation that a railroad will be built into the valley direct from Anaconda. If so this part of the country will have a great boom.

—Much attention is being given to fruit in Missoula County. We believe it will be a success. We have tasted as finely flavored apples, and as large and fine looking ones, that grew in Bitter Root Valley as we ever saw anywhere. Our friends will do well to talk with our friend, Mr. Thomas Boroughs, of the Bitter Root Valley nursery, Corvallis, Montana, before buying from outside parties.

—We take great pleasure in calling attention to the advertisement of the "Rectangular lens" which appears in another column. Brother Cunningham, who is a Methodist preacher in St. Louis, Mo., has surely placed the world under great obligation to him by turning on more light," and at a great saving of expense. It is simply a glass lens, three and a half by four and a half inches, one side flat and smooth, the other side oval, attached to an ordinary coal oil or gas lamp by means of simple brass wire fixtures, and so adjusted as to throw the light at almost any angle desired. The light, shining through this lens, is increased four fold—one light is rendered just equal to four in intensity, and yet it is so softened as to be most pleasing to the eye. Every person who reads, writes, sews, or performs any kind of work by lamp-light should have one. It is a great saving of expense, and is just what we have been wanting for a long time. By means of the lens a small sized lamp on our desk, when we now write, gives a better light than our student lamp, and does not consume half the oil required by the student lamp. Be sure to send for a circular. Address Rev. J. W. Cunningham, 2623 Pine St., St. Louis, Mo.

—If our friends who are in arrears for the Montana Methodist, not a few of them from one to three dollars each, would make it convenient to remit right soon it would hardly be felt by them and yet would put several hundred dollars into our treasury which would relieve us of embarrassment and greatly assist in improving the paper. We are not talking to those who really want to pay and are trying but cannot do so, but to those who are simply neglecting because it is such a small matter, and just waiting till a more convenient time.

Take Your Collections.

NASHVILLE, TENN., Jan. 1892.

Dear Brother:—The collections for Foreign Missions reported by the Annual Conferences, as far as heard from, are very encouraging. With one or two exceptions, the Conferences report an advance on the collections of the preceding year.

We are much concerned, however, about the collections for the months of January, February and March of this year. Last year there was a marked decline in the collections during these three months as compared with those of the preceding. This occasioned very serious embarrassment to the Board and largely swelled our interest account. It is a matter of great importance that the collections for these three months this year, show a large advance on the collections for the same months of last year.

The expenses of our Missions must be met each month, and if the collections are delayed, we must borrow the money in order to carry on the work. As we have often stated, early collections will not only insure full collections, but the interest they will save would keep several missionaries in the field. If each pastor in the Church will, without delay, present the cause of Missions to his people, and forward the collections to the Treasurer, it will greatly assist our work and prevent this serious waste in the way of interest.

We are sure you will appreciate the importance of this call, and we trust we will have an early and liberal response from your charge.

Very truly yours,

I. G. JOHN, SECRETARY.
T. B. HOLT, TREASURER.

—As the soul must be clean from sin, so it must be clear and from free distractions. The intent of our devotion is to welcome God to our hearts. Now where shall we entertain Him, if the rooms be full, thronged with cares and turbulent passions? The Spirit of God will not endure to be crowded up together with the world in our strait lodgings; a holy vacuity must make way for Him in our bosoms. The divine pattern of devotion, in whom the Godhead dwelt bodily, retires into the mount to pray. He that carried heaven with Him would even thus leave the world below Him. Alas! how can we hope to mount up to heaven in our thoughts if we have the clogs of earthly cares hanging at our heels?—

NEWS FROM THE FRONT.

HELENA DISTRICT.

Rev. A. C. Couey writes in a personal letter: "You have noticed from the last communication, the time fixed for the Helena District Conference. I shall be glad to have you and the other brethren of the Missoula District to come over. I am in hopes we may have a very good time. I hope it is placed beyond the cold weather mark. Taking everything into consideration, our work is doing well throughout the District. Some good solid work has been done in every charge. [No doubt of it, and we rejoice in it.—Editor.]

We have spring weather upon us now. The snow is going away rapidly at present. I had a good time at Jefferson City and Alhambra last Friday, Saturday and Sunday. I will be in Deer Lodge for the Third Quarterly Meeting next Saturday and Sunday. We begin a protracted meeting then. I hope we will have a good revival. Am greatly rejoiced to know of the abundant success at Corvallis.

STEVENSVILLE.

Rev. J. B. Parnall, in a private letter: "Brother Waggener and family have left us. We were sorry to see them go, although about all has been accomplished that can be done for the present. I expect about twenty clear conversions and reclamations in all. Thank the Lord for so many. Seven of them have united with us, and I expect three or four more will unite. I preached last night to a larger congregation than I really expected, seeing that Bro. W. had gone. Was hardly able to conduct the service. Have announced to preach twice to-morrow, though fear I shall not be strong enough for the night service. The meeting will close to-morrow. Mrs. Parnall's health is improving, but she is still quite poorly.

WALLA WALLA.

I write a line to report our revival meeting which continues into the fifth week. Seventeen have united with the church, all but two of these on profession. Three have been restored by Church Conference. Others are seeking, and many are serious. The church house will scarcely accommodate the crowds that come. We are rejoicing. To God be all the glory. The results of the meetings we will report at the end.

Yours in labors abundant,
M. V. Howard.

[P.S—Will the pastors of the East Columbia Conference please attend to the collection of the small amount required to meet the balance due,$18, for the publication of the minutes, and forward at once to me? This amount is due, and the printer is looking to me for the money. Please give this your prompt attention, brethren. M. V. H.

FAIRVIEW, WASH.

F. F. St. Clair: "Closed a precious revival. The Lord wonderfully blessed us. Fourteen additions to the church this quarter. Baptized eight more children. God's people up on Pisgah. Glory in my soul. I send you one subscriber for "Methodist."

MAY DAY, KANSAS.

W. H. Kincaid: "We are about building a church. Have over $1,550 subscribed, all raised in three or four days, and want to get out the stone before spring opens and have everything ready for the carpenters by that time. I wish the "Methodist" success.

CORVALLIS.

The influence of our meeting is still working like leaven in the lump. Two persons have united with the Presbyterian Church, and about fifteen thus far with the Disciple Church, which began a meeting upon the close of our own. There will be several more accessions to our church at an early day.

PENDLETON DISTRICT.

"DOWNS AND UPS OF PRESIDING ELDERING"—THE "UPS" COME LAST.

DEAR METHODIST:—I have just returned from a seven weeks' trip east of the Blue Mountains; on my second round of quarterly meetings, and I cannot wait until the close of the quarter to tell the news.

If I should head this article I would call it, "Ups and Downs of Presiding Eldering," but what do we care for the "downs," when the "ups" come last? which they surely will. "Rejoice not against me, O mine enemy: when I fall I shall arise."—(Micah 7:8.) My first quarterly meeting was held at White Cross school-house, in Boise Valley, where Bro. Eagle held his revival last winter. There was some objection to holding religious service in the school-house from the first; and to insure its use, the citizens of the district elected two Methodists as directors, (one South and one North), to stand off the infidel director, who was a "hold-over;" but alas, one Methodist had come so near backsliding as to join with the infidel and lock the door against us on Monday. On repairing to the house Monday evening we found some young men "who feared not God nor regarded directors," but had regard for shivering women and children; (who were locked out in the snow) had broken the lock and forced an entrance, and a good congregation was gathered, but under the circumstances, we retired without preaching. Thence to Express, on Burnt River. No preacher in charge present. "Where is Bro. Yoakum?" He is at Baker City, 27 miles away on Saturday evening, looking through the cars for the P. E. But he did not find him. He was at the seat of the quarterly meeting 24 hours earlier than that. We repaired to the school-house, "where prayer was wont to be made." We found a Christmas dance had been there; the seats out in the snow; the stove set aside; six or eight empty whiskey bottles in the yard; so we retired, and went to another school-house and held a good service; several penitents. Thence for Eagle Valley. On arriving at Baker City we were informed "we could not get to Eagle Valley on account of deep snow." We inquired if the mail would go. The driver said he "would try." Then we said, "By the grace of God we will get to Eagle Valley or see the end of the road." We got there all right; only mired the horses in snow once. But, alas! no P. C. present again. No quarterly meeting announced. "What's the matter now?" Bro. Crego had heard it would be impossible for the P. E. to be there, and he was snow-bound and had a broken rib, &c. Bro. Sanders was gone hunting. What is to be done now? Drum up a congregation; which was successfully done by Saturday night. But the floor was awfully slick. Christmas dance. O, do we not need a church here? Fine congregations and good interest. Closed Tuesday night. The lumber is cut for the new church, part of it, and the stone for the foundation on the ground. There is an effort being made to change it to a "Union" church, (I call it a division church). I fear that if we fail to get aid from our Board it will be disastrous; for if they build a "Union church" they will dance in it. If a donation is granted, Bro. Sanders and another man will borrow the money and finish it as soon as spring opens.

Thence 50 miles sleigh-ride to Wingville, (so called because the left wing of Price's army settled there). Thank God we found Bro. Kirk at his post and everything in good trim. Good meeting. No especial interest.

Thence, accompanied by Bro. Kirk and his excellent wife, to La Grande, where we found Bro. Barnhart very sick; unable to attend his quarterly meeting. Bro. Kirk and I commenced Tuesday evening at Mosse's Chapel. Continued till Thursday night a week when Bro. Barnhart had sufficiently recovered to be out. Bless God! the first night he was out two were converted; one of them his oldest son, who is studying law. May God call him to practice His own Law, and may he be successful in its dispensation. Five were converted before the meeting closed.

Thence to Pine Grove, about 30 miles northeast from La Grande. There we had the pleasure of dedicating, to the worship of Almighty God, one of the neatest and prettiest churches in the country. In fact, it is the neatest country church we ever saw. It would be a credit to the city. To Bro. Filmore Wyatte the church and neighborhood are indebted for this beautiful edifice, who, after large liberality in its erection, assumed all liabilities so it could be dedicated to God; and prefers to carry all the burden (about $400) himself rather than to have the claim pressed on the congregation at the dedication. We trust the brethren and friends will not allow him to suffer. He is not a rich man in this world's goods, but is rich in liberality. May the God of all grace bless him abundantly. Bro. Faucher is doing a good work here. He held the P. E. as long as possible, and providence helped him, by drifting the snow so that it was impossible to leave him before two Sundays had passed. The result of the meeting was, the church dedicated, fifteen souls converted, the church greatly revived and encouraged; the pastor strengthened and ingratiated into the good graces of his congregation. Bro. Isbell disappointed, and the Elder a week behind in getting home to his family. Glory to God in the highest.

E. G. Michael.

ABOUT THE WORKERS.

—Rev. David Morton says in a private letter to us: "I am glad to hear of your good meeting at Corvallis. Wish I was there to help you a week or ten days. It would remind me of Boulder and Helena in 1877."

The occasions to which our brother refers, were times of labor and also of refreshing, for not a few people were mightily stirred upon the subject of religion and some were added unto the Lord. He was also at Corvallis once, where he held a quarterly conference, and is yet held in kind remembrance by the people. Doubtless he still remembers his stage ride through the Hell-gate canyon, and his stay at the Kennedy House, where he got some of the hottest pepper-sauce he had ever tasted in all his life before. The Doctor has a keen sense of the ludicrous, is a good narrator of incidents, and we imagine that a collection of such as he could relate in connection with his extensive travels in the West and elsewhere would make "mighty interesting reading," and afford healthful entertainment and recreation to the rising generation, as well as aid the cause of Church Extension.

—Rev. L. B. Stateler writes from Eureka Springs, Ark., that he and Bro. A. G. Clarke and Sister Clarke are in fair health and getting along nicely. Our people here expressed great satisfaction at Brother Stateler's generous donation to the Loan Fund of the Board of Church Extension. It is the result of sales of stock—both horses and cattle—which were the actual outgrowth—increase of the few head of cows and the two brood mares that Sister Stateler took with her when, after her home was destroyed by fire in Kansas, she started to Denver in the midst of that dreary winter. Our brother felt a strong desire to put this the result, largely, of his devoted wife's management and toil where it would not only serve to perpetuate her memory, but also aid in carrying forward the work to which her life was given. Hence it is very appropriately called the "Mittie Stateler Loan Fund." It was a happy conception. We do not know what better disposition could have been made of it. Brother Stateler has contributed more or less —in some cases hundreds of dollars— to every church and parsonage in the Montana Conference, besides supplementing the missionary appropriation in some instances, helping to pay expenses of preachers to this field and assisting in the support of others already here. He is a large contributor to our Preacher's Benefit Fund; still continues to help needy cases, and proposes that all he has shall go to help sustain and advance the cause that lies nearest his heart. The Board of Church Extension has been very liberal in helping us in Montana, both in Church and Parsonage building. We are glad that its resources are thus increased for helping both in Montana and elsewhere; and, looking at it even from a selfish standpoint, we believe that the investment will result in greater good to Montana in the end than if left in private hands and all expended in Montana in a year or two.

—We regret to learn of Bro. Isbell's poor health, and hope he may be restored soon to his wonted vigor.

—Brother Parnall is suffering from nervous prostration since the long siege at Stevensville. We regret also that Sister Parnall has also been quite unwell. Trust that they will soon be ready for active service again.

—J. W. Compton writes that a chinnook has about spoiled the sleighing at Palouse, and he is hoping for more of "the beautiful." My! We supposed the ground was clear long ago, and that they were nearly ready for making gardens in that Palouse paradise. Our Brother will have to come to Montana, where we have sunny skies, where the spring birds are singing, the farmers in some places are beginning to plow. Christian people are shouting the praise of God and are "happy on the way," and everything is promising for prosperous times this year.

—Mr. J. W. Chapman, Grand Secretary of the I. O. G. T. in Montana, sends us some blank petitions, asking the World's Fair Commissioners at Chicago to close its doors on Sunday, and that the sale of spirituous liquors be prohibited on the grounds, and says: "Circulate, and return with all the names you can get, and show that all our people are not in favor of the saloon and Sunday breaking." We shall take pleasure in doing all we can to secure these ends, and hope that every reader of the "Montana Methodist," 21 years old and upwards will make it a point to sign such a petition. It would be a sad spectacle for a Christian nation like ours to invite the world to a great banquet at which, for money, we disregard the command of Him whom we profess to trust (this is the inscription on our coin, "In God we trust")' and turn our great parlors where our guests will study our customs and examine our productions, into a gigantic grog-shop. Let the great mass of our people rise up in their might and say it shall not be.

—We are glad that Bro. Michael didn't wait to get around before sending us the good news from beyond the Blue Mountains. His letter sounds like some of our past Montana experience, except that we do not now remember ever having been locked out of a school-house, especially by such a combination as a Methodist and an infidel. The devil sometimes out-does himself, and we believe it will be true of this case. Thank the Lord that, though there may be "downs" along the journey, the "ups" come last, for after while the Master will say to the faithful itinerant, who has spent his strength and life laboring in the mountain and traversing plains and valleys to tell the story of the Cross. "It is enough; Come up higher."

—Brother Price, of Helena, has been assisting in a revival meeting at Deer Lodge.

—A card from Brother Squires informs us that he had a big wedding at his church Sunday night after leaving Corvallis. He took advantage of the occasion by preaching a "big" sermon on "the Marriage Supper."

—Brother King's letter, "A Look Backward," carries us back to our boyhood and to the time when he was but a young man just buckling on the armor, and calls up many precious and tender memories. Our heart heaves within and tears unbidden start, as we glance backward over the scenes and associations of some of those dark days when men's souls were tried as by fire. His wife and our precious mother were bosom friends. They are now in heaven together. We know something of the battles that our brother has had to fight, and rejoice in the great success that the Lord has given him. He is now one of the strong men of the Southwest Mo. Conference. Our readers will hear from him again in our next issue.

Good Cheer From Richmond, Va.

BROTHER STANLEY:—I send one dollar with which to renew my subscription to the "Methodist." I always hail its arrival with delight. Through it I hear of the good work going on in the far West, and it makes my soul thrill with joy. At times I wish to be there. You have my sympathy and daily prayers for your success. I know we have trials and hardships. We have them here. But what are ours compared with yours? But the "greater the cross the brighter the crown," if we are faithful in the work that God has given us to do. I have four sons, and if they should be called to mission fields I would bid them God speed in such a glorious work.

From the "Methodist" I see that Brother Waggoner has finished his church. It is a great joy to his many friends here to know that he has been instrumental in building the first Methodist church in Wallace. May God crown his efforts with success. I attended one of his protracted meetings not long before he left Virginia. I saw 225 persons converted in ten days. O what a glorious meeting that was. God was with us. Will I ever forget it? Never while memory lasts. May his work go on and on.

A kind providence permitting, I shall visit your beautiful valleys and lofty snow-capped mountains next summer. With earnest prayers for all who are working for Christ in the far West.

Very truly,
Mrs. M. C. Cotes.

The "Methodist" Ahead.

BROTHER STANLEY:—As my time is out for the "Montana Methodist," I enclose money order for one dollar to pay for it another year. I take quite a number of papers, but must say in truth, that the "Montana Methodist" is the best one of all. I take great interest in reading about the Western work. I have quite a collection of curiosities, and often wish I had some from the West.

Mrs. M. A. Spotts.

Armstrong, Mo.

Many words of congratulation reach us concerning the paper, though they do not puff us up, for we can see too many defects about it. Still, it is filling a niche, meeting a felt want and giving encouragement and inspiration to many people all over this broad land. It stands on its merits. We can offer no costly premiums to purchase patronage. We are putting considerable time and labor into it, as well as some money, to keep it going. Will not our friends rally and help all they can? It is better for many to bear part than for one or two to bear all the burden. Let each one send us a new subscriber right away. We mean YOU.

We sympathize with our dear Brother, Rev. J. W. Payne, of Atchen, Kansas, and his wife in the affliction that has come to them by the taking away of their darling babe, which was born on the same day, 16th of November, that our baby boy came to our home. We enjoyed sweet Christian fellowship with our Brother last fall, and heard him speak tenderly and lovingly of his family. He knows in whom to trust. The Savior that he preaches to others will sustain and comfort him and his in their sorrow.

——o——

A Look Backward.

BY REV. JOSEPH KING.

Well, Mr. Ed-itor: (You see I had almost stopped at "Ed.") I want to say first of all, that I really enjoy the regular visits of your newsy little paper. Now do not get angry because I use that hateful adjective "little," because it is said you know, "that good stuff is often put up in small packages." I can truly say with Uncle William Warren, that your paper often makes me think of the earlier days of my ministry. I have not forgotten a quarterly meeting in a grove held by the sainted Hedgepeth, ten miles west of Leavenworth City, in the State of Kansas, at which time and place a boy was licensed to preach the gospel, whose career I have watched with pleasurable pride from that day to the present. Nor have I forgotten that boy's sainted mother and godly father, whose shelter and hospitality this winter has so often enjoyed. My first child was born under his roof, in troublesome times, and his eldest boy acted the part of a son to mine in my absence.

Your reference to Israel Cook in the January number of the "Methodist," calls up the earlier days of my ministry. In the fall of 1860 I spent my first night on Rock Creek at Uriah Cook's, the father of Israel Cook, and in his house I did much of my first preaching. In his cabin I began my first protracted meeting, and there some of his children and grandchildren were happily converted to God. Israel Cook—his wife and two daughters became members of the church during this year. His house became one of our regular preaching places, for church houses we had none, and school houses were just about as scarce as church houses. In his house I delivered my first discourse on the vexed subject of baptism. The Campbellite Christians were then, as now, always ready for a 'spute, and after a real revival of religion in a neighborhood, they "trouble the waters" very much.

It was so in this instance, and I was urged to preach on the subject. But I had been taught that "small boats should keep close to shore," and I was really afraid to "launch out into the deep." The Methodist circuit rider was then accused of cowardice or ignorance. While I denied the first, I pleaded guilty to the last.

Finally, at the suggestion of friends, I agreed to deliver a discourse on baptism at my next regular appointment. The charge was a "six weeks circuit," and this gave me six week's to prepare. I was in a fix, and did not know what to do.

E. P. Warren-Rockford Circuit.

At this time Uriah Cook put into my hands a copy of the Bishop Morris' Sermons. This was a fortunate thing for me. The first time I opened the book I saw the discourses on baptism. I read them and was charmed. It did not take long to decide the course for me to take.

To memorize these discourses was a labor of love. At the end of six weeks I was ready. The congregation assembled and the preacher was on hand. The people were surprised at the effort, it was a surprise indeed. And no wonder, for the preacher gave them Bishop Morris out and out. But it did the work, and Rev. F. M. Williams, now of the Mississippi Conference, baptized the young converts, and did not "go down into the water." But the Campbellite brethren never forgave the preacher, and at his last appointment on Rock Creek, they took vengeance as they supposed, by raising over him a United States flag. How blind is revenge.

The One Progressing, the Other More Liberal.

We see, under the caption "Pulpit Progress" in an editorial of a secular paper of high standing, some of the things that a congregational preacher said in a set sermon on the claims of the theatre upon the social life of the church. "The enterprise," (theatrical in Norwich, Conn.,) he said, "has been urged upon the support of citizens of all classes, as one of great public interest and advantage, even the pastors of churches having been applied to with the most cordial invitation to subscribe to the capital stock." The great work of construction has been pushed forward diligently through the seven days of the week, as one of those works of necessity and mercy that must not be interrupted by the day of rest. So that you were enlivened on your way to and from your Sabbath worship by the merry music of the workman's hammer, etc. In another creditable secular paper we find this: "The behavior of some of Louisville's belles, at a few of the recent suppers given, shows how much more liberal society in the city is to-day, than it was ten years ago." * * "At several of these suppers, several of Louisville's best known girls have imbibed so freely of the good wines served, that they had to be helped from their tables to their carriages. Ten years ago the telling of this story would have stirred the social river to its very depth. But to-day it will hardly cause a gentle ripple to ruffle its surface." It is said: "that straws show the way the wind is blowing." Such sermons, expressions and scenes as the above, show unmistakably the tendency of the religious and social life of to-day. While these utterances and scenes may be regarded as extreme, yet it must be admitted that life in the church and in society to-day tends to a laxity that admits of innovations by the introduction of vice, if it does not invite them. We should be astonished, that after concerts, tableaux and other like entertainments, in the interests of the church, and often had in the house of divine service, of which the Saviour said, after He had driven out those who were in a similar way desecrating it, "My house shall be called of all nations the house of prayer," the theatre, club-rooms, billiard halls etc., should spring up in her social life! And along this line of "progress," comes church fairs, grab-bag sociables etc., that involves the same principle that is employed in the Louisiana lottery, and in all other schemes for obtaining money by chance. What is the difference, for instance, in a young man taking his chances in a lottery wheel for any amount invested therein, to obtain a greater sum, and that of chancing one dollar in a basket for the privilege of eating its contents with his favorite girl? The difference between these methods of obtaining means for church uses, and all other methods of obtaining means by chance, can only be in quantity and not in quality. So also, the difference between tableaux and similar entertainments in the interests of the church, and the theatrical performances, is alone in quantity. And quantity, it is well known, cannot determine the nature of the value that it carries. "He that is unjust in the least, is unjust also in much," is the unequivocal decision of principle; and when we leave this divinely adjusted line, we are at once at sea without chart, compass, rudder, or any means to direct our course, or to determine our whereabouts, or where a haven of safety lies. Out on the sea of moral quantity, where all crafts, whatever may have been the signs at their mast-head, that have risked their fortune to its undefinable treacherous bosom, have been lost. The above minister teaches from the pulpit on the sacred day of rest, that such was the imperative demand for the theatre in his town as to justify the desecration of the Sabbath, that saw the Lord arise in the competition of the world's redemption, that the workman's hammer" in its desecration "was enlivening music" to the church goer. This, we are told, is "pulpit progress," and the society that retains in its circles women that imbibe of the good wines served at suppers" to drunkenness, is called "more liberal than it was ten years ago," when it would "have tabooed them" from its associations. Moral and social dissipation, we think, would better express the nature of the above pulpit utterances and social scenes. That is not "progress" that violates or that superinduces elements that are contrary to the principles of advance in any given department of life. Nor is that "liberal" in society that allows the distinction between vice and virtue to be destroyed. Might we not say in reverence, and holy zeal for the intergrity of God's kingdom among men: "It is time for thee, Lord, to work, for they have made void thy law?" These expressions of the religious and social life show that the leprosy is within, that the moral bacteria is corrupting their life blood. "If the foundation be destroyed, what can the righteous do?" The prophets prophesy falsely * * and my people love to have it so, and what will ye do in the end thereof? Which say to the seers, see not; and to the prophets, prophesy unto us not right things. Speak unto us smooth things, prophesy deceit. Get you out of the way, turn aside out of the path, cause the Holy one of Israel to cease before us." When "the fulness of the Gentiles be come in," then will Israel's exile cease, and "the times of the Gentiles be fulfilled." Let him who reads his Bible, search it, that he may find just what "the fullness of the Gentiles" means. We would respectfully suggest that, possibly, the texts quoted above will throw some light upon this important subject. It certainly does not mean when all of the Gentiles are saved. Then it must be that innovating vice into the religious and social life of the Gentile world, that renders the Gospel inefficient in further effecting their salvation. This, we understand, was the condition the Jews were in, when the kingdom of God was taken from them and given to the Gentiles. We are divinely informed, that Satan, who introduced the inclination in Adam's family to attempt "progress" at the expense of law in his final effort to establish his reign over them along this line, will so adroitly temper falsehood to the truth, "that if it were possible, he would deceive the very elect" thereby. This is very appropriately styled. "The mystery of iniquity" that now worketh, inducing man into such relations to the truth that it becomes darkness within him. And there never was a time in the history of the civilized world that the sentiment against law and order was as formidable and determined as it is to-day. In the religious, the social, and in the business life in the civilized world it is being pressed to the front with a wisdom and a zeal that defies alike the theologian and the statesman. And the hope is: "Only He that now letteth will let until he be taken out of the way." "But the judgment shall sit and they shall take away his dominion, to consume and to destroy it unto the end." And the kingdom and dominion, and the greatness of the kingdom under the whole heaven, shall be given to the people of the saints of the Most High," (those who have had "the law," by regeneration and sanctification, "put into their hearts and written in their minds") "where kingdom is an everlasting kingdom, and all dominions shall serve and obey Him. "What I say unto you, I say unto you all, 'watch,'" said He who came "to destroy the works of the devil."

Break Up the Fallow Ground.

The secret of much of the superficialness and short coming in Christian character and life to-day is the failure to realize the true nature of sin—its enormity, its virutency, its sinfulness in the sight of God. The fallow ground of the heart is not broken up. In order to treat a disease successfully, its true character must be understood. The case must be properly diagnosed. The wound must be probed to the bottom; the surgeon's knife penetrate to the extremity of the affected part, before there is hope of healthfulness again. We are influenced in our estimates of sin too much by the spirit that is in the world, by the "carnal mind" which is "enmity against God," and which "understandeth not the things of the Spirit of God." We do not give heed to the word of God which is "quick and powerful, and sharper than a two-edged sword, piercing to the dividing asunder of soul and spirit, of the joints and marrow, and is a discerner of the thoughts and intents of the heart;" and, like the man "beholding his natural face in the mirror," we "go our way and straightway forget what manner of persons we are." The wily foe, the enemy of our souls, the arch deceiver, secretes himself in the citadel that he has captured and ruled so long, blinds the mind, corrupts the heart, and whispers "peace, peace when there is no peace." He would "deceive, if it were possible, the very elect." He does deceive many ministers, causing them, as did the prophets of old, to "heal slightly the hurt of the daughter of my people." Only a short time ago, we heard a sermon, which though delivered with great earnestness, and was otherwise Scriptural and faultless, was greatly marred by the absence of the doctrine of depravity, and the necessity of regeneration.

The first thing that the average man begins to talk about when approached upon the subject of religion, is his morality. To hear him talk you would almost take him for an angel. Mr. Moody relates that when visiting a State prison once, in which there were many convicts, upon conversing personally with the prisoners, he never found as many innocent men in his life, within the same time and space—taking their word for it. Judges, juries, courts, witnesses attorneys; all were to blame for their presence there. You see the point. There never can be any extensive work of grace, any well defined and joyful Christian experince until there is deep conviction for sin in the heart followed by hearty repentance and faith in the Lord Jesus Christ. This comes by reading and hearing his word, in which he gives "line upon line, and precept upon precept, here a little and there a little," and which is compared to a two-edged sword penetrating deep into the soul. Conviction also comes by yielding to the influence of the Spirit which we are exhorted not to "quench," which convinces "of sin, righteousness and of judgment," and which is to "take of the things of God and show them unto us." It also comes in answer to prayer. He opens to those who knock, is found of those who seek, gives to those who ask,and draws nigh to those who draw nigh to him. As when one approches a great light, all surrounding objects are brought into view, so when the soul draws nigh to Christ the great Son of Righteousness, its own sinfulness and utter unworthiness are more clearly revealed and more greatly abhorred than ever before; until He speaks the word, and says, "thy sins are forgiven thee."

Paul, when a Jew, considered himself a pretty good man. He was "alive without the law"—had a good conscience, but thought he ought to do many things contrary to the "name"of Jesus was filled with anger, breathing threatenings and slaughter against the Christians, and dragging men and women to prison and to judgment; "but when the commandment came"—when Christ stood before him in the light that shined aoout him above the brightness of the sun, and the voice spake unto him from heaven,"I am Jesus, whom thou persecutest"—"sin revived and he died." All his false notions of self righteousness vanished in the twinkling of an eye, and he confessed himself the "chief of sinners." In describing the condition of the awakened sinner, not yet saved, which we may believe was his own experience while drinking the bitter cup, he cries out, "oh, wretched man that I am, who shall deliver me from the body of this death?" The sense of guilt and of the the thralldom of his depraved heart that had been "exceedingly mad" "breathed forth such threatenings and slaughter," now haunted him in his blindness like a dead body, a putrid corpse chained to him, day and night, wherever he went, with all its ghastliness and vileness, threatening him with a horrible fate, until he fled to Christ for refuge and found deliverance. Sin was an awful thing to Paul, and once freed from it he never forgot his experience, but told it wherever he went, and never ceased his warfare against that which came so near being his external ruin.

David, in the fifty-first Psalm, expresses the sentiments of every truly awakened and penitent heart. He acknowledges his sin, and makes a full confession. The remembrance of it is grievous unto him. The voice of God, speaking to his conscience and revealing to him the guilt and corruption of the "inward parts" of his nature, where only truth and wisdom should dwell, drowned every thing else and he cries out, "Have mercy upon me, O God,"according to thy loving kindness; according unto the multitude of thy tender mercies blot out my transgressions. Wash me thoroughly from mine iniquity, and cleanse me from my sin."

He gives his experience as that of one whose bones were broken, the jagged edges jarring and grinding against each other. What could be more distressing? In an other place he speaks of being in a "horrible pit, and miry clay," where he called for help until the Lord, inclined unto him, heard his cry, brought him out, set him upon a rock, gave him a new song, and established his goings, so that he might keep in the way.

The people of God in all the ages who have been most useful in his service have had a similar experience. This is the way our fathers trod. Let us keep to the old land marks. May God help us to abhor sin in all its forms, grant us "A complete and continued deliverance from it, and power over it, that we may exult in the joy of a great salvation.

Grace Versus Gracefulness.

At a meeting in which the difference between the outward manifestations of persons seeking salvation in modern times and those of half a century or more ago was being discussed, a stylish young clergyman accounted for the fact by the difference in the ideas, tastes and manners of the people. "The fact is," said he, "men come to Christ more gracefully now than formerly."

We fear there is too much truth in the statement. Education, culture, gracefulness of movement,and all that, are quite proper when not at the expense of true piety and grace in the heart. But there is danger of men perishing in their sins while the church is cultivating gracefulness of manner and her ministers are posing to please polite and purse-proud parshioners. We have known people to be too polite to tell a poor man that he was going to die, when it was known that he had but a few hours to spend upon the earth, and it was very important for him to know it. They were afraid of hurting his feelings. There are those who are so polite that they prophesy "smooth things" cry "peace and safety" when sudden destruction is at the door. Where their is too much anxiety about outward actions, there is apt to be a lack of honesty and sincerity inside.

When it comes to a question of life and death all regard for ceremony ceases. When a train of cars is wrecked; a ship is going down,or the Hotel Royal in New York is on fire, with more than a hundred men and women standing at the windows,with all means of escape cut off inside,and crying for help, which must be rendered in a few moments if it does any good, the question of "gracefulness" is banished from the rescuers and those seeking to be rescued. Some rush out head foremost, others feet foremost, some erect, others on their hands and knees, some by ropes,some by ladders, some are carried by big blundering men, who it may be, they would not have spoken to an hour before, but who have large hearts and strong and willing hands, while scarcely one has thought to bring his effects, or even his clothing, save what he had on. The man who would stop to strike attitudes, or cut a figure on such an occasion, would be hissed from the scene or trampled upon by those engaged in honest work of saving men.

When the prodigal came to himself, in the far country among the swine, and started home we imagine that there was not much effort at "gracefulness," as with bowed head, tattered garments with somewhat of the scant of the sty sticking to them, and with trembling form and tottering step, he wended his way to his father's house. True, he had fixed up a little speech to make on his arrival there. But the dear old man would not permit such formality. He saw him a great way off, ran to meet him, fell on his neck, kissed him,and made a great ado over him; calling in the neighbors to rejoice with him,saying, "This, my son, was lost, and is found, was dead, and is alive again," which gave great offense to another fellow who we imagine was somewhat a stickler for gracefulness, and akin to those who make broad their phylacteries, make long prayers, standing upon the street corners, love to be seen, who bind heavy burdens upon the helpless, but never raise a little finger to relieve them. Blind Bartimeus,when he knew that the Lord was passing that way, cried, "Jesus, thou son of David, have mercy on me." The sticklers for decorum tried to quiet him, but he would not down. Too much was at stake for him to be still. It was the opportunity of his life, and he cried all the more, until the Master ordered that he be brought unto him. Thank God what is often considered indecorous in the sight of men is perfect order in the sight of God, who would stop his work in creating a new world, if necessary, to listen to the cry of a penitent sinner, and to bring him up out of an horrible pit and put a new song in his mouth.

John Wesley was once a great stickler for "decency and order." He was of the strictest sect. But the sight of the neglected, hungry and perishing thousands on the London common, at Moorfield, and Kingsbury, emptied him of such bigotry and folly, and, like his Master, he threw himself among the people, for which he was pelted with stones and eggs and persecuted by the lovers of form and ceremony. Methodism with her 20,000,000 adherents is the outcome of such a movement. Only a few years ago a poor Methodist preacher was put to one side by his church and conference because of certain thought-to-be un-Methodistic methods and he threw himself into the slums of London. The Salvation Army with its millions of soldiers marching from earth to heaven, filling the earth with songs and hallelujahs,led on by the intrepid Booth, is the result.

Some one remarked of Mr. Harrison, the evangelist, while conducting a meeting in San Francisco, as he would move from pulpit to chancel, and occasionally leap over the back of a pew, in his exhortations, "did you ever see a man act so before?" "No," remarked the other, "except when trying to save a drowning man." Mr. H. was in earnest, and didn't stop to study gracefulness. Thousands have been saved under his ministry. It is related of the late Mr. Spurgeon that once in the midst of one of his great sermons, overcome by his emotions, he stopped short and said: "I feel like shouting Hallelujah," and called upon all who sympathized with him to say "Hallelujah," when one mighty shout went up from the immense congregation that made the welkin ring. The same thing has occurred in many a Methodist meeting.

While we attach no more importance to the somewhat irregular manifestations that attended the revival meetings of our fathers, considered as mere acting—when not the spontaneous outburst of pent-up religious feeling—yet we confess to a longing for more of the old-fashioned altar-pounding, sin-confessing,mercy-calling, hallelujah-shouting kind of revivals. Revivals where men and women are pricked to the heart by the sword of the Spirit, plead for mercy and never give up the struggle until they have passed from death unto life and can see to read their title clear to mansions in the skies. This is the kind of religion that our fathers and mothers experienced and practiced. It was good enough for them, saved them in life, and sustained and comforted them as they passed over the river, whither they went shouting the praises of God, and it is good enough for us. With such service we believe that the Lord is well pleased.

Why I Go to Church on Rainy Sundays.

BY FRANCES RIDLEY HAVERGAL.

I attend church on rainy Sundays because—

1. God has blessed the Lord's Day and hallowed it, making no exceptions for rainy Sundays.

2. I expect my minister to be there. I should be surprised if he were to stay at home for the weather.

3. If his hands fall through weakness, I shall have great reason to blame myself, unless I sustain him by my prayers and my presence.

4 By staying away I may lose the prayers which bring God's blessing, and the sermon that would have done me great good.

5. My presence is more needful on Sundays when there are few, than on those days when the church is crowded.

6. Whatever station I hold in the church, my example must influence others. If I stay away, why may not they?

7. On any important business, rainy weather does not keep me at home; and church attendance is, in God's sight, very important.

8. Among the crowds of pleasure-seekers, I see that no weather keeps the delicate female from the ball, the party, or the concert.

9. Among other blessings, such weather will show me on what foundation my faith is built. It will prove how much I love Christ. True love rarely fails to meet an appointment.

10. Those who stay from church because it is too warm, or too cold, or too rainy, frequently absent themthat where two or three meet together in God's name, he will be in the selves on fair Sundays.

11. Though my excuses saitisfy myself, they still must undergo God's scrutiny; and they must be well grounded to bear that. (Luke 14:14,

12. There is a special promise, midst of them.

13. An avoidable absence from the church is an infallible evidence of spiritual decay. Disciples first follow Christ at a distance, and then, like Peter, do not know him.

14. My faith is to be shown by my self-denying Christian life, and not by the rise and fall of the thermometer.

15. Such yielding to surmountable difficulties prepares for yielding to those merely imaginary, until thousands never enter a church, and yet think they have good reason for such neglect.

16. By a suitable arrangement on Saturday I shall be able to attend church without exhaustion; otherwise, my late work on Saturday night must tend to unfit me for the Sunday enjoyment of Christian privileges.

17. I know not how many more Sundays God may give me; and it would be a poor preparation for my first Sunday in Heaven to have slighted my last Sunday on earth.

VOL. 4. MARCH 15, 1892. No. 87.

Sins Taken Away.

Praise God through Jesus Christ,
Who takes my sins away;
And gives me a new song to sing,
Rejoicing every day.

His grace my heart renews,
Regenerates my soul;
And puts away my guilt and shame,
And sanctifies me whole.

The Spirit of his Son
Is sent into my heart;
And dwelling richly there by faith,
All fear and doubts depart.

And now with joyful speed,
I run the heav'nly race;
Shall conquer sin, and death, and hell,
Through riches of his grace.

If faithful to the end,
The crown of life is mine;
The palm, the robe, the victor's song,
The glory, Lord, is thine!

Among the Church Papers.

What a blessing is the Religious Press of to-day! What a legacy is ours, who live at the close of the 19th century! I sometimes fear we do not appreciate our heritage on this line as we ought to do. It is really surprising that any man who does not think the world bounded by the horizon, and who really desires to cultivate his mind by being brought into contact with all the world, (than which nothing broadens a man more) should fail to secure the weekly visits of one or more of our church papers. The endless variety of subjects touched upon and handled by these papers is truly wonderful. With the Holy Bible, and the weekly visits of one or more of our church papers a man must certainly make advancement. Take the St. Louis Christian Advocate first. Its "News of the Week," its "Editorials" and its "Correspondence" to say nothing of its "Home News" and its "Clippings," and what a feast of fat things is served up to us fifty two times in a year—and all for just two dollars!

If, as Bro. Blakey thinks, Dr. Caradine gets a little monotonous, we have variety enough to atone for all that. The first page is always new, entertaining and reliable. The old veteran seems to have lost but little of his vim, and his page sparkles as of yore, with facts and figures.

—Dr. D. C. Kelly has been giving us some thoughtful facts on "The Next Ecumenical Conference, and Our Two Methodisms." While the doctor sighs for union, he sees "through a glass darkly." Will the stronger Methodism be taught by, and surrender to, the weaker? We shall see.

Then there is the "Christian Advocate" of Nashville, Tenn., the general organ of the church. What a volume of intellectual pabulum is served up in this from time to time! Dr. Hoss and Dr. Bounds are giving the church a grand paper. The General Conference made no mistake in electing these "giants of the quill" to the position they occupy. The Editor in Chief has given us some mighty good reading of late, and has stated some wholesome facts. He has spiked Dr. Caradine's gun, and he has done it well. He has given our "Brethren up North" some facts that will do them good, if they will only "read, mark, learn, and inwardly digest them." No preacher in the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, ought to try to get along without the "Christian Advocate." Dr. Bounds keeps up his end of the "doubletree," and he does it well. The Holy Ghost seems to breathe through all he says. May his "Bow abide in strength."

Rev. T. J. Duncan, of the Tennessee Conference, has been giving his experience of "Seven Years in the Cabinet as a Presiding Elder," in the "Tennessee Methodist," which is well worth reading. He paints some life-like pictures indeed. He certainly kept eyes and ears open. He has told some terrible "secrets," and yet there are secrets that can only be learned by experience. Bro. Duncan is a man of courage, or he had never told the secrets of preachers' wives." After eleven years as a Presiding Elder, I can fully endorse all he has said. I wish every young preacher could read these articles from the gifted pen of this good man.

Rev. L. B. Statler has brought to light many things in his articles published in the "Montana Methodist," in which he gave many thilling incidents of "Pioneer Life." The articles have been very instructive. He has done a noble work for the church, and redeemed from oblivion many incidents that had otherwise been lost.

I cannot close this article without speaking of "The Missionary Reporter." This is in the front rank of the Missionary Periodicals of the day. It has no superior in this country. It ought to be in every Methodist family. It covers the whole scope of the Missionary operations of the world. A prayerful study of its contents will make any heart glow with a Christ-like desire for the salvation of the world. This is a "monthly," and is sent to any address for thirty-five cents a year.

Now, Mr. Editor, tell me if this is not a library from which may be gathered gems of precious thought, that must of necessity broaden any man who gives himself up to a prayerful study of the same? Surely the Religious Press is one of the greatest blessings of the nineteenth century.

J. King.

From Chillicothe, Mo.

Dear Brother Stanley:

Your paper comes to us regularly, and we enjoy reading it as much as any of our church papers. I appreciate the notice you gave of my little books, in the last number. I thank you both for the testimonials of the books, and the appeal in their behalf. The profit on the sales is small, but every little is a perceptible help to a poor man. My purpose, however, is not to make money; but to do good in the widest possible circulation of my little books. The brethren, both in the ministry and laity, are helping me, and I am grateful. Truly they shall have their reward. The books ratail, each, at fifty cents a copy, with liberal discount to those who may order for sale. I would like to send one or more copies to a few hundred of your readers.

Our church is doing fairly well in Chillicothe. Our pastor, Rev. J. R. A. Vaughan, is in favor with his people. He preaches alike to the head and heart, and with great solicitude and earnestness, that he may please God and do good. Such preaching will bear fruit in its season, the larger part of the harvest coming in beyond the river.

Rev. S. H. Milam, the new P. E., has entered upon his work with a purpose to succeed. His fidelity and success so far give promise to the future. The office of Presiding Elder involves great labors and responsibilities. Happy if the incumbent shall magnify and make it honorable.

The 14th instant was my sixty-seventh birth-day. My health is less vigorous this winter than usual, being confined for the most part at home. Soon now I hope to get out and do some work. That death may not take me unawares, I keep my house in order. Yours in sympathy with every good word and work.

S. W. Cope.

Our Little Boy.

"It must be sweet, in childhood, to give back
The spirit to its Maker, ere the heart
Has grown familiar with the paths of sin,
And sown to garner up its bitter fruits.
I knew a boy whose infant feet had trod
Upon the blossom of some seven springs,
And when the eight came round, and called him out
To revel in its light, he turned away,
And sought his chamber to lie down and die."

Gone. Our little Frankie has left us. Our little bud, that, here upon earth, promised to blossom into such a fair white flower, has been taken from us; but only to be transplanted into fairer climes.

Our loss is his gain. We know that he is lost only for a short time; only a few more days and we shall find him again in all his brightness and glory.

Oh! what a blessing and comfort Jesus left for us when he said, "It is not the will of your Father which is in heaven, that one of these little ones should perish."

With us for so short a time, yet his little life was so closely entwined round ours that the sunshine seems to have gone from us all.

What a heart pang when we look for the bright eyes and listen for the merry, childish laugh. Only to find the words "gone, gone," everywhere. In vain does "mamma" listen for the restless patter of little feet or watch for her merry little elf. But we know that he treads the streets which are "all golden and broad."

We do not know how much we love our flowerlets till they are gone, nor know the void that the absence of one little form can leave until we too have lost a bud "that we tendeth with such care." Nor can we dream of the gloom and shadow that will be left when God has called home one of his sunbeams. But if God took our little one he left us the blessed assurance that Frankie is with him, for our Saviour says, "of such is the Kingdom of heaven." We know that Frankie "does always behold the face of my Father which is in heaven."

My God give us grace and strength to so live that we may never offend one of these little ones, but may we guide their little feet onward and upward till God calls us home.

God comfort the bereaved ones and may the thought of his life in heaven purify their life here upon earth. May his death prove only one more tie to draw us nearer to heaven and to our Father.—S. J. N.

Notelets.

—We cannot express the gratitude that we feel of having Bishop Haygood with us here in the West. Whatever he does is with his might. That car-load of missionaries from Georgia has directed the attention of the entire country to our work on the Pacific coast, and inspired confidence in its success. The good Bishop seems to have received the mantle of the ascended Marvin, who passed from earth with the burden of the Western work upon his heart. We shall expect him in Montana before very long. We publish a letter from his pen, copied from the Southern Advocate. Much of it is as true of Montana as if it had been written of this country and of our workers. We have always believed that when we would get our leading men interested in this western field that a new era of prosperity would dawn upon us. It was the hope of doing so that encouraged us to "hold on and hold out." Those who came generally encouraged us while here, but in too many cases their zeal would diminish in proportion to the distance traversed after their departure from us. What we needed was to have such men to come and stay. The leaven has been working for ten or fifteen years, and now we feel that our faith, our patience and our prayers have been honored of the Lord in the sending of such a Nehemiah to build up the long-neglected walls of our Spiritual Jerusalem.

—One of the editors of the M. E. Church (North) makes Bishop Haygood's presence and work in the West an arguments for re-enforcing their work in the South. There is no comparison between the two cases, or between the two fields. The M. E. Church in going South enters a field where Methodism has been organized for a century, and where it has gained some of its grandest achievements in converting men and women from sin, and in moulding public opinion; while the M. E. Church, South, in her western work—in Montana, Washington, Oregon and California, as well as in portions of Kansas, Colorado, Idaho and New Mexico, accompanied the first pioneers, helping to blaze the trails, build the first cabins, and in many places her faithful ministers, with no missionary appropriation and no means of support but their own hands, have been the first to break the silence that reigned for ages, and proclaim the news of salvation to the settlers in the mountains and valleys of the great West and Northwest. We have the right of pre-emption to much of this soil. If our sister would but respect our rights, it would save much confusion.

—Since the Ecumenical Conference there has been much talk about organic union of the Methodist churches in America, and after the straightforward and candid utterances of Bishop Foster even the most incredulous began to think that there was a prospect for a better state of things. The clouds were rifting; the great glaciers dividing us were starting to melt, and the beams that poured in from the great Sun of Righteousness were causing heart to answer to heart from the extremes of our great family. The manly words that will render Bishop Foster immortal were stirring the Southern heart as it had never been stirred before. The peace-makers were jubilant while those of sterner mould were thinking and preparing for adjustment to the great change that seemed to be upon us. But alas, it appears to have been but the peculiar calm that precedes a storm. The recent onslaughts of Dr. Buckly, Bishops Mallalieu and Merrill, reviving old issues, and dead ones, too, rehashing old slanders, have had the effect of a Dakota blizzard, and nipped the tender buds and flowers of fraternity, and, we fear, set back the cause of union more than it had been advanced.

—Recently we received a copy of our paper which was returned with the words written on it in pencil: "Keep it at home, I don't want it." Such a message coming to us during the first month of our editorial life would have been disastrous, but coming at this time, it does not disturb us in the least; for, with one such note as this, there comes a score or more from some of the best people of the country, expressing satisfaction with the "dear little Methodist," and asking for extra copies to circulate among their friends. Josh Billings says a man that can teach a district school, and please everybody, "aint no count." Its about the same thing with editing a paper.

—Dear Brethren of the Montana Conference: Have you taken up your collections for Domestic Missions? If not, how can you lay down and sleep at night? You were fortunate, perhaps, in receiving something on your salary from the funds of the General Board. You have received your share promptly in advance, at the beginning of each quarter, while you are virtually holding back, by neglecting to take your collections, that which was due your brother on the border three months ago. Don't neglect for another week this important matter. You cannot do it and remain guiltless. Send at once to D. B. Price, Treasurer pro. tem, Helena, Mont.

—Dr. H. C. Morrison has a long letter in a recent copy of the Nashville Advocate entitled "My Last Cigar." We are sorry that we haven't space for it in the "Methodist," for we would like to publish it in full, trusting that its perusal would prevent many of our boys and young men from taking their "first cigar."

—The Rocky Mountain Husbandman, published by W. H. and R. N. Sutherlin, White Sulphur Springs, Montana, is one of the best papers in Montana, and the best agricultural papers that we know of, especially for the Northwestern farmer or stockman. It is reliable, clean and full of useful matter. We have known the proprietors for twenty years. They are industrious and honorable men, and deserve the success that they have achieved.

—It presented quite a contrast to see snow two feet deep at Wallace, Idaho, and from four to six feet deep on the range, and then come to Corvallis and find the farmers plowing in their fields. At this writing, the weather continues delightful, and there is every prospect of an early spring.

—o—

Among the Workers.

—Rev. A. C. Couey writes from Deer Lodge: "The meeting here goes on fairly well. I have been sick most all of this week. Am now a great deal better, and hope to leave home to attend my quarterly meetings without inconvenience.

—We are glad to hear from our dear Brother Cope again. Be sure to read his letter and the verses he sends. We bless God for the presence and benediction of noble spirited men, who have worn themselves out in doing good to their fellowmen. Some of them are "brushing the dews on Jordan's banks," and association and converse with them seems to link us closer to the skies, and give a foretaste of what awaits us beyond the river. Let our people supply themselves with Brother Cope's excellent little books, and they will never regret the investment.

—Brother J. R. A. Vaughn, who is doing such faithful and efficient work at Chillicothe, Mo., put in several years of earnest toil as pastor and editor in the Denver Conference. He was for a long time in charge of the Colorado—now Rocky Mountain—Methodist. We rojoice to hear of his success. What a privilege we enjoy, as worker in the Lord's vineyard. Though sundered far by mountains, valleys, rivers and plains--yet by faith we may and do meet around one common mercy seat. There is a "dear uniting tie" that annihilates space, is stronger than death and lasting as eternity, and Methodist preachers know something about it, too.

--A dearly beloved brother, writing from Oregon, says: "Send us some extra copies of the "Methodist," and we will do all we can to get subscribers. It stands at the head of church papers for me and mine." If all our friends would send for copies and "do all they can to get subscribers," the Methodist would soon "stand at the head" in many more homes.

--Our old friend, Rev. C. A. Sheaman, asks that his paper be changed to Hallsville, Mo., his present address.

—Mrs. J. D. Coulson, of Gallatin, Mo., in connection with a remittance for the Methodist, says: "I have taken the St. Louis Christian Advocate, the Nashville and the Woman's Advocates from the first numbers. I love your good paper, and wish it complete success. I will be 81 years old in June, if I live, and cannot be expected to live to take it much longer. Please give my kindest regards to Brother Squires, and tell him I am a sister of Mrs. Watts, of Fayette. I enjoyed his sermon on the Prodigal Son so much." These kind, loving messages from the mothers in Israel, thrill the hearts of the sons who stand on the borders of our land. The grace of God not only enabled our fathers and mothers to pioneer the way for civilization and religion in Missouri, Illinois, Arkansas, Kansas and other great states, but helped them to educates sons and daughters, and send them still further to the front to press the battle in the regions beyond, and who will yet see our glorious banner wave in triumph from the Missouri river to the Pacific ocean.

--Rev. A. J. Lawless, who sends greetings from Winchester, Kansas, is one of the honored superannuated preachers of the Western Conference. Though unable to go forth to the battle, his heart is with those who are in the thickest of the fight. We have not forgotten that pleasant ride in company with him and his wife and little Paul, their son. Though our brother is called a very Lawless man, we rejoice that it is in name only, for evidently "the law of the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus" has away in that happy home.

—We are sorry to note that Bro. J. B. Parnall continues in poor health.

—From the "Methodist Times," St. Joseph, Mo., we learn that Rev. W. A. Hanna has been holding a revival meeting at Troy, Kan. Doubtless our brother feels quite at home on the prairies west of the "Big Muddy," where he has hosts of friends. Troy Circuit was the last charge this writer served before coming to Montana. Our heart burns within us as we call to mind the times of refreshing that we enjoyed there. Many were added to the Lord, and the church greatly strengthened. How hard it was to part with such dear friends, many of whom have since passed on to that "better country," We rejoice to know that the work of the Lord still prospers in that land of vineyards, orchards, gardens and fruitful fields.

What God Does.

When God intends to fill a soul, he first makes it empty; when he intends to enrich a soul, he first makes it poor; when he intends to exalt a soul, he first makes it humble; when he intends to save a soul, he first makes it sensible of its own miseries, wants, and nothingness.—Christian Standards.

TIDINGS FROM THE FRONT.

Dear Brother Stanley: We send congratulations for the good that the Lord has called you to, and that He is making Himself known and felt through the visits of our "Montana Methodist." We would't part with the paper, for it seems now a part of us, and through it we want to say to the brethren that we are at our post of duty, though some things look dark. We returned from Conference glad in heart that we had a place appointed to us. Our first work was to honor God, and so we applied our time and means in a camp-meeting. It was late in the season, September, the winds were cold, yet our hearts were warmed by the fire of the Holy Ghost. Brother Michael was on hand and preached in the power and demonstration of the Spirit, and Brother Faucher, of Summerville, came in the power of the Spirit; was with us a week, and, though he left, he still lives in the hearts of many. God bless him. Brother J. B. Chamberlin, of Dayton, did a grand work, and Bro. McBroom and son,of Milton, Oregon, were with us with hearts warm in the Spirit. Brother Weiss, from Elgon, is one of the masters in song, and he led our singing, which was as sweet perfume and abides with us. We had nine accessions. All praise to our God. We have built a little house. Snow has been deep. We have had quite an awakening here, and two accessions at the close of our meeting, Jan. 31st. Good will seemed to prevail. As to our church in Eagle Valley, the land is secured by deed, the rock on the ground for the foundation and part of the lumber is on the ground, and warm hearts are anxious to see it completed. It will be ours if we get the help asked for from the Board of Church Extension. If not—well, I won't say it, for our Father will hear the prayers of His people. It must be His and ours.

R. B. Crego.

Halfway, Oregon, Feb. 12.

La Grande, Oregon.

Henry Barnhart: I have been sick since the first of January with internal abscess and heart failure. During my sickness, Brethren Michael and Kirk held a revival meeting at Moss Chapel in connection with our second quarterly meeting, which was a blessing to the church and cause in general. Five were converted and two joined the church. My work has suffered at Ladd's Canyon, on account of my sickness and the deep snow;but we hope to move in the right direction at once. We are pushing a subscription to raise money to build in La Grande. This is a case of life and death with us here. We will have to build this year or loose many advantages which we have gained. But, if we build, we will have to have help. There are about one hundred children out of Sunday School and a large congregation with no place to meet, or house to meet in. The other churches, M. E., Presbyterian, Baptist, Episcopalian and Catholic are all built in the southern part of town, and we build in the north. I hope the Lord will send us help. I send you one subscriber for the "Methodist."

La Grand, Oregon, Feb. 19th.

We greatly desired to be with our brethren at Palouse on the 21st ult.to take part in the services at the opening of our new and elegant house of worship at that place. But official duties of an imperative nature forbade our departure from Stevensville until Friday morning, which arrangement put us into Wallace that night at twelve o'clock, and prevented our getting through in time to be of any service. So we just stopped over Sunday and spent the time with Brother Waggener, holding his quarterly meeting, talking, and talking and talking and visiting with friends.

Palouse, Wash.

J. W. Compton: Your telegram and letter both received promptly. Sorry you could not come. Brother Isbell also failed us. He was to start to Alabama yesterday (22nd) to rest for six months. Our service here was a great success, though we did formally dedicate. Brother Swift preached the sermon to edification [he is quite capable of doing such a thing.—Editor]. We had a full house, and raised $900, in cash and subscriptions. Our people did nobly. Our present pressure will be relieved, and we hope to dedicate at Conference without having to make another pull. Brethren Burger, Terry, and Hornbuckle were present and rendered efficient service.

Winchester, Kansas.

Dear Brother Stanley: I am pleased with the little "Montana Methodist" and desire its semi-monthly visitations to continue, hence please find enclosed the remainder of my year's subscription. Your paper is a beacon shedding light from a section of our country of which the mass of our people know but little. It ought to be in every Southern Methodist home. I rejoice that the efforts of the brave consecrated men, constituting the vanguard of our church in the great Northwest, are so productive of good, and that they are marching on to victory, carrying the strongholds of sin before them. May the Spirit of our God and of his Christ work in and through them mightily until the unsullied banner of the Prince of peace is planted in every valley, on every hill-top, in the city full and desert waste.

A. J. Lawless.

Winchester, Kansas.

Spokane, Wash.

We reached here October 19th,and were kindly received. The outlook on the charge has become more and more hopeful. We have many encouragements and much to be thankful for. The people are zealous of good works. The congregations have increased somewhat. The Sunday School roll has more than doubled in the last four months, and the school is now very interesting. Some of our young men have organized a Sunday School in the eastern part of the city, which,we trust,is also doing much good. About fifty are enrolled there. The Epworth League and Class Meeting have been started and are doing good work.

The experience given in the prayer-meetings and at class-meetings, show a good degree of piety. The special meetings commenced December 27th, and continued till January 13th. Bro. F. F. St. Clair helped us for several days, and did good work. Eleven applied for membership during the meeting. A good number professed to be born again. Twenty-one have applied for church membership since we came, and two have come to us by letter. Should parents or friends have children or friends here at school or in business, and will write to me giving their names and addresses, I shall take great pleasure in visiting them.

W. H. Hodges,
1524 Fourth Avenue,
Spokane, Washington.

Rosalia, Wash.

W. S. Hornbuckle: Our work is moving on very well. Will have our District Conference at Oaksdale this year. We want to have a grand rally for Christ and Methodism. Of course you will be there. I give you an invitation now. It might help your (or our) paper. Praise God for the meeting you had. [We shall be there if possible, and we know it will help our paper, for it will greatly help the editor, especially if it is anything like the one at Palouse last year. But our Brother must inform us as to the date in due season.—Editor.]

Corvallis.

Our work here is in good condition. Rev. T. W. Flowers preached to large congregations at Corvallis the 28th ult, and received one member by baptism and profession of faith. Bro. F. reports a good congregation at the school house west of Hamilton. Our people are in good heart and "happy on the way."

Stevensville.

The editor filled the pastor's appointments recently at Victor and at Fairplay, where the people gave good attention to the preaching of the word.

Wallace.

There were a goodly number of communicants at the quarterly meeting service on Sunday the 21st ult. The rain poured down at night, and we were disappointed at seeing a good congregation, and had some of the finest church music that we have heard in the West. If Brother Waggener cannot start a tune himself, he surely has a most happy faculty in drawing around him a goodly company of persons to make music for him. The Sunday School is succeeding under the superintendency of Bro. T. A. Helm. Just fifty were present that day.

We regret that Bro. Waggener's health has so failed that it becomes necessary for him to leave Wallace. It is painful to himself and to all concerned, for he surely has a remarkable hold upon the affections of the people. At this writing we cannot announce positively just what arrangements will be made.

Other Fields.

There comes news of progress and development in the work across the mountains eastward. Brother Couey is in urgent need of at least two more men in his district, but the means are not at hand for their support.

—Bro. Britt has a timely article in this number on Bishop Merrill's Book, the title of which seems to be a complete misnomer. Dr. Hoss reviews it at length, from which we copy the following:

Among other sweeping declarations he says: "The General Conference of 1844 neither divided the church, nor authorized its division." We have not space in which once more, and for the thousandth time, to thrash this old wheat straw. It is a waste of words to debate a matter that has been adjudicated in the Supreme Court of the United States. The language of that high tribunal is:

"But we do not agree that this division [that of the original M. E. Church] was made without the proper authority. On the contrary, we entertain no doubt but that the General Conference of 1844 was competent to make it;and that each division of the Church under the separate organization, is just as legitimate, and can claim as high a sanction, ecclesiastical and temporal, as the Methodist Episcopal Church first founded in the United States. The same authority which founded that Church in 1784 has divided it, and established two separate and independent organizations occupying the place of the old one." * * * *

We have already multiplied our words far beyond what we originally designed. But we cannot close till we have said one or two things more. Knowing the temper of our people as we do,we feel perfectly safe in saying that the vast majority of them have no trace of ill-will toward the Methodist Episcopal Church. If that mighty body of evangelical Christians—the most vigorous and potent religious force in the Protestant world—would only lay aside its indefensible pretensions to ecclesiastical superiority, and approach us in a spirit of genuine brotherliness, the response would be as swift and as tremendous as the surge of the sea. The chief reason why Bishop Foster's magnanimous words at Washington City provoked no explicit response was the belief that he did not represent the body of his Church. This belief is justified by the little volume of Bishop Merrill, and still more by the acrid speeches of Bishop Mallalieu. As to any form of organic union that shall simply restore the status quo of 1844, we think that an idle and impossible dream. But with all our heart we long for so perfect an adjustment of our relations as shall forever take away the scandal of our rivalries and the sin of our unchristian recriminations. There have been at least two periods within the past twenty-five years when such an arrangement would have been a possibility; it is not a possibility just now. What divine providence may order in the distant future, we cannot say. But against a scheme or plan that starts out with the assertion that the escutcheon of our Methodism is crossed with the unsightly bar sinister of an illegitimate origin, we shall maintain our independence till the Judgment Day, and reassert it while the world is burning down.

Holiness.

BY BISHOP O. P. FITZGERALD.

Gentle reader, do not fear that under this you will here be treated to a dish of polemics. We have enough controversy about holiness. What we want is holiness itself. But what is it? Beware! the moment you attempt a definition you run against somebody's theory, or somebody's terminology. Definitions may differ, but the experience of all true believers is essentially the same. The experience is what we want. Let us bear in mind—

1. That no life can be called a Christian life that is not holy. Holiness is New Testament Christianity. You may demur to some particular theory of holiness, but you must be holy. The true Christian is moving on to glory and to God on the highway of holiness. When he gets off of that highway he is in the broad road that leads to death. Every man is on one or the other.

2. Holiness in the present tense involves the performance of all the duties and the acceptance of all the privileges that are in sight. If any man draw back God can have no pleasure in him. A conscious reservation with regard to any duty to be performed, or any privilege to be enjoyed, is incompatible with that sense of acceptance which is the gift of God to His children. The command to love the Lord our God with all the heart, soul and mind is in the present tense; the promise of acceptance and of the witness of the Spirit is in the present tense.

3. It follows then that holiness is the normal experience of every Christian. Christianity means this, or it means nothing of any worth to the sinful world. It means holiness in the present tense. Holiness now; holiness that on the one hand now makes no reservations as to faith, duty and privilege, and on the other hand receives now all the fullness of the life of the Lord. Now is the word.

4. This experience is for all the Lord's people—the elders in Israel, the young men and the maidens. It is for the Lord's little ones that are easily confused by disputings, theorizings, hair-splitting definitions and learned polemics. It is for every one of us now, blessed be God! If we hold back nothing in our consecration, He holds back nothing for the fullness of the divine life. A present, free and full salvation—the old formula cannot be bettered by us.

5. Summarily: This experience is within reach of every one of us now. Let the voice be hushed; let us all have the experience, and the voice of disputation will be hushed, and the song of salvation, present, free and full, will roll over the Church.

Love's Magnetism.

Love begets love. It is a process of induction. Put a piece of iron in the presence of an electrified body, and that piece of iron for a time becomes electrified. It is changed into a temporary magnet in the mere presence of a permanent magnet; and as long as you leave the two side by side they are both magnets alike. Remain side by side with Him who loved us and gave Himself for us, and you, too, will become a permanent magnet, a pemanently attractive force; and, like Him, you will draw all men unto you; like Him, you will be drawn unto all men. That is the inevitable effect of love. Any man who fulfills that cause must have that effect produced in him.—Henry Drummond.

Bishop Merrill and Organic Union.

The subjects of Fraternity and Organic Union have received more than usual attention since the late Ecumenical Conference. This was to be expected, and any movement towards those most desirable goals should be hailed with pleasure by every Methodist. Bishop Merrill of the M. E. Church, has just sent out a booklet on The Organic Union of American Methodism. It is written almost exclusively in the interest of union between his own church and the M. E. Church, South, for the fraternity and organic union of which churches he says he "wishes and prays."

"The first step toward the attainment of a genuine restoration of confidence and affection," the Bishop wisely says, "is a frank concession, each to the other, of motives worthy of high Christian character." This step, he says, has already been taken. This concession is made by each church as to the motives which actuate the other at the present time. If the Bishop had said that this concession in regard to the motives of the parties in the past was also necessary, he would have been on the true road to fraternity and organic union. But not so. The second step towards the desired end, he says, "will be a rehearsal of the agreements and disagreements between the Churches." The object of this is to obtain a clear understanding of the differences to be adjusted. All this is well enough; but he proceeds to give a rehearsal of these differences from a strictly partisan standpoint. He denies the legality of the Plan of Separation, calls the Church, South, a secession, and virtually repudiates the declaration of the Cape May Commission. He says "the excess of passion" was with the South. He blames us for coming into the North and West, and says "it is hard to resist the impression" that our chief mission here "is to minister to political animosities and encourage prejudices that ought never to have been born.

Speaking of the Cape May Commission he says, "the Southern Church demanded recognition as a legitimate branch of Episcopal Methodism," which was conceded by the representatives of the M. E. Church. But he thinks we attach more importance to the phrase "legitimate branch of Episcopal Methodism" than we should. With him, "its legitimacy consists in the fact that it has come to be, de facto, an independent Church, with all the equipments essential to an organized branch of Episcopal Methodism." Simply this and nothing more. It is strange that any one should hold such a view as that. The Southern Church was not asking that kind of recognition from any one. Everybody granted that it was "de facto an independent Church." It demanded of the M. E. Church that it be recognized as having been legally organized and thus legally entitled to the portion of property granted it by the Plan of Separation and the decision of the U.S. Supreme Court. Otherwise the M. E. Church must regard the Southern branch as holding property which it was not entitled to, and this of course would be a perpetual barrier to fraternity. The Cape May Commission admitted all that was demanded, and said as to the status of the two churches, "Each of said Churches is a legitimate branch of Episcopal Methodism in the United States, having a common origin in the Methodist Episcopal Church organized in 1784." Bishop Merrill argues that the Church was not legally divided and could not in any possible way be legally divided because there was no provision made for a division of it in the original constitution. The conclusion is not valid. Cases are constantly coming up which are not covered by specific statute, yet, when decided by the courts according to common law and justice, are as legally settled as if there were particular statutes applying to them.

The Bishop writes intentionally in the interest of fraternity and organic union; the actual result, it seems to me, will be in the opposite direction. The positions held by the Church, South, as he represents them, imply motives unworthy of high Christian character. These charges made by Bishop Merrill betray a prejudice on his part which disqualifies him for writing on the subject. If organic union comes, it will come after we have ceased to impugn each other's motives. If honest differences of opinion could separate such holy men as Lovick Pierce and Stephen Olin, why not change the whole separation to honest difference of opinion?

When all prejudice is laid aside, if it ever is, it will be acknowledged that there was prejudice and passion on both sides, yet each was aiming to do right. It will be seen also that the division of the church was necessary. Both sides deplored the division, yet neither could, with a good conscience, yield in order to prevent division. It is not necessary to determine on which side was the excess of wrong or the excess of passion." It is but natural that each should think that the excess was with the other party. The opinions of each in the case will never be changed, but opinions on this point should not keep the Church asunder.

A Chief Cause of Crime.

Often when I have been asked what are the causes, or what is the particular cause, that sends most of our men to prison, I have of late years invariably answered, "The want of family discipline."

The indulgence of a father and mother, who allow the child to grow up without any discipline to form character, leads almost inevitably to evil ways and consequently to prison.

The child, even of tender years, who is indulged in its natural waywardness, and who is allowed to say to its father or its mother, "I will," or "I won't" is in a fair way to become an inmate of our penal institutions.

Parents are also responsible for the waywardness of their children which leads them into crime, from a practice of deceiving them.

—o—

They Do Not Tell the Truth.

Ask any sinner you meet why he isn't a Christian and he will tell you a lie in the first sentence. The only reason why any person is not a Christian is because he loves the devil better than he loves God, but you can't find any body who will acknowledge the fact. One will say, "There are so many hypocrites in the church," and another, "I don't believe in excitement," or, "There are so many things in the Bible I don't understand," when the real fact is that not one of them has told the truth.

The Rusty Lock.

Edward Stevens was a widower, and had only one child, Amy, a pretty, intelligent little thing, about seven years of age, with a quaint, "old-fashioned" style about her speech, her questions and answers, which seems to be characteristic of children whose habitual associates are those of mature years.

The bond of affection between the father and his child was a very strong one, and this morning, as he watched her bright little face, and listened to her simple, winning talk, he almost forgot his great life-sorrow, the loss of her mother.

Stevens was a tinman and locksmith, and had usually more work on hand than he could well overtake. One day Amy had been sitting by him and singing, "Safe in the arms of Jesus," when she was suddenly stopped by the entrance of a gentleman, who came into the shop carrying a lock in his hand. He desired Stevens to examine it, and tell him whether it was worth repairing. It did not take long to extract the screws and take off the plate; and, this done, the smith replied,—

"It is a splendid lock, sir, one of the best of its kind, but it has become corroded with rust, and that is why it won't go easy."

The lock was left to be attended to, and little Amy, after sitting silent for a minute or two, said,—

"Father, what did you tell that gentleman was the matter with the lock?"

"It is corroded, that is, covered with rust, dearie. But what do you ask that for?" As he spoke, Stevens paused in his work, and looked at his child.

"Because it is the same word that teacher talked about on Sunday in class," answered Amy. "We had been singing that hymn 'Safe in the arms of Jesus,' and one of the girls asked her what 'safe from corroding care' meant."

"And what did your teacher say, my pet?"

"Oh, she explained it by saying that a lock was made for a certain purpose, and the key was supposed to turn in it easily, but that, if it got corroded with rust, it did not answer the purpose for which it was made. And then, however well it was made, it was useless. So, she said, there were some men and women, and girls and boys, that were like rusty locks, —not answering the purpose for which they were made, because they were corroded with something."

Here the child paused, and her father asked,—

"Did teacher say what the 'something' was?"

"Yes, father," continued the little one, "she said it was SIN. But very often it was not what people thought of as sin. She said that lots of people, who always attended church or chapel, and were sober and respectable and honest, thought that they never sinned, but all the while they were committing the greatest sin we can commit. What do you think she said that was, father?"

There was a puzzled, serious, anxious expression upon Stevens' face as he said,—

"I don't know, I'm sure, Amy. What was it?"

"Unbelief, father. She said many people believed that Jesus died to save the world from sin; but they would not believe that they were sinners, and needed His forgiveness."

Edward Stevens was silent, and his child's song was soon heard again, with its suggestive words, "Safe from corroding care." The arrow of God's Spirit had entered the man's heart. He was not quite of the class described by the teacher; but he knew that he had corroding care." That "care" in his case was uncertainty about the future of his soul; he recognized that he was a sinner, and now he rested not till he knew his sins were pardoned.

Dear reader, if you have no assurance of pardon—you know that whenever the thought of your insecurity returns upon you, it is a "corroding care," and it "eats out" your enjoyment of life.

But you need not be in this position. God has bidden you cast all your care upon HIM. Now the greatest anxiety that can burden, that does burden life, is that connected with our sin and our responsibility to God. But Jesus has borne it for us, for you. He "bare our sins." And if you have still this burden, this care, weighing upon your heart, just remember that the weight of your sins was laid upon Jesus Christ, and that He bore them away. Think of this blessed truth. Dwell upon it. Listen to God's teaching on the matter, which is, "He that believeth on the Son"—that is, believeth that the Son took his place, and bore his sins—"HATH everlasting life." What will condemn you, if you die unsaved; what condemns you now, if you are not saved, is your unbelief. Come now to God and say, "Lord, I believe; help Thou mine unbelief."—Sydney Watson.

Only One Thing.

There is only one thing worth our living or worth our dying. It is the opportunity to render service to others. He who seeks this opportunity, who, in the seeking of it flings aside as unworthy his consideration all offices, all emoluments and honors, wins the real, true honor, and in the final and eternal adjustment, when the things that are now darkened become illuminated, the words now whispered in the ear are spoken on the house top, the first becomes last and the last becomes first, these oftentimes unknown and unhonored servitors of their fellowmen will be found to have won the only real honor, because they won the thorn-crown of self-sacrifice.—Lyman Abbott, D D.

A Silver Barrier.

On the weigh-bridge at St. Heliers, Jersey, one Sunday morning, a large crowd had collected. The sun was shining brightly; the flags floated from ship and garrison, from hotel roof and church-tower, and the bells seemed to have a special gladness in their ringing.

But the crowd upon the weigh-bridge noted none of these things; they were listening eagerly to the words which fell from the lips of a young man who, with uncovered head, and open Bible, read an old, old story from the 19th chapter of Luke. It was the story of a little man seeking a great Saviour. Presently the preacher came to the 8th verse, and read, "Zacchæus stood, and said unto Lord, Behold, Lord, the half of my goods I give to the poor: and if I have taken anything from any man by false accusation, I restore him fourfold. And Jesus said unto him, This day is salvation come to this house."

The young man paused, and, looking round upon that crowd of upturned faces, said, "I cannot tell why I felt so deeply impressed that I ought to read this passage this morning. Perhaps it is because some one here, who has long wanted to find Christ—to have the assurance of sins forgiven, has as yet failed, and this morning is more puzzled than ever to know why. In the course of my labors I have found that in the matter of restitution, the paying back of ill gotten gains, lies the secret hindrance to salvation in the case of many."

Then, in words of earnest, loving entreaty, he besought those who heard him to go over, in their minds, the events of their life, and if conscience told them of some whom they had wronged, to return all dishonest gains at once to those whom they had defrauded, if it lay in their power. If it was out of their power to do this, he bade them at least acknowledge the wrong.

At ten o'clock that night, within a large hall in the town, this preacher sat wearied out with his day's work. After three open air meetings, and three indoor services, he was too much exhausted to stand at the door, as was his usual custom, and deal lovingly, faithfully, with those who were leaving the hall.

The lights were nearly all out, and just a few people out of the hundreds who had packed that place during the service were gathered around the door when the preacher rose to leave. About half-way down the hall a well dressed man stepped out from the shadow of a pillar as he was passing, and said,—

"May I speak to you a moment, sir?"

The man spoke rapidly and excitedly. He told how God's Spirit had come to him that morning, while the story of Zacchæus was being read on the weigh-bridge. He said that he had long wanted salvation, but one thing rose again and again between him and God. Eleven years before, his master had unknowingly paid him a number of silver dollars too much, when settling for three months' work. "And now, sir," concluded the man, "tell me what I must do, for I am determined to be right with God, cost what it may."

Then, very faithfully, the missioner showed the man that God would not pardon because he gave up the money. Pardon could not be bought, but his confession and restitution were necessary to his being in that position and condition where Jesus could meet him with pardon and blessing.

The man, who was thus quite prepared now to make acknowledgment, and restitution also, did so next day and became a joyous, consistent Christian.

There are hundreds of people in the world who want salvation, but who are hindered from accepting it because of something in their past life unconfessed, or unrestored. Are you one of these? If you are, remember that all the barriers are of your own making and placing. His love has "broken every barrier down." And you dare not blame God for those that you have placed, and keep, between yourself and Him. It may perhaps be out of your power now to make good some old-time defalcation, but you are bound to acknowledge it, if the person whom you wronged is still living. Do not allow a false pride to hold you back, for your soul is at stake. "COME DOWN," as Zacchæus did, and receive Jesus joyfully, in His own way, on His own terms. Make restitution, and He shall say, "This day" is salvation come to you.—Sydney Watson.

When Mr. Theodore Parker was married he entered in his journal on his wedding day the following resolutions:

First—Never, except for the best reasons, to oppose my wife's will.

Second—To diacharge all duties for her sake freely.

Third—Never to scold.

Fourth—Never to look cross at her.

Fifth—Never worry her with commands.

Sixth—To promote her piety.

Seventh—To bear her burdens.

Eighth—To overlook her foibles.

Ninth—To protect, cherish, and forever defend her.

Tenth—To remember her always in my prayers. Thus, God willing, we shall be blessed.

Intensity of Prayer in View of Sin.

There are times when the Spirit of God deals especially with a believer; when the Lord reveals to a man more than he ever knew before of his position before him as a sinner; when he feels sin to be exceeding sinful. Then comes the cry, "O, wretched man that I am;" then comes the deep consciousness of individual vileness and baseness; then the heart groans, being burdened. There is now no taste of sweetness about sin, but all is un' mingled gall and bitterness, it is like Ezekiel's roll written both within and without with woe. O! when the Holy Ghost is dealing with a man in reference to sin, sin wears an aspect far more awful than that which it wears simply under the reproaches of conscience. Conscience can tell the difference between good and evil, right and wrong, but it cannot tell the exceeding evil of sin. To know this, there must be a revelation of the holiness of God, and a revelation of the intrinsic evil and corruption of sin; there must be certain teachings with reference to our own nature; there must be certain feelings, not one of which it is the immediate office of conscience to bestow, but which, one and all, come from the operation of the Holy Ghost. When a man is under these operations of the Spirit, he knows what it is to be intense in prayer—to pray as a pressed and burdened sinner who sees sin to be exceeding sinful.

Jesus, though sinless, put himself in the position of a sinner, and having done so, he had to feel realizations of what sin is. Although sin was not in him, all its anguish, all its horror came upon him; there were doubtless some of the ingredients of that cup of gall and wormwood of which he drank in Gethsemane, and drained even to its dregs upon the cross. We need scarcely point out that these experiences of sin, and intense prayer in connection with them, are unknown to the people of the world. Very superficial indeed are their views of sin, and very superficial their prayers about it. But God's people know something of all this, even though such seasons as these, of which we have been speaking are mercifully short, and the prayers connected with them be but one agonized look toward heaven.

—THE—

ectangular Lens Light

The RECTANGULAR LENS is 3½ x 4½ inches, Used with common cheap Coal Oil or Gas Flame, it produces a focal illumination for reading, writing and sewing, FOURFOLD brighter, yet so mild and pleasant as to excite wonder and delight. It economizes oil and gas, and relieves from the heat incident to large lamps.

The late Dr. R. Abley said: "Its value cannot be estimated in money." Prices (including Lens, and appliances for using) range from 90 cents to $1.20, for Lamps; and from 90 cents to $1.50, for Gas.

The Wisdom of the Heart.

The Psalmist prayed that we might be taught to so remember our days as to apply our hearts unto wisdom. He understood human nature. He knew the part that the heart—the spiritual nature, the affections, the the conscience, the will—has to do in forming human character and working out human destiny. He knew something of its impulses, its cravings and longings for things that are higher and better than the world offers—that are eternal, and declares, "My heart is inditing a good matter:" "my heart crieth out for the living God;" "incline my heart to thy testimonies," and when overwhelmed with a sence of the utter depravity of poor human nature he cries out, "Create within me a clean heart, O God, and renew a right spirit within me."

Solomon said at one time "My heart despised reproof;" at another, "I gave my heart to seek wisdom," "I communed with mine own heart." My heart had great experience in wisdom and knowledge."

—In their efforts to solve the problem of human life and destiny, men often do not listen to the voice from within. We cultivate the intellect, develop that, depend upon that, lift up our heads, stiffen our necks and say we are perfect. All "mysteries" that cannot be fathomed and "understood" by this gauge are rejected. The longings and cravings of the hidden man of the heart are suppressed as weakness and superstition and that which is unworthy of such intelligence and refinement (?) Alas, how one sided and shortsighted poor human nature unaided by divine wisdom and grace. This is as if one were to stand part way up the steps leading to the top of Washington monument at Baltimore and looking through a dingy loop-hole on one side (the north) should cry out and pronounce as false all reports of the lovely landscapes and splendid views that are to be seen there, and declare that there is no sunshine, no bay, no harbor, no shipping, and ridicule the idea of there being any other country but America, just because he cannot see it from his standpoint; when he would only ascend to the top and open his eyes he could see the sun flooding sea and land with beauty and glory, behold ships laden with treasures from other lands and bearing treasures thitherward, and have his nature filled and thrilled with a satisfaction and a joy unspeakable.

O my brother, give the heart a chance. Let your affections and your conscience have something to say in solving these great problems. "It is hard to kick against the pricks." The Lord wants truth in the inward parts, and if we will submit to Him, "in the hidden part He will cause us to know wisdom"—true wisdom, the wisdom that is from above, that is pure, then peaceable, gentle, easy to be entreated, full of mercy and good fruits without partiality, without hypocrisy."

Here is the secret of much of the skepticism and infidelity of the land. We have seen a proud, famous, fun-making infidel, who has done more than any other one man, perhaps, to destroy faith in God, when all convulsed and broken up with grief as he stood at a brothers's grave. and while his heart was crying out in the agony that crushed it and the darkness that enshrowded it, we hear him speaking of the "golden dawning of a grander day," and saying, "But in the night of death hope sees a star and listening love can hear the rustle of a wing. This was but the heart uttering its voice and crying out against the shackles that a proud intellect that would "believe nothing that it could not understand" had put upon it.

Paul was thinking along this line when he declared that though a man "have all knowledge and understand all mysteries and have not love (which is of the heart) he is nothing." Such a man had not taken the first lesson in true wisdom nor made the first step toward true excellence. Paul spoke from a bitter experience. He tried head religion until it came near proving his ruin, till his great big soul was nearly starved to death. He "thought"—his intellect, his creed that he had accepted taught him—"that he ought to do many things contrary to the name of Jesus"—that he ought to help stone Stephen to death, imprison helpless men and women, disregarding their entreaties and turning a deaf ear to their cries, and pay no attention to the "pricks"—the uprisings of his better nature—that a false, one-sided education told him to "kick against." His mission was now to tear down and destroy everything that did not accord with his notions of propriety. He was not in a state of mind just then to write the thirteenth chapter of First Corinthians. But what a change in his spirit after he saw the light and heard the voice that spoke to him from heaven, cried "Lord, what wilt thou have me to do," and began to pray, and to pray-doubtless, as he had never done before. The great soul whose energies had been misdirected and whose nobler sentiments had been blunted by a "heady," "high minded," heartless religion was now released from bondage and brought into its proper environment and that wonderful life, now possessed of the divine life, was projected upon the the world in all its fullness, its tenderness and its irresistible energy and power.

The Scriptures put great stress upon heart religion. It is in the heart that we take on character. With the heart man believeth unto righteousness. The heart is to be kept with all diligence, for out of it are the issues of life. The heart, not the head only, not the body only, not the pocket book alone, however hard it may be to give that, not just one or all these together, but the heart must be given to the Lord. Oh, brother, sister, again we say give your heart a chance. Let it have a voice in settling these great questions. Does infidelity satisfy the cravings of your better nature? Does it fulfill your hopes and meet your expectations? Does a cold and formal religion, a mere assenting to a certain creed and on forming to certain rites give you perfect peace and a joy unspeakable? Of course they do not. Then apply your heart unto wisdom. Turn your heart out the testimonies of Jehovah, and you will soon prove what is that good and acceptable and perfect will of God.

A Bishop of the Northwest.

The presence and labors of Bishop Haygood in California, and the success of our work there this year, naturally enough directs the attention of the church at large to that particular part of the great West. The energies of the church are being concentrated some what upon that point, which contributes to and insures still greater success. This is as it should be. We rejoice with our brethren. We are members of one body. Their prosperity is ours, and we believe means greater prosperity to us. They have what they have long wanted and needed; a bishop and a General Conference paper. They are happy and are pressing the battle with greater energy than ever before. But while the results gained thus far prove the wisdom of the arrangement that the church has been so tardy in carrying out, it also proves another thing, viz: the insufficiency of the means to compass the desired end. Bishop Haygood was kept so busy in California that he could not get away to attend the Ecumenical Conference. There is plenty of work in a radius of three hundred miles or so from Los Angeles to more than engage all his time. This will not take him hardly half way to Colorado and New Mexico on the East and leaves out entirely our three conferences in the Northwest, the Montana, East Columbia, and Columbia, that occupy as much territory, perhaps, as any other three conferences in the entire church. Much of the country in this Northwest is just as rich and capable of supporting a population as dense as any in California, and the development of our work, if we are to do our part in supplying the incoming throngs with the Gospel, just as important as anywhere. There is plenty of work in these three conferences to occupy one of our general superintendents the year round. Montana alone is larger than California, to say nothing of the three other grand states. Idaho, Washington and Oregon that lie between here and the Pacific Ocean, and in all which our church is represented. It is more than one thousand miles from Bozeman, the extreme eastern charge now occupied by the Montana Conference, to Portland, Oregon, and from three to four hunded miles, North and South between the points where we have preachers stationed in this vast field. We have as brave consecrated and true men in this field as are to be found anywhere, and their labors have been and are being blessed in the conversion of souls. But what are they among so many, among such a mighty throng as is gathering here? They need help. A Bishop comes two or three thousand miles once a year, holds the conferences, stations the preachers, remains a week or two and preaches at a few of the principal points and goes away, and that is the last of him, at least for a year, perhaps forever. What does he know, what can he know, what true conception can any man have of the needs of the work under such circumstances?

Now is the time for us to take position and fortify in this vast and promising field. We need a chief pastor in easy reach of our principal points to spend his time among us, strengthening the hearts and hands of preachers and people by his presence, his counsels, and his labors. It is about a thousand miles from Portland to Los Angelos, nearly fifteen hundred from Spokane and nearly or quite two thousand from Helena, so that we can hardly expect to see much of our California Bishop. Again we urge our plea for an episcopal residence here in the Northwest.

Be in Earnest.

There is great danger of the preaching of the Gospel coming to be looked upon as a mere performance, like that of any actor in a drama, a part to be played for the entertainment of the audience, an end instead of means to an end, the awakening and conversion of souls. It exists both in the pulpit and in the pew. A preacher once remarked to the writer, "I have ceased worrying over the results of my pulpit labors like I once did. I simply preach the truth and it is the duty of the people to hear and accept it. If they do not, the responsibility is with them. My skirts are clear, and I don't trouble myself over it." He was surely not a "weeping prophet," and the "heart of the daughter of my people" did not wound him very deeply. The book says something concerning them that are "at ease in Zion." Paul was surely deeply stirred when he pursuaded men with all the earnestness of his soul to "be reconciled to God," and from our childhood we have felt that there was indescribable pain in the Saviour's bosom when he said " ye will not come unto me that ye might have life," and when he wept ever the city of Jerusalem, saying, "How oft would I have gathered you under my wings as a hen gathereth her brood but ye would not." It is a sad day in a minister's life when he is satisfied simply with pleasing the people, drawing a crowd and receiving his salary. If he does not travail in spirit and long for the conversion of souls he has reason to doubt the fact of his call to the ministry. The work of the preacher is not only to make known the truth, but to arouse men, to move them to accept it. He is to make disciples for the Lord, get men to follow Him. We once heard Bishop Marvin say that after preaching a sermon in which he sought to prove, and did prove to his own satisfaction and to the satisfaction of his audience, the truth of the doctrine of justification by faith alone, he felt as never before that after all, the work of the preacher is not so much to prove that justification is by faith as to try to move men to have faith in Jesus Christ; to so hold up Christ before the people as that they will be constrained to believe on him and be saved.

Again, Once when preaching to a small audience at a stage station in Montana, there was present the division superintendent of the stage line, a man of some intelligence and force of character but by no means religious in his life and conversation. The preacher pressed home the truths of the Gospel that day with all the earnestness of his soul, and from the close attention given he hoped that an impression was made upon the mind of his auditor for whom he felt such a deep concern, and so there was. After the service was over the man remarked to the preacher: "You did well to-day, Elder, you did well. I was well entertained by your discourse." And that was all. He looked upon it as good acting, a pleasant hour's entertainment where there was no other amusement, and we fear that ended it. We confess to a feeling of disappointment and sorrow at the time.

It is high time that both preacher and hearers should cease all effort at parade and show, and by earnest prayer and labor together or hold up each other's hands, that the armies of Israel may move forward and the word of the Lord have free course and be glorified.

ALONG THE LINE.

HEPPNER, OREGON.

DEAR BRO. STANLEY:—During the past five weeks the people of this town have been treated to some splendid Gospel preaching. First, the M. E. Church (North) held a series of meetings, which were continued in our church, and then we were followed by Rev. Mr. Bailey, of the Baptist Church. The religion of our Lord Jesus Christ was presented in such a clear, plain manner that it seemed impossible to resist the appeals, yet they "hardened their hearts" and "stiffened their necks" and refused to accept salvation. The congregations were large, the people worked together in harmony, and there were deep convictions, but they put it off, "waiting some more convenient day." There were several conversions; one accession to our church.

Our second quarterly meeting was a blessing to our souls. Our P. E., Bro. Michael, surpassed himself in his sermons on Sunday morning and evening. The collections amounted to $20. Our Missionary collections full to date; P. E.'s salary a little over, others behind, but I believe we will nearly meet all our assessments.

We have spent quite a sum in improving our house of worship, and this spring hope to be able to pay off a debt of $175.00.

I will begin another revival service in the country next Monday (D. V). My heart was cheered at the good news from Corvallis, and the other points in the Montana Conference. May the bond of sympathy between the two conferences be strengthened in the Lord. The "Methodist" never fails to cheer and strengthen my heart. I would that its visits were oftener. May the Lord bless you, and the "new editor."

P. M. BELL.

ST. JOSEPH, MO.

A note from Brother J. B. Hundley, renewing his subscription to the "Methodist," contains these cheering words: "We are now occupying our new Hundley Church, a little north and east from the old chapel, and moving along rather quietly, but having additions to our church almost every Sabbath. An average attendance in our Sunday-school of two hundred, and great interest manifested in the study of the Bible."

BUTTE.

In a personal note, Rev. J. E. Squires writes: "I am still a widower. Family in better health now, and hope to return home about middle of April. I have just returned from Deer Lodge. Brother Tabor will report the meeting for the 'Methodist.' We had a meeting of 12 days at Butte, 10 additions and as many conversions, or more. The spring is delightful."

CORVALLIS.

In our last issue we stated that the climate had so far affected Brother Waggener's health as to render his removal necessary. Rev. I. W. Flowers learning the fact volunteered very cheerfully to divide his field, as it was larger than he could cultivate, and let Brother W. take charge of Corvallis. Brother Parnall gave up one appointment, Woodside, from his charge. So that now we have a new circuit, including Corvallis, Woodside, Hamilton and other points adjacent, with Rev. W. O. Waggener in charge. It was a great trial to our brother to leave his charge in the middle of the year. His last sermon at Wallace was preached to a house packed full of people; perhaps the largest audience ever gathered there for religious worship. This shows the high esteem in which the pastor was held. He arrived with his family at Corvallis, the 10th of March, and preached his first sermon the following Sunday to an appreciative audience. A good impression was made. Both pastor and people appear to be pleased, and we predict prosperity for our cause at Corvallis this summer. Our brother finds great relief in the dry and delightful climate here.

Brother Flowers retains his hold upon a great host of friends about Corvallis, and still has all the work he can do. We praise God for the prospects of success in this part of the field. The pulpit at Wallace will be supplied at the earliest possible date.

DEER LODGE.

We learn that the meeting at this point was quite successful and expected a report for this issue, but it has not arrived at this writing.

STEVENSVILLE.

Brother Parnall continues in feeble health. The writer filled appointments at Victor and Woodside one Sunday, and at Stevensville and Ambrose, the 3rd of March. At Stevensville the pastor received into full membership several persons who were converted at the late meeting there. At Ambrose, Rev. E. M. Ellis organized a Union Sunday-school with Brother Dayton assistant superintendent. Though ours is the only church represented at that point by any considerable number of members, yet our people feel that they cannot run a Methodist Sunday-school. We are sorry.

—o—

THE WORKERS.

—We were pleased to receive a pleasant note from Brother J. B. Hundley, of St. Joseph, Mo. He is one of the solid Methodists of that growing city. We first met him at a prayer-meeting in Hundley's chapel, one week night, many years ago. Since then the little chapel has grown into a great prosperous church. We bless the Lord for laymen, as well as preachers, who are full of faith and the Holy Ghost. May their number increase.

—On the last day in the afternoon before sending the final installment of "copy" to the printers we received from Brother Tabor the following: "Just closed a meeting that continued 25 days. Five received by profession of faith. But numbers cannot indicate the good results. Bro. Price, of Helena, was with me 12 days, and Bro. Squires 10 days. Excellent work by both, and highly appreciated by the congregation. Price excelled in 'crippling,' and Squires in catching the 'crippled.'

—A note from Brother Parnall states that his health is improving slowly, and he hopes to be ready for active service soon.

—The following is clipped from the "Coeur d'Alene Miner," published at Wallace, Idaho:

"Rev. W. O. Waggener, of the Methodist Church, preached his farewell sermon here last Sunday evening. The house was comfortably filled. It was probably the largest congregation that ever attended divine services in Wallace. Rev. Waggener preached an able sermon and held the undivided attention of the audience. He and his family left for Corvallis, Montana, in the Bitter Root Valley, Wednesday."

—A private note from Weston says that the good work on the Pendleton district still goes on. Brother Michael is at his post and pressing the battle with vigor. He has a noble corps of assistants. They will come up to conference this fall with flying colors.

HERE AND THERE.

—General Booth's movement for helping the poor in England is proving quite a success. The sum of $125,000 have been expended on the Over the Sea Colony; $200,000 for the purchasing and leasing of land for city refugees and workshops, and $205,000 expended on the farm colony. The food and shelter depots have been self-supporting. The match factory has cleared $2,275 in four months. There have been 15,000 applicants during the year. There have been 2,381,234 cheap meals supplied during the year, about half of which were half penny dinners, and 52,000 free meals. More than 75,000 have been realized from the work in the factories But the chief value of this work has been in the reformation of criminals, ministering to the sick and helpless, and in the wholesome and elevating influence exerted. Surely the Master is in the movement.

—KENTUCKY has appropriated $100,000 to the World's Fair, on condition that the fair shall be closed on Sunday and that liquor shall not be sold on the grounds. We understand that Ohio's appropriation is conditioned on Sunday closing. Let other States follow, and congress refuse the $5,000,000 except on the same condition.

—Since there is a prospect of the managers allowing liquors to be sold on the World's Fair grounds at Chicago, it has been proposed to have erected near by a "Beer—Whiskey Annex" in which shall be exhibited specimens of the results of the whiskey traffic. There will be photographs of men who were brought to murder and the gallows by liquor, of lunatic asylums, dives and dens of infamy that are supported by it, and of wretched women, and ragged, hungry and helpless children who have been brought to poverty and disgrace, all through the traffic that the representatives of our great nation are disposed to recognize and encourage in the face of an assembled world.

—THE late Cardinal Manning is credited with the following tribute to the continued influence of John Wesley:

Faith and religion have enormously grown in England since the time of John Wesley. From the time of Elizabeth, to, say, 1780, religion had steadily declined. Since the time of Wesley, both in and out of the Established Church, it has just as steadily advanced. There is still a good deal of reason run to seed in England, a good deal of free thought and much spiritual ignorance among the overworked masses. But we are making a steady headway against that. If you could go among London workmen as I do you would see this.

—The honorable W. C. P. Breckenridge, of Kentucky, has been invited to deliver the oration at the opening of the World's Fair. He is a son of the noted preacher, Rev. Robert L. Breckenridge, and is a great grandson of Madam Russell, who was a sister of Patrick Henry, and often called the Lady Huntingdon, of Methodism in Southwest Virginia. He was a soldier in the Confederate army, and is known as one of the greatest American orators.

—THE Northwestern Christian Advocate closes an editorial on "Unity and not Union" in this admirable strain: "Each man should begin first in his own heart and in his own church. He should pray God to help him to forget that which has ever put a barrier between him and any Methodist on earth. In the absence of definite plans for co-operation, the eager cultivation of such a spirit among Christians will presently bring such splendid plans down right out of heaven that all will wonder that they have not thought of them before."

There is more good sense in the above paragraph than anything we have seen upon the subject for sometime. It is the plan we have advocated for some time. It was nearness to Christ that made Methodism, and if we, as individuals and church organizations, will keep close to Him and possess the mind that was in Him, and keep hands off the ark—have less concern about that which He alone can do—the desired end will be more speedily attained.

—The Blaine family has lately enjoyed a degree of newspaper notoriety that is quite unenviable. The younger Blaine has separated from his wife who obtained a divorce from him in Wyoming. The father, James G. Blaine, came out in a long letter, denying certain insinuations and charges against members of his family, and telling how his son had been ensnared into matrimony before he was out of his teens, seemingly thinking, this would be the end of the matter before the public. But the ex-wife, who has nothing to lose and all to gain, steps to the front and talks to the great diplomat as perhaps she had been accustomed to talk to his son; accuses him of garbling her letters, gives him ten days in which to make corrections, and in case of default, threatens to publish his son's love letters in full. The situation of the great statesman is somewhat ludicrous. A gentleman once hurled a Webster's Unabridged at a skunk, and all were worsted in the encounter but the cat. Men are often wise in some things and otherwise about others.

—The beautiful weather in Montana this winter and spring has been a wonder unto many. Ever since the first week in January, weather prophets have been predicting a storm just a week or two ahead. But they have utterly failed. We didn't have a blizzard all winter, and during the past week, (prior to March 19) while storms have prevailed at St. Paul and Kansas City, and other places, the sun has been shining brightly, and farmers were busy plowing and seeding. Our farmers are nearly a month earlier than usual with their work.

—We are sorry that a number of our subscribers, especially the preachers who have been heretofore receiving a few extra copies of the Methodist, failed to get their papers for one or two issues back. Their names were on a special list, and not on the regular mailing list, and when the increasing list of subscribers called for the extra copies to meet the demand, we suppose the mailing clerk, by oversight, left their names entirely. Bro. Squires did not receive even a copy of the paper containing his big sermon on the Prodigal Son. We shall endeavor to prevent a recurrence of the mistake. We trust that our friends will advise us of any irregularity in receiving the paper.

MARRIED.

—Mr. C. L. Kelley and Miss Cora V. Thompson were united in marriage at the residence of the bride's father, near Oaksdale, Washington, on the 29th of February, 1892, Rev. W. S. Hornbuckle officiating.

—Mr. Jno. P. Martin and Mrs. Lottie A. Smith, both of Victor, Montana, were married at the bride's residence, near Victor, Mon., at seven o'olock A. M., the 3rd of March, 1892, Rev. E. J. Stanley officiating. Both parties are old-timers in the valley, highly respected and honored, and hosts of friends unite in good wishes for their future welfare. Soon after partaking of a sumptuous meal (the first wedding breakfast we ever ate) the happy couple took the train for an extended tour to the Pacific coast.

ST. LOUIS LETTER.

BY J. W. CUNNINGHAM.

Marvin Chapel, St. Louis, has been an appointment in the St. Louis Conference for nearly a score of years. A small frame church on a leased lot, in a region of breweries and foreign population, has been the place of worship.

During the past year, a few squares from the old site, a lot was secured and a church building erected at a cost of $22,000, including lot on the corner of 12th and Sidney. The late pastor, the Rev. J. Stephen, did heroic work in his efforts to raise funds for the enterprise. Very many children and youth bearing the name of Marvin, sent gifts of various sums to aid in the work, but the main portion of the building fund came from other churches in the city. To promote the object a meeting of official members was held, the matter was discussed and congregational collections followed.

The church was dedicated Feb. 21, by Bishop Hendrix. The congregation was cheered by the presence of people from all our congregations in the city, whose pastors were there and participated.

The pulpit is in one corner of the audience room and seats are so arranged as to bring hearers conveniently before the preacher. The present pastor, the Rev. J. H. Early, has had several weeks of severe illness, but was happily well enough to be at the opening of his church.

Marvin Chapel is in the south section of the church.

In the latter part of last year Bishop Hendrix dedicated a frame chapel of good size in a new locality in the northwest part of St. Louis, which was erected under the ministry of the Rev. J. D. Vincil, D. D., who now serves it. It promises to be a fruitful field. The organization was effected by Dr. Mathews, of Centenary Church, in a room now used for a saloon, and was first called "Centenary Mission."

Eden Chapel was long a prominent point in St. Louis circuit, about 8 miles from the St. Louis court house. It was in a fine region. The late Wesley Browning, who lived to be more than four score and ten years, long resided close by Eden Chapel. His land and the large chapel lot have passed into other hands. Germans largely occupy the surrounding farms, and the Eden Chapel folks have migrated eastward into a western suburb af St. Louis, and are worshiping, under Dr. Chapman, of the "St. Louis Advocate," in a handsome church called Mount Auburn, on an electric railway, on which trains run every ten minutes from the business center of the city.

Speaking of the late Father Browning, reminds me that the fathers are passing away. Last summer I conducted the funeral service of the Rev. W. R. Babcock, who died in his 88th year. Lately I read the burial service at the grave of the Rev. John Hogan, who died in his 87th year, whose funeral services occurred on a Sunday afternoon in Centenary Church, in the presence of a large congregation. Several pastors participating, and Drs. McAnally and Mathews speaking of the departed. John Hogan was pastor of St. Louis circuit, in 1830, when our only church in the city was a monthly appointment in the circuit. All the fathers named began their ministry prior to 1826. Need the mothers, where are they? All are gone but two. One is Mrs. Caroline O. Fallon, an invalid, the other, is Mrs. Jane Finney, mother of the Rev. Thos. M. Finney, D. D.. She was a member of the first Methodist society in St. Louis, and with Mrs. O. Fallen and she worshiped for several years in the original frame chapel, built under the ministry of Jesse Walker. She has been at the dedication of all our churches in St. Louis but one, and was present at the Marvin church dedication last Sunday, in her 84th year.

For three and a half days this week, a conference on charitable and philanthropic institutions of St. Louis, was held in the lecture room of our Centenary Church.

The voice of the Catholic, the Protestant and the Jew, has been heard. Reports have been made from about three score and ten of charitable enterprises, in which women are principal actors. It was my privilege to be present a portion of each day. The time was chiefly devoted to the reading and hearing of reports from the charities represented, including their origin, progress and present status. The members were all women, but there was enough of "the man and brother" to add to the interest of the occasion. The opening address was by our Dr. John Mathews, who closed by singing his popular "solo," in which all joined, and in which there are only two words—"Go on," sung to the tune of "Auld Lang Syne," till every note in the tune is used. Let the reader try it and see what a stirring song it is, for Jew, Protestant and Catholic in concert.

Mr. Jacob Firth, a Jewish merchant, addressed the conference about Jewish charities, and was frequently applauded.

Vicar-General Brady was to have spoken, but in his absence from the city, a priest was selected by the Catholic ladies to take his place,—Father ———. He was also earnestly and frequently applauded.

Lunch was furnished by ladies of Centenary Church at noon, which allowed an hour for the ladies to intermingle socially.

Catholic, as well as Protestant women were numerous, but Jewish women were few.

This was a new departure, whose inception is due to Mrs. C. C. Rainwater, a member of the Southern Methodist Church. Its occurrence annually was determined upon. The occasion was altogether harmonious, pleasant, instructive and profitable.

St. Louis, Mo., Feb. 27.

A Good Illustration of Faith.

Sam Jones was talking to a man of weak faith the other day.

"You must get inside the fold, and the demonstration will come of itself. Humble yourself, have faith, and you shall know the truth."

"In other words, I must believe it without proof."

"Now, hold on right here. Out West they have a place for watering cattle. They mount a platform to reach the troughs. As they step on the platform their weight presses a lever, and this throws the water into the troughs. They get on the platform through faith, and this act provides the water and leads them to it. You are like a smart steer that slips around to the barnyard and peeps into the trough, without getting on the platform. He finds the trough dry, for it needs his weight on the platform to force the water up. He turns away disgusted, and tells everybody there is no water in the trough. Another steer not quite so smart, but with more faith, steps on the platform. The water springs into the trough, and he marches up and drinks. That's the way with religion. You've got to get on the platform. You can't ever examine it intelligently until you are on the platform. If you slide around the back way, you'll find the trough dry. But step on to the platform, and the water and the faith come together without any trouble—certain and sure, and abundant."

Soft Words and Hard Arguments.

The use of abusive epithets weakens the argument of any debater. Only one thing more is powerful than truth, that is love. When the hot sun came down on a certain bridge, the irons becoming elongated, the bridge bulged upward the fraction of an inch, and no train was heavy enough to force it to its place; but in the cool of the night it sank back to its normal position; so powerful are the forces of nature. Love is nature; and its silent, unseen force is next thing to omnipotent. The soft word breaks the bones, and the hard word is too weak to do this. How easily does the force of gravitation hold this vast universe together! And love is the gravitation of the universe. God is the great central attractive force, and love's sweet influences bind all God's obedient creatures in their orbits of duty and draw them towards each other in brotherly affection.

Argument need not be tame or maudlin; it may be manly and emphatic; but it should not be scurrilous. The meekest man ever on the face of the earth has exerted more influence than any other man. The loving tongue of Jesus was more powerful than the bloody sword of Alexander. He that is the perfect embodiment of love is the moral magnet of the universe. The wronged man is more powerful in silence than in speech. The silence of Him that as a sheep before his shearers was dumb has sent a voice down the ages. It requires more strength to bear than to do. Silent suffering is the acme of heroism. Kind words can never die. The meek are the world's conquerors—they inherit the earth. Hard arguments and soft words are invincible. Only a weak cause needs to be propped with harsh verbiage. A leaning chimney needs a pole; Mont Blanc stands secure and unmovable on his granite foundations. Truth finds correspondence in every heart and mind. It needs only to be stated; and to be brought in all its simplicity in contact with human mind and conscience. It needs not the lance of spiteful words to make it acceptable to souls in normal condition. Error must be sprinkled with the pepper and mustard of harsh language to create an appetite for it. Decent language and loving phrase in a preacher may not draw gaping crowds; but the truth as it is in Jesus clothed in proper garb will draw men from folly and wrong.—Southern Christian Advocate.

HEART PURPOSE.

The heart purpose is all-important in matters of character. It is a higher, grander thing than the head-purpose, as much higher and grander as the conscience is above the judgment. When a well-taken purpose of the mind imbues the affectional nature, pervades the whole character, and enters into deathless alliance with the conscience, it becomes a purpose of the heart. Then the heart is fixed. The plan of life is steadfast. There is unity of aim.

That purpose of Daniel's that he would not defile himself was the grandest a young man ever made. It made him a prince in influence while a captive in fact. It has in it a world-conquering power which will make any youth in any age a hero of the finest mould, a victor of the noblest type. It would have made Cæsar twice what he was. It would have made Napoleon more than his genius made him. It was this more than anything else that made Washington, Lee and Jackson what they were. But let the young man who reads this remark that the formation and life-long enforcement of such a purpose is not possible without the aid of religion. Such heart-purposes must be fixed on faith in God, and must lead to faith in man, as in both cases faith is the foundation on which all law that leads to service rests. You would as well expect to germinate vegetable life by planting the seed in the crevices of an iceberg as to originate and maintain this sublime purpose of non-defilement and of persistent, excellent service, in a heart devoid of faith in God and laking the genial influences of the Holy Spirit.

The greatest need of our generation is an increased strength and richness of religious conviction in our young men, by virtue of which they shall grow up into holy apostles, incorruptible statesmen, wise-hearted, faithful, conscientious business men, such as the world will look upon as types of royal manhood, princes in the earthly kingdom of the Son of God.

"Bishop Foster [the grand old man of American Methodism], on his way to the South Carolina Conference, was delayed a day at Columbus, S. C. Bishop Duncan, the Presiding Elder, and the pastor of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, called on the Bishop. Bishop Duncan invited Bishop Foster to spend a week with him, before returning North, as his guest, and the invitation was accepted." And this teaches that a man, large in soul and sincere, a lion of the millennium, can win a million of men where a hundred coyotes, little and loud, evoke contempt and cartridges.—Richmond Advocate.

CLIPPINGS.

A notable event which occurred on Wednesday, February 17, was the celebration of the 82nd birthday of Dr. D. R. McAnally, the venerable and venerated senior editor of the "St. Louis Advocate." His home at 6815 Virginia Avenue, Carondelet, was thrown open to his friends from 6 to 9 p. m., and a host of them called to pay their respects to the man who for nearly half a century has lived and labored in their midst. Prof. D. R. McAnally, jr., and several of the ladies of Carondelet Church, assisted in receiving the guests and the occasion was one of very great interest. The "Advocate" was well represented, and after devotional exercises by Dr. Chapman, a few appropriate remarks were made by Mr. J. D. Gilman and Rev. J. M. Stultz, of the business department of the paper. In this connection, it will not be amiss to say that, so far as we know, Dr. McAnally has served longer as editor than any man connected with any religious newspaper in the United States.—St. Louis Christian Advocate.

A committee which had undertaken to arrange a series of meetings for Rev. Hugh Price Hughes, of London, determined to make the most of his degree of M. A. They printed it in the newspaper advertisements and on the small hand-bills. One day it fell to the lot of a brother in a rustic parish to announce the approach of the celebrated divine. "On Sabbath next," he said carefully scanning the written announcement with which he had been provided, "the Rev. Hugh Price Hughes," Ma will occupy the pulpit in this church, and, he added, looking cheerfully and hopefully around the congregation, "we have no doubt the old lady will give us a telling discourse."

At the mouth of the Ganges there are dangerous shoals of quick sands. If the keel touches these treacherous and spinning heaps of gravel, the swift current whirls the ship bottom upwards, and sucks it out of sight. The steamer City of Sterling disappeared in eight minutes. Bishop Hurst, in his ascent of the river to Calcutta, said the sailors stood with axes in hand to cut away the masts if the vessel should strike the dreaded delta. The crowd of men, women and children held their breath as the great ship forged forward across the jalmari the fatal waters. The steamer had but an inch of space to spare! Its giant pistons rushed the shrinking keel by the devouring jaws swiftly and safely! Track back the voyage of life. What soul has not been barely borne above a jalmari somewhere on the sail along the sea! We all know when the crisis was past with perdition yawning on the underside of a single poor plank.

Angel With a Quid.

Riding up to a cabin, the preacher hastily hitched his horse and knocked at the door. A sharp looking old lady answered the summons. The preacher asked for shelter. "I don't take in strangers, and I don't know you," replied the old lady suspiciously. "But you know what the Bible says," said the preacher. "Be not forgetful to entertain strangers, for thereby some have entertained angels unawares." "You needn't quote the Bible," said the old lady quickly. "No angel would come down from heaven with a quid of tobacco in his mouth."—Christian Advocate.

Does the Lord Care?

E. F. T.

Several years ago I was passing through a severe trial. One day the difficulties seemed to come thicker and faster than I could bear. My faith was shaken. I said to a faithful friend and adviser:

"Do you suppose the Lord cares anything about us or our difficulties?"

"Of course He does," was the reply.

But with an agony of fear that he did not care, which was harder to bear than any other trial could be, I went into my class-room. While I carried on my recitation the cry was there deep in my heart, "He does not care." "He does not care."

When my recitation was over a dear girl lingered behind the others and said, "Here is a little book-mark that I want to give you."

I took the pretty piece of paper in my hand with a "Thank you, my dear." When my eyes fell on the words, "Cast thy burden upon the Lord and He shall sustain thee."

The messenger was gone but the message lay there in my hand. I looked again with wonder, to see if the words were really there, when the thought came, "This is just like Him," and I said aloud, "I will."

Where was the burden? Gone as completely gone, as though the cause had been removed. The sorrow was there but the sting was gone for the Lord had the burden..

Some time after I told my little friend that her message had helped me. She said, "I had intended to bring it to you before, but had forgotten it. That day I came to school without it, but remembering went home for it."

Was this all a coincidence or was it the Lord showing His love for His child?

I prefer to believe that it was His own voice bidding me trust Him, and I go on giving Him my cares, and they are mine no longer. How can they be when I have given them away?

Have a Purpose in Life.

Rev. W. J. Dawson delivered recently a splendid lecture to young men in Glasgow, Scotland. Here is a brief extract from it, which is apropos to our topic:

"We can all recognize the public triumph of a man's life. we rarely measure its previous discipline. The present position of General Booth is a case in point. To-day great soldiers interview him; the press of a nation hails him. But it was no sudden and capricious turn of luck; there is no such thing as luck in any world that God presides over. It was the victory of a single consecrated purpose. Let us admit, then, that without purpose, life must be a failure. The question I have to propose to you, therefore, is, What are you doing with your life? Let us remember three things—that it is yours to do what yon will with it, that it is lived but once, and that it is soon over. 'What thou doest, do quickly,' is a solemn warning which forever sounds in our ears. Men fail in life more from lack of definite purpose than any other cause. They are lost, not because they are criminals, but fools; not because they seek wickedness, but because they drift into it; not because they purpose folly, but have no purpose at all."

He then went on to describe lives he had known—the brilliant A, who trusted to genius and despised industry, and to-day is mixing medicine for the famous physician he ridiculed at school; B, who might have been many things, but for want of knowing which, was breaking stones in New Zealand; C, who did not know what habit meant, and whose evil habits had dragged him into a pauper's grave. He implored them, therefore, to return a definite answer to the question, What am I going to do with my life? The one thing supremely worth doing was defined by St. Paul when he said it was to be a man in Christ Jesus.

Mr. Brown took home a splendid doll one day for his little daughter. It was provided with that wonderful piece of mechanism which enabled it, on being squeezed, to emit the squeaking sound supposed to imitate the human voice, so dear to childhood. That same evening the son and heir was sitting on his father's knee, and several times pressed his small fist upon his parent's shirt front. Making no effect, he looked up in the paternal face, saying. "Father?" "Yes; what is it, my child?" "Why don't you squeak, father?"

Better than Telegraphing.

One of the wonders of this aggressive age is the use of the telegraph in sending and receiving messages between a station and a moving railway train. Sitting at his instrument in the station, with a device at his ear for receiving the vibrations produced by the electric currents, he sends his message along the line until it overtakes—many miles away perhaps—the train thundering over the iron roadway. Somewhere on that train is another operator with a device similar to the one at the distant station, and amid the crash and roar of the rushing train his practiced ear is able to detect the delicate vibrations produced by the subtle fluid, and the message is received.

Wonderful as all this is there is yet a power more wonderful and subtln n its working, which is exerand cised with even greater rapidity and precision: the power exerted by our heavenly Father in the care of His trusting and faithful children. The following incident will illustrate our thought:

In the spring of 1889 Mr. B——, a busy man in Philadelphia, well known to the editor of this paper, whose ardent love for souls constrains him to find time for many an hour of earnest gospel labor, was holding religious services every night at a town nearly thirty miles from the city. To reach this place a change of cars was necessary at a junction ten miles away. One evening, weary with the day's absorbing business, Mr. B——, as the train sped on, fell asleep—perhaps such a slumber as his Master had one night in a fisherman's boat on the Sea of Galilee. The train halted at the junction as usual, but the sleeper did not awake. In a moment it was off again, and the train on the branch road that had waited for it also started. Almost instantly the conductor remembered that one passenger had a ticket requiring him to get off at the junction, so springing to the sleeping man and hastily awakening him he informed him that they had passed the junction and that the other train had gone. As Mr. B—— did not wish to journey any further in that direction the train was soon halted, and he got out into the darkness, wondering why all this was suffered to be, but concluding that for some reason which he could not understand it was not best for him to attend the meeting that night ten miles distant.

As he was finding his way in the darkness as best he could back to the junction station, with the not very comfortable conviction that it must serve as his lodging place for the night, he all at once became aware of the approach of a railway train, and was most agreeably surprised to find the train on the branch road backing up, and to hear the conductor calling him by name, and inquiring what he was doing there.

Mutual explanations followed, when Mr. B—— learned that the conductor on the branch became suddenly impressed as his train started that something was wrong on the other train. Hurrying to where he could look out, he saw the conductor in the other lighted train, rush to the sleeping passenger, arouse him, stop the train, and the man get off. Taking in the situation at a glance, he stopped his own train, backed it up to the station, and so made provision for the Lord's servant to reach the meeting where a most gracious revival work was in progress.

Probably many will say there is nothing remarkable about this incident, and be disposed to account for it in the most natural way. The writer chooses to believe that the flashing of impressions upon two conductors, the stopping of two railway trains in the darkness, without signals or dispatches, and contrary to usual custom of regulation, and the relief of a child of God from circumstances of trial and embarrassment, were not the results of chance, but that they illustrate God's ceaseless care for those who trust in Him and serve Him. "Whoso' is wise will observe these things, even they shall understand the loving kindness of the Lord." Ps. cvii, 43. It is to be feared that many a precious lesson goes unlearned because we lack this wisdom; and that we often fail to understand this "loving kindness" because we do not "observe."—From everybody's Magazine.

"I See Four Things."

BY GEORGE BREALEY

One morning, having waited on the Lord for guidance where to go on His errands, a letter came asking me to visit a dying man. The case was urgent. I found him greatly agitated; the terrors of God were upon him. He looked at the wall, his eyes seemed to read some terrible condemnation; and, like Belshazzar, he shook.

"There's no hope," he said; "'tis all true; I'm lost, and to hell I'm bound to go! I see four things, and there's no hope."

"What are the four things you see?" I asked.

"I see GOD and HEAVEN, and I see MYSELF and HELL."

Truly the scales have been removed from his eyes; he could see what had been hidden from him before. The light of God's presence had discovered his sins, which seemed like vipers crawling over his soul. "Take away my sins Lord" he prayed. "Take them away, and save me, Lord. Oh! what am I saying, Lord? I have never done anything but sin against Thee." Then turning to me, he said, "There's no hope for me, is there?"

"That depends," I said, "upon yourself. But I have read of one who had a similar sight to yours. Let me read about it to you." So I read Isaiah vi., "I saw also the Lord sitting upon a throne.....Then said I, "Woe is me! for I am undone; because I am a man of unclean lips: for mine eyes have seen the King, the Lord of hosts."

"That's like me!" he exclaimed: "That's like me!"

I continued: "Then flew one of the seraphims unto me, having a live coal in his hand, which he had taken with the tongs from off the altar; and he laid it upon my mouth, and said, "Lo, this hath touched thy lips, and thine iniquity is taken away, and thy sin purged." I then spoke to him about the altar (the cross), the fire (the wrath of God), and the sacrifice (Jesus and His blood). I told him God's eye was now resting upon these, and to every sinner who cried for deliverance from sin God was saying, "Behold the Lamb of God, which taketh away the sin of the world." God gave His Son because He would save sinners; and whosoever believeth in Him "hath everlasting life." (John iii. 36).

The man's eyes were fixed on me; and as I ceased speaking, he cried out, "Glory, glory to God! I see, I see Jesus for me on the cross! Yes, it's plain enough; it's there; God saith it—whosoever. That's me. Lord, I do believe Thee; Thou hast died for such a wretch as me, because Thou didst love me!" And the great tears ran down his cheeks as he gazed upon the Lamb of God.

"And now," I said, "the story is not finished." I read again, "Also I heard the voice of the Lord, saying, ...Who will go for us? Then said I, Here am I; send Me,"

"Now" I said, "are you willing to tell what the Lord hath done for you?"

"Willing sir! Why, I could not keep it back."

While I was present, some of his relatives came into the house, and his mouth was opened for the Lord, and so until he was called to exchange time for eterernity.

Reader, do not wait for a death-bed to think on these "FOUR THINGS"—God and heaven; yourself and hell. It is time NOW to seek the Lord: you may not have even the opportunity of a death-bed repentance. Oh then consider this very moment. "How stands it between my soul and God?" and give yourself no rest until you have peace with Him through our Lord Jesus Christ. Then God and heaven will be all your own.

What God Does.

When God intends to fill a soul, he first makes it empty; when he intends to enrich a soul, he first makes it poor; when he intends to exalt a soul, he first makes it humble; when he intends to save a soul, he first makes it sensible of its own miseries, wants, and nothingness.—Christiau Standards.

—o—

Keep the Truth.

Every soul should have its own holy of holies. The truths of Christ are worth keeping, and the way to keep them is to ponder them.—Henry

—o—

All who truly and earnestly seek it may love God with all their heart and mind and soul and strength, and their neighbors as themselves, which is sanctification.—

Rectangular Lens Light

The RECTANGULAR LENS is 3½ x 4½ inches, Used with common cheap Coal Oil or Gas Flame, it produces a focal illumination for reading, writing and sewing, FOURFOLD brighter, yet so mild and pleasant as to excite wonder and delight. It economizes oil and gas, and relieves from the heat incident to large lamps.

The late Dr. R. Abley said: "Its value cannot be estimated in money." Prices (including Lens, and appliances for using) range from 90 cents to $1.20, for Lamps and from 90 cents to $1.50, for Gas.

Tell the Good News.

It is the duty of every one who has found the Saviour and realized his pardoning love, to tell the good news to others that they too may come to Christ and be saved. Tell it in the Sunday School, in the prayer-meeting, to your neighbor, your friend, and to all with whom you come in contact. Invite them to come to Jesus, and by so doing you will abey the divine injunction. "Let him that heareth say, come." The Spirit is ever saying, "Come," and if the church, in her individual membership, was saying "come," how many would hear the invitation who now say, "No man careth for my soul."

Vol. 4. APRIL 15, 1892. No. 89.

Notes and Personals.

—Mr. Spurgeon.—The secret of his strength is thus stated: "The character of Mr. Spurgeon's preaching was eminently scriptural. His study was concentrated upon the revealed word of God, which he expounded with insight, illustrated with felicity, and enforced upon the conscience with a vigor in our age most unusual. His delight was in the central truths of the gospel, and he never wearied of well-worn themes. To his brother ministers he would say: 'You try to tell the people what they do not know; I am contented to tell them what they do know; hence my success.'"

—In an article on the "Mission of Southern Methodism," speaking of our work in the West, the "Pacific Methodist Advocate" says:

Without doubt, the net results of our work, in proportion to men and means employed, are a hundredfold greater than that of any Christian body. For two decades past the leading churches of this coast, except our own, have replenished their ranks from the influx of a vast population from the East. We have maintained an equal and proportionate increase, but have forced it through the channels of revivals, and the assertion of our claims on the native populations. If we only keep ourselves stripped of worldliness, and unencumbered with the follies and devices of this over-organized age, the era of our prosperity is but begun.

—The American Sunday-school Union offers one thousand dollars in two premiums; $600 for the best book, and $400 for the next best book written for the society on the "Christian Nurture and Education of the Youth for the Twentieth Century." Each book is to contain not less than 50,000 nor more than 100,000 words, and be submitted to the committee by October 1st, 1892. It is a theme worthy of the best effort and of the best talent of the land.

—Be sure to read Brother Palmore's article on 'Kill the Leopard," and send in your subscription. We trust that such a wave of enthusiasm will be started as shall once more float our old ship free of debt and prepare her to send cargoes of workers into inviting fields that are opening both in our own and in distant lands. It is a trifling matter to raise it if all would lend a helping hand. Is there not one or more in Montana who will join Brother P. in his proposition to give $1,000? There are surely many who can give smaller amounts. What an outburst of joyful enthusiasm there would be throughout the whole Church if the Board at its meeting in Nashville, the 6th of May, could report the last dollar of this debt paid. It would mean advancement in Montana, Washington, Idaho, Oregon, California—everywhere. It would mean salvation to many thousands of souls, who are now perishing.

—There has been a change in the editorial management of the "Union Signal." The new editorial corps now includes Miss Frances E. Willard, Lady Henry Somerset, Mary Allen West, Margaret A. Ludduth and Mrs. H. B. Kells. Such a list is surely a guarantee of ability and variety.

—We acknowledge the receipt of a beautifully illustrated copy of Vick's Floral Guide for 1892. This is one of the old reliable seed firms. Address James Vick's Sons, Rochester, N. Y.

—Demorest's Family Magazine is one of the standard periodicals of its class. The April number contains an interesting and profusely illustrated article on the "Evolution of a Great Exposition"—the World's Fair at Chicago, and is full of interesting matter. The price is only two dollars a year.

—A note just received from the publishers of the "Montana Methodist," says: "Your list of subscribers sometime ago called for more than 1,000 papers. Let advertisers make a note of this, and let our friends send us each a new name so that we will have to print 2,000 papers.

—The Epworth Leagues of our Church in Texas recently held a conference at Dallas. It was the first of the kind in the M. E. Church, South, and was a grand success. Those Texas Methodists are alive and moving. They see the importance of keeping in touch with the young people. Brother Pepper, that indefatigable Sunday-school man of Memphis, was there and made an impression. Dr. Hoss, of Nashville and Editor Needham, of the "Rocky Mountain Methodist" at Denver, were also there.

—The editor of the "Rocky Mountain Methodist" recently had his horse and buggy stolen from the parsonage stable in Denver. It must be a desperate character indeed, and he in a desperate fix, to steal from a Methodist preacher, and an editor at that.

—The "Pacific Methodist Advocate," of a recent date, contains a pleasant little notice complimentary to the "Montana Methodist." We would be dull indeed if we did not enjoy the rich nuggets of truth, the polished gems of thought, the bundles of sunshine and the warm Chinook breezes pregnant with the spirit of true Christian fraternity and godly zeal that the "Advocate" brings to our mountain home amid the snow-capped Rockies in its weekly visits fresh from the "Golden Gate."

The "Methodist Times," published at St. Joseph, Mo., always comes to us fresh and full of good reading. Its pages are being enlivened by a discussion on the mode of baptism and also the question, "May Women Preach?"

—We can not help congratulating our readers on the variety and quality of the correspondence that appears in the "Methodist" from time to time. Every part of our vast field is represented.

—We were beginning to think that our brethren of the Helena district had almost forgotten us when the mail brought that interesting budget from Bro. Couey. The workers are not idle. We praise God for the general prosperity of the work as evidenced from the reports in this issue. The best of all is, God is with us.

—There will be more ground in cultivation this year in Bitter Root Valley than at any previous time in its history. As we travel on the cars and along the by-roads leading up the little streams on either side the river, everywhere new ground is being cleared and fenced, and fields are being enlarged. May our farmers be favored with a bountiful harvest.

—A number of editorial notes are crowded out this week.

—With all our care to prevent it, an occasional clipping will get into our columns without credit being given. It is not our wish to continue the practice.

—Rev. E. G. Michael writes to the "Pacific Methodist Advocate," characteristically thus:

"We need more men; we need consecrated men; we need self-denying men; we need tough men; we need courageous men. We do not need any who have not the above qualities.

Brethren, we may be poor all the way to heaven; but we will be rich when we get there. Glory to God, "we are on our journey home," but in no hurry to get there, while there is so much work to do for God here; and we are going to keep the devil awake and busy while we linger by the way!"

—Bro. Gross sends us an excellent letter from Oklahoma. It is good reading. We rejoice at his success, and are not at all surprised to hear of it. He will have success anywhere.

—We are in deep sympathy with Brother Skee, for we had just such experiences in our time. He is pure gold, and will come through such fires only the brighter and better.

—Quarterly meeting (the third) at Stevensville, was an enjoyable occasion. A delightful sacramental service. Brother Bell is still doing well with the Sunday School. Bro. Parnall, the pastor, and his wife are mending slowly. We rejoice with them.

—Sister R. S. Fowler, of Victor, has been quite ill, but is some better now.

—The weather has been somewhat raw and disagreeable for a week or two, but not sufficient to prevent farmers from going forward with their seeding.

—Easter, glad Easter-time, is upon us again. What memories it calls up. What thoughts are suggested by it. What emotions it stirs in our bosoms, and what bright anticipations it awakens in the believing soul. From childhood, Easter day in our home, before we knew its true meaning, has been a time for the exchange of pleasant greetings and of general good cheer. The opening butter-cups and forget-me-nots, the verdant hills so near the snow-line and the tens of thousands of sparkling, laughing streamlets, born of the genial rays of the returning sun, amid our rugged snow-capped peaks, and grow into rivers that roll away to the great ocean that is out of sight beyond the mountains—these all make us think of Him who brought life and immortality to light, who was dead and is alive again forever more. In this short note we have only time and space to say with Peter, "Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ which according to his abu

A SAD NOTE.

Just as we are closing the matter for this issue, the following sad note comes from Brother Price, of Helena. I start to-day to St. Louis to be absent about 20 days. Our little son Olin is worse, that is, his knee grows worse, and we are going to an Orthepedic surgeon in St. Louis. Wife will meet me there. This is a sad mission on which I go, but we hope for the best. The work here prospers. The ladies of the church have just bought a communion set for the church which was used yesterday for the first time. It is plain but durable, and will last many years.

I regret to miss our District Conference at Boulder; but man proposes and God disposes. The Lord doeth all things well. [We deeply sympathize with our brother and sister and sincerely trust that dear little Olin may find relief and be restored to health.—Editor].

—o—

Missoula District Conference.

The Missoula District Conference will be held at Corvallis, Montana, the 26-29th of May. The opening sermon will be preached on Thursday evening the 26th. The conference proper will be held on Friday, and religious services will continue over the following Sunday. A cordial invitation is extended to our brethren of the Helena District, and to all others who can, to come and be with us on that occasion. We pray for a time of refreshing from the presence of the Lord,

E. J. Stanley, P. E.

EASTER.

Leave the winding sheet at the sepulcher! Easter, glad, happy, joyful day is with us once again! A "risen," LIVING Christ is ours.

The sweet, pure lily and fragrant rose will deck God's altars, comforting, hopeful messages will fall from the sacred desks, and triumphant strains of music will burst and linger like harp-notes from celestial strings, in the long drawn aisle and fretted vault.

The sun in the heavens with resurrection power has clasped with his warm loving arms of golden light the cold clay form of the earth and warmed and verified; the flowers have sprung up and blossomed; and, as these flowers in sportive gladness ding balm kisses back and forth on the Spring zephyrs, they seem in their joy to say, "We have left the winding sheet of a cold, lifeless winter at the sepulchre of the dead past, and instinct and thrilling with LIFE and fragrance we are fulfilling OUR MISSION to brighten and sweeten this earth below, and make it as much like the Eden of old, and the Eden above as we possibly can." Friend, is there wrapped about you in your sepulcher of sin, a winding sheet of cold, chilling indifference to God and his love? Let the beams of the risen "Sun of righteousness" fall on you with their moral and spiritual RESURRECTION POWER, and feeling their life imparting energy you will live, and grow, bud and blossom, and bear fruit unto holiness and life eternal"—fulfilling YOUR MISSION to help the world and glorify God. Leave the old winding sheet at the sepulcher. "Risen with Christ" into "newness of life," help sweeten existence, bless men and WIN them to look "unto Jesus."

How sad, solemn, sour some souls seem! Souls that profess the religion of a risen Christ, too! They think a smile a sin (because they do not often smile), and light-heartedness is their abhorrence in one who is glad and gleesome just because Christ is living and precious, and he is living in the living Christ. DIGNITY is what these superlative solemn sons of sorrowful sighs insist upon! DIGNIFIED DEADNESS is generally the result. For stolid solemnity only an owl can beat some men, and preachers too. Let us come out of the night of moroseness and sadness into the "resurrection day," where the birds sing, the flowers bloom and nature laughs under the love smile of God. "Joint heirs" with a living Christ, who is infinitely happy in the abode of the infinite blessedness, and whose heart is thrilling with the realization of the joy that was set before him, and for which he so patiently and divinely bore the cross" of agonized shame, joint heirs with such a Christ ought to be the happiest folks in all this world. Sunshine should be all about them, dimpled gladness playing ever on their cheeks, with springs of joy bubbling up in their hearts, and running over in happy laughter. Our Jesus is ALIVE, "alive forevermore!" Blessed be His holy name! And we, if we "are Christ's, while DEAD to the WORLD, are ALIVE unto GOD. "Born again," and BORN LIVING, LIVING children of a LIVING God.

Let us leave the winding sheet of gloominess at the sepulcher—it never was of any use except to hide the deformity of death—and with hymns of thanksgiving, songs of joy, and shouting of rapturous praises go on our way rejoicing; and others seeing our gladness and peace, and learning whence it came, will join in with us in the triumphant journey to glory-land. The following incident illustrates the point I make: A poor, little street girl was taken sick and carried to a hospital. While there she heard the story of Jesus. It was new to her, but she believed it and Jesus became very precious to her, and she was happy as she lay on her little cot. One day the nurse came around at the usual hour, and the little girl held her by the hand, and whispered:—

I am having real good times here—ever such good times! 'Spose I shall have to go 'way from here just as soon as I gets well; but I'll take the good things along—some of it any way. Did you know bout Jesus being born, dead and live again forevermore?" "Yes," replied the nurse, "I know, why?"

"I thought you looked as though you didn't, and was going to tell you."

"Why, how did I look?" asked the nurse.

"Oh, just like so many folks—kind o' glum and solemn-like. I shouldn't think you knowed about Jesus being born, dead and live again forevermore!'

Do we "know 'bout Jesus being born, dead, and live again?" If so, let us live and act accordingly.

Doubt, fear, distrust fell upon the disciples of old before the resurrection. But how strong was their faith afterward. With a blessed Savior risen, talked to, ascended and interceding, Peter worried no more, but was faithful unto the end. Paul gloried in a risen Christ, and just because Christ was risen, and living, (and Paul expected to live with Him) he could cheerfully, exultantly stand persecution, and stripes and imprisonment. His whole being was energized by the thought: We doubt so often. Cold distrust gathers about us. We become benumbed, our energies all paralyzed. Faint-hearted, weak and weary, we STOP. A LIVING Christ is with us "ALWAY." Victory will come! The world is going to be saved. Let us leave the winding sheet of doubt and fear at the sepulcher, and going forth in our Master's name, help like Paul, to turn this "world upside down"—turn it right up to the focal rays of the "risen" "Sun of Righteousness." In the Ministry, in the Church, and OUT of it, Montour needs a resurrection, a quickening, a life of energized power, and consecrated enthusiasm; a life of action and not stagnation—a life that is lived by faith in the Son of God." Sever this and all the bones in the whole valley of dry bones would come together and live, and an "exceeding great army" would lift up the banner of Jesus and sweeping all before it would march on a glorious immortality!

As we stand by open graves, the winding sheet of sorrow wraps us in gloom and darkness. Souls very full of rich gifts, treasures of knowledge, and running over with tenderness and affection have left us! Where are they? What are they doing? We can't see them, hear them, or touch them. No telephone connects them with us. Messengers leave us laden with fond messages of love. They may reach our dear ones over there, and speak of our longings and yearnings to see them, or they may not. We know not. They send no messages to us—that we know. The terrible separations of death unfold us in chilly gloom. We gaze out in the darkness for some sure comforter, some certain help in trouble. We find it alone in the "Risen Redeemer." Let us leave the winding sheet of unillumined gloom at the sepulcher, and stepping towards Christ, look up to Him. On the tear showers will shine a bow of promise—through the gloom will gleam a light, and as we look and listen the light will grow, and the faithful ear will hear a voice, the voice of our "well beloved," our Savior, saying, "I am the resurrection and the life; he that believeth in me though he were dead yet shall he live." Thank God we shall meet one another again. "Whosover liveth and believeth in Me shall never die." Lord Jesus, in thy life we have life—we believe and we shall "never die." Leave the winding sheet at the sepulcher. In Christ let us live here, and then with Christ we shall live forevermore."

KILL THE "LEOPARD!"

OR,

A STRONG PULL AND A PULL ALL TOGETHER.

Macedonian hands are waving to us from the shores of Cuba, Venezuela, Siam and Africa. More formidable than mountain ranges, rivers, or seas, our debt blocks the way to them all. On this debt we are sinking eight or ten thousand dollars in annual interest—a sum sufficient to support a strong mission in Africa, or to place 13 missionaries in other fields. Some of our noble laymen are having their credit impaired in the commercial world by endorsing our paper in the banks. These brethren could better afford to support a missionary each, than have their credit thus discounted. Our secretaries have done splendid work in their laborious travels and eloquent appeals at the Annual Conferences; thus, very much reducing the debt, by providing for the special support of many missionaries.

The Annual Conferences have all been held. The secretaries will now have to work on other lines. We, of the pew and pulpit, are too much inclined to lean back in complacent admiration of the zeal and devotion of the secretaries, and let them work out the problem, which they can no more do, without our earnest co-operation, than the children of Israel could make the best bricks without straw. If we can adopt some plan for a "strong pull" and a "pull all together," we can get up some morning and pay this debt off before breakfast. One hundred thousand dollars would be a very small amount for Southern Methodism to raise, if only one man in every hundred of her membership realized that he is not his own, that he has been "bought with a price," even the precious blood of our Savior.

We suggest to our secretaries the following plan: Start a general subscription, "payable when the whole debt has been subscribed." Then urge Bishops, Mission Bands, Pastors, Editors, Churches, Epworth Leagues, Sunday-schools and individuals to fall into line and throttle the "Leopard" at once. There are earnest business men who will give $1,000 to extinguish the entire debt, who will not give $100 simply to reduce it.

The undersigned is willing to start such a subscription with $1,000, and will receive the names and amounts of all others who wish to subscribe. This is not a case of alms-giving, but a debt we owe to Christ, to our church and generation. Therefore, it is not a question of mock-modesty, but one in which we can provoke others to good works.

WHO WILL DO LIKEWISE?

Rev. P. M. Bell writes: "I have a brother on my work who is not able to subscribe for the "Methodist," but I want him to have it, so ask you to please send it to address given below and I will pay for it as soon as I can. It gets better all the time, and its visits always comfort and encourage my heart. It is brimful of enthusiasm and has the spirit of the Master."

Who will follow the example of our brother in sending the "Methodist" to a friend who is unable to pay for it? Your dollar thus invested will do duty in several ways. Send us the names.

—o—

MUST HAVE IT.

Brother J. H. Snow, who deals in stock and grain at Stewartsville, Mo., writes: "I do not know whether I am delinquent or not, but this one thing I do know, I enjoy reading the "Montana Methodist" and must have it. Enclosed find exchange for two dollars which will place me all right [yes, and away ahead. Many thanks. Editor] on your subscription list and secure the continued visits of your excellent paper."

Rev. F. F. St. Clair requests us to continue sending the paper to a lady subscriber with the assurance that the money will come as soon as she can sell her chickens. We only wish we could get 500 other subscribers who are just as sure of paying.

How the Battle Goes

LA GRANDE, OREGON.

Henry Barnhart: We are moving along nicely in regard to our church building. Hope to complete it this Summer.

OAKESDALE, WASH.

W. S. Hornbuckle: Our District Conference will commence here on Wednesday night, June 22nd. You are invited to come and be with us. Our work is still on the upward tendency. People are becoming more friendly to us as the days go by.

BUTTE, MONT.

J. E. Squires: I was rejoiced to know that the work still goes on at Corvallis, and that Bro. Waggener is to push it through till Conference. Brother Flowers did the graceful thing in yielding. I had La Grippe last week, used the "Keely cure" (not for drunkenness) and got out the next day. Have had a constant revival for several months. Two ladies converted at prayer-meeting last night. Another stood for prayers. Two accessions since last Sunday—making 16 since I came from Corvallis. Our congregations are better now than ever before, and convicting and converting power present at almost every service, "and there are added unto the church daily such as shall be saved," is the ideal Christian work.

"The Marriage of the King's Son," seemed to encourage others, and I have had five "cases of matrimony" within ten days past, "and still there's more to follow."

[They must have known of your going away soon.—Ed]. My third quarterly meeting comes next Saturday and Sunday. We look for a time of refreshing from the presence of the Lord. I am expecting to start back to Pike after my family, and I don't think anbody will call me "April Fool."

HESSELTINE, WASH.

A. Y. Skee: I intended to write you a while ago, but as Brother Hodge says, "The way to hell is paved with good intentions," and lest I be found in that way, I will try to tell you how the battle goes. I began the winter campaign at Washington school-house, holding a week's meeting with Brother Coart, of the Presbyterian Church. Good seed sown, but no immediate results. From there I went to Broad Axe, preaching every night for two weeks. A gracious revival. The church strengthened and eight souls were born into the Kingdom of God. Four united with us, one by profession and three by baptism. They were converted, received the Holy Ghost and "arose and were baptized." The man who led the singing for me, John Low, trained to sing songs in our church at Tangent, was one of those converted. It was a soul-stirring sight to see him rise from the altar, tears streaming down his face, and sing songs of invitation to bring others to Christ.

From there I came to our own school-house, a new one just built on the corner of my brother's farm. It is between the other two and about three miles from each. Here I expected the greatest results, as the people came from all sides, the congregations sometimes reaching two hundred. But the devil made a grand stand. The division of the Methodist Church, and the war, and a good many other things were trotted out to save his interests, and by people who call themselves Christians, and Methodists, too, claiming to be the "mother" of us all. The tide would ebb and flow until Brother Swift came, the second week of the meeting. He preached in demonstration and power of the Spirit. On Sunday the ice broke and penitents came to the altar. Monday was a precious day and six persons were converted. Brother Swift was worn out and had to leave. An M. E. brother came along that night, as he had sent an appointment, and I asked him to help me. He would not, but said if we were going to close the meeting he would preach on during that week. As he would not work with us I thought I would work with him, and turned the meeting over to him with five penitents at the altar [and a preacher soon to be among them.—Editor]. The next night he turned me out [of course—Editor], and when he got through organized a class and an M. E. Sunday-school to meet the same hour that a union school was to meet, and announced that he would preach on the same days that I preached there, although I had been preaching in the place a long time before he set foot in the place or had any appointment in the neighborhood. I would like to ask Brother Couey if he can see any of the spirit of the Cape May Commission about that. The result is that the neighborhood is in an uproar, the devil laughs, angels weep, and Christ's kingdom suffers. Oh, that men would be so filled with the Spirit as to drive out personal hatred.

After resting awhile I opened fire at Wilbur, Satan's headquarters in these parts. Weather bad, impossible to reach the school house. No church here, and I fitted up a room and commenced preaching to a congregation of twelve. Preached on through the week at night, working on plans for a church during the day. Bro. Hodges came out from Spokane and did some good work, made many friends and strengthened our cause. We had the same M. E. brother, however, to contend with, who went about telling the people that we split off from them because we upheld slavery, that we were all rebels, etc., etc. [Such an evil worker would be ready to tell anything that he thought would further his cause—Ed]. The meeting closed with good congregations. I have over $600 subscribed in cash and lots, besides the location, and 3,000 feet of lumber on the ground for a church, so that we will build as soon as possible. I cannot do much with the church until I get my crop in. I might tell another chapter about the ranch, as I am on a new ranch (which came into my hands through my mother's death), as well as being on a new circuit, to give you a sample of what I have been doing, so that you will excuse me for not writing more. I preached 47 times in succession to the same people, and during that time I cut and hauled, a distance of eight miles, posts enough to fence my ranch, besides wood enough to last me till harvest. Cut this down to suit yourself, and may God bless our dear little paper, which is always the first one opened at our house. Come to the dedication of our church in Wilbur.

FAIRVIEW, WASH.

Rev. F. F. St. Clair: I am now recovering from a severe attack of "La grippe," followed by nervous prostration. I am submissive. He doth all things well. Our God continues to bless us. Our foreign mission assessments paid in full. Home missions ($50) secured and will soon be in. All glory to God. We have one of our church papers in every family in the church here, except one. Let us press the battle to the gates on these lines. A paper in each one of our people's homes. Amen. God bless you.

DAYTON, WASH.

Dear Brother Stanley: I will now write a few lines for your excellent paper, that the brethren may know how we are getting along on the Dayton and Pomeroy circuit. We have just closed our second quarterly conference with good reports. Bro. Michael, our Presiding Elder, preached in demonstration of the Spirit and in power; and God was glorified in every service. The collections for Missions and other objects are all in sight. We expect to have a full report at the Annual Conference. We are fighting with all our might for Christ, the Great Captain tha never lost a battle. We know we are fighting for him, because we are gaining the victory. We have completed our new church at Covello. It is a beautiful building 30x50 feet, well finished. Bro. M. Larkins deserves praise for the faithful work he did here last year. He is greatly loved by this people. The Lord is abundantly blessing us this year. Six months ago we had only 12 members at Covello, and no church property of any kind. Now we have 67 members and a good church worth $2,000. We have had a glorious revival since the church was built. Bro. William, the pastor of the M. E. Church (North), and myself assisted each other in revival work at Covello; each of us holding about three weeks. There were over a hundred conversions in the two meetings, and about 33 additions to the M. E. Church (North), and 55 to the M. E. Church (South).

I expected Bro. J. H. Shelton, our preacher at Dayton, to assist us in my meeting, but he was sick and could not be with me. This I regretted very much, for Bro. Shelton is a fine preacher. Bro. M. V. Howard, of Walla Walla, and Bro. Earl, a local preacher from Pendleton, were with me 4 days, and rendered good service. Bro. Howard is one of our best preachers.

The angels must have rejoiced over the meeting at Covello. There were a number of outspoken infidels happily converted, and united with the church at this meeting. They have all, with many others, erected family altars. Nearly all the new converts pray in public. Praise the Lord for a praying church.

We will begin another meeting next Sunday at Winnette School House, seven miles from Dayton. We hope to have a good meeting. It thrills my heart with joy to read such good reports from the brethren. God bless the true and brave men in this great Northwest, who are fighting the battles and bearing the burdens of the church in this wicked country. I rejoice that I am counted worthy of a place among them. I must close, for I am getting my letter too long. I will not be silent so long anymore, but will write oftener, and then I can cut my letters shorter. "Blessed is the man that trusteth in the Lord."

G. H. Gibbs.

[There is but little danger of getting such letters as the above too long.—Editor.]

OKLAHOMA CITY, OK. TER.

Dear Bro. Stanley:—It may be a few words from this new country, this "wheel within a wheel," would be of interest to some of your readers. I felt sad at Hillsdale, Kans., when you said to me, "You are no longer a member of the Western Conference." I loved the Western Conference. It made me sad to tell the brethren good-bye. But such is life. I felt it my duty to change climates, so I am here. We arrived here Sept. 14th. Were met at depot by kind friends who gave us comfortable quarters until we could look around and take our bearings. As we came into this city, not three years old yet, with six thousand inhabitants, and saw the rush and bustle of the people, it was not difficult to tell that we were in a new country. It was not difficult for us to adjust ourselves to the situation. We had been accustomed to rushing for ten years. So we rushed into work and are still on the rush. The winter here has been much milder than we have been accustomed to in Kansas. I like the change. It has been decidedly beneficial to my throat. We have had somewhat of a blizzard recently, but all is bright and clear to-day.

There is considerable activity in business matters recently; quite a good deal of real estate has changed hands at fairly good prices. We have some fine good business houses here, and others in course of erection. This is destined to make a good city. We have the climate and the soil; capitalists are coming; the resources will be developed.

What activity is demanded of the church in a new country like this! While our church is in advance of any church represented here, it behooves us to be active, for many others are making great efforts to establish themselves in this fair land. This country will not wait for a slow church. The one that comes first and shows signs of life and permanency is usually the one that wins. Nine denominations are represented here now. We are getting along very nicely with our work in the city, our church not being completed hinders our progress. We will have by far the best church in the city, when completed, and decidedly the best location. We are having regular class and prayer-meetings, which are very profitable. Our congregations are growing. We have had 25 accessions since conference. We are well and happy, and well pleased with the country.

Come and see us.

J. M. Gross.

HELENA DISTRICT—A. C. COUEY.

I began the third round of quarterly conferences in Deer Lodge, in February. Our work here is certainly very encouraging. The quarterly conference was followed by a protracted meeting which continued several weeks, resulting in great good to the membership, and the addition of five persons to the church. Bro. Tabor had Rev. D. B. Price two weeks, and Rev. J. E. Squires something over a week to assist him. The congregations at Deer Lodge have about grown to the capacity of the house—especially on Sabbath evenings. The Sunday-school is one of the most satisfactory character in the district. It is well supplied with efficient officers and teachers who are very regular. This school has the largest proportion of adult members in it that I know about. The Epworth League, the prayer-meetings, the Woman's Home Mission and Parsonage Aid Society, all show life. The women of the church propose now to make some decided improvements on the church in the interior. By Easter, the church will be a charming place of worship. Bro. Tabor and his people grow upon each other. If he is changed another year it will be because he is badly needed elsewhere, and not because of failure in Deer Lodge.

BOZEMAN.

Bro. Goulder continues steadily in the work at Bozeman. The pruning knife has been pretty freely used there during the quarter, so that the membership has decreased in numbers, but I trust increased in real value to the cause of the Master.

Bro. Goulder has several hundred dollars subscribed toward the building of a parsonage in his charge. With what may be added, in the town, and that which we hope to get from the Woman's Parent Board, we hope to guarantee a parsonage there at the beginning of another conference year, if not earlier. This will greatly help that work. A great many think this step declares some of Bro. Goulder's personal plans to change his "modus vivendi," but I am persuaded he is innocent of such purpose.

The third quarterly conference at Bozeman was very pleasant indeed. A very fair per cent. of the membership was at the sacrament of the Lord's Supper, Sunday morning.

TOWNSEND.

This circuit has gone unsupplied this year. I have made quarterly visits, hoping from one time to another that we could furnish them a preacher. I was with them from Thursday to Sabbath the last quarterly conference, and had a very pleasant time preaching at Duck Creek. Circumstances did not favor preaching at Townsend, as I usually do. A protracted meeting in progress at the M.E. Church made it unadvisable to divide the Methodist force of so small a town. I don't know that our M. E. brethren would have been so considerate, but our people can afford to be truly Christian in all their bearings toward the other Methodism, no matter what they do in return.

The class at Duck Creek paid the whole claim for Domestic Missions made upon the circuit, on Sunday night. Arrangements were made to collect foreign missions by the time I return another quarter. Miss Alpha Keene was appointed collector of this fund, and I hope she may be successful. I think the members there will be pleased to pay the assessment in full, with a fair part borne by the class at Townsend. The Lord bless this flock without a shepherd.

HELENA.

Both the pastor and his people seemed encouraged over the quarter's work at Helena. The congregations had averaged considerably larger than those in the previous report. The prayer-meetings had been better attended. The spiritual interest of the membership had grown—some valuable additions made to the church, finance better than any time during the year. Bro. Price's health had not been good. His family were still in Arkansas, where they will likely remain for some time.

The elder and pastor received royal entertainment at the home of Mr. S. C. Ashby, whose Chinaman knows just how to cater to the taste of "Melican man," though the Mrs. of the house be away. Mrs. Ashby and the children were in California for a short time.

Bro. Price's chief difficulty was in eating too much. I suppose it was mine too.

EAST HELENA.

I found Bro. and Sister Bramble both well and cheerful in their work in the East Helena charge. Bro. Bramble had me remain with him after the quarterly conference to assist in a protracted meeting. The work at this place is doing fairly well. Bro. and Sister Bramble have the esteem of all the community. The membership here is small, and financially weak. But they and the friends of the church are doing nobly in the support of the pastor. For their strength no charge is doing better in this respect. The pastor writes me in a letter received yesterday, that recent charges have taken place much in favor of the church over which he is greatly encouraged. I am quite sure the remainder of the Conference year will be pleasant for the laborers in that vineyard.

WILLOW CREEK & WHITE HALL.

Bro. Britt, with five of his Board of Stewards were present Saturday afternoon at the quarterly conference.

I was certainly very much gratified to have such a full representation from his large circuit on such an unfavorable day, for it was quite stormy. Two of the brethren had come about twenty miles, a third fifteen, and still a fourth about ten.

The work of the quarter showed industry and fruit. Although the pastor was not satisfied, good results had attended his efforts in several protracted meetings.

The financial report was very good indeed. The pastor and people are mutually pleased with each other, and work in great harmony.

BUTTE.

The third quarterly conference in the Butte charge was an occasion that brought great pleasure to me. The congregation at 11 a. m. was the largest I have seen at that hour during the year. The number of communicants after the sermon, at the sacrament of the Lord's Supper, was the largest in the history of the charge. The chancel was filled three times. The pastor's report was very encouraging on all the lines of church work. Sixteen had been added during the quarter. The spiritual state was very gratifying. The finance just a fraction in arrears. It will be remembered that this charge is trying its first year at self support. It is succeeding finely. When the financial system becomes so adjusted that all the members who can pay something do so regularly, it will be a very easy matter for the people to meet the demands upon them.

Bro. Squires was to leave Wednesday following the quarterly conference, for Missouri. He goes to make a visit to his parents, and bring back Sister Squires and the children who have spent the winter there. He is to be gone about one month.

BOULDER

I have not yet been with Bro. Clark the third quarter. Learn, however, that he has had the best quarter, possibly of his ministry in Montana. Such arrangements have been made between Bro. Clark and the pastor of the M. E. Church, occupying the same field, that there is no longer any friction. We now have the field exclusively at Boulder. While the M. E. pastor has sole occupancy at Elkhorn. The arrangement proves to be a wise one. Great blessings have attended our work at Boulder, which has virtually become a station. I understand that full houses, morning and evenings wait upon Bro. Clark's ministry. A number of souls have been converted in the recent revival meetings. I am not aware of the number of accessions to the church. Hope there has been a considerable ingathering.

BOZEMAN CIRCUIT.

I am to be with Bro. Warren next week. Good reports came to me of his work since being with him the second quarterly conference. The new work in Park county continues with unabating interest, so far as I can learn. The class organized at Clyde Park, fully expect to build a church this Spring. They say they will do so if they can secure $200 from the Church Extension Board. The application for that sum has gone in, and is on file. Dr. Morton writes me encouragingly about helping us. Bro. Warren has had two protracted meetings lately, respectfully at Middle Creek and Belgrade. I have not heard particulars yet.

Sister Warren's health has been very poor of late. About the first of March she had an attack which for a time gave reason for the most serious apprehension. There is not a more self-denying preacher's wife in Montana, than Sister Warren, and our deepest sympathies are touched in her sad affliction. I hope Spring may add to her bodily comfort, and restoration.

The District Conference will close up the work of the third round. We have an interesting programme, both for the District Conference and Sunday School Conference.

——o——

Editor Methodist:

We are now in the midst of a glorious meeting at my country appointment. Several conversions and 10 accessions to date. A general awakening among the people, many deeply convicted and deep seriousness pervades the congregations. Yesterday we baptized 7 infants. Last Sunday we had an "all-day basket meeting." I preached three times. It was a feast to our souls. I had no help except a band of true, faithful laymen as are to be found in the connection. By the way! this circuit has furnished two preachers to the East Columbia Conf. who are doing good work for the Master; namely, F. C. Adkins and C.E.Kirk, each of whom has a brother living here, and both are stewards, and of the right kind. Praise God for saving grace!

Obituary.

Mrs. Elva Melissa, wife of A. L. McMillen, and daughter of Lyman and Mary Blodget, departed from earth at her home about five miles southwest of Corvallis, the 24th of March, 1892, age 20 years, 1 month, and 12 days.

She was born and raised in Bitter Root Valley. The writer knew her when she was a bright-eyed and happy-hearted little girl. She had not been married two years. A darling infant preceded her a few months to the spirit land. She was a great but patient sufferer. She had a large circle of friends. We can but think when persons depart so young, that they are taken from the evil to come. She expressed to a friend a willingness to go. May the presence and promises of the Great Comforter abide with husband, parents and all the sorrowing ones and prompt them to make sure of a happy home beyond the river of death.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

WASHINGTON, D. C., }
MARCH 29, 1892. }

ENGLAND MUST BACK DOWN in the Behring sea matter so far as a modus vivendi is concerned, for the United States will not and cannot, and the sooner the fact is made known the better. A report from London says that Salisbury will assent to such a measure after the ratification of the treaty. No one here has counseled a retreat and so far as the sentiment of this country is represented at its capital, it is solidly united in the determination to make a stand, not for the sealing industry, nor for a sealing company which war would destroy and bankrupt, but for self defense. No one doubts that when the whole country speaks it will be with one voice, and a bold tone. Lord Salisbury and British politicians cannot receive aid and comfort here whatever bad advisers may promise.

ENGLISH CAPITAL invested in the United States bonds and other property which would be confiscated; English possessions on this continent which would in the end be wrested from her; Irish unrest; Russian pressure on her Indian border; French jealousy in Egypt; and last but not least a large degree of English fairness and justice will all unite to hold back the Government from war.

If ever arbitration is reached and an award made all will bow to its result, though many say we shall be tricked and made to pay a large bill as we have done before. Many, in and out of congress, say "Let us stand on our rights bought of Russia and unquestioned until now. The more we give way the more we shall be crowded. England points too many guns our way. She wants commercial supremacy in South America; she wants the Sandwich Islands; she wants Alaska; she wants the Nicaragua canal; she wants a foot hold in lower California; she wants the earth. Let us refuse to be bullied, we shall be better respected and future troubles avoided." Many of both parties feeling thus declare that arbitration is a mistake and that the administration has conceded too much and that Salisbury's contemptuous diplomacy and annoying and causeless delays have been encouraged by such concession. Arbitration is, however, approved by the majority and all are agreed that pending the trial destruction of the seals must be prevented if possible even at the risk of war.

PREPARATION. In the mean time preparation for a conflict has already been made and is in progress. The Chilian difficulty hastened the assemblage of a large part of the navy in the Pacific and south Atlantic. Monitors and torpedo boats are being put in readiness. A large part of our army of 25,000 men is already stationed along the Canadian frontier at Forts Buford, Spokane, Sherman, Assinaboine, Niagara and Potter, at Detroit, Sacketts Harbor, and Vancouver. It is quite possible that some communication more or less formal has been had with the Russian Government. She is reported to have ordered war vessels to her north eastern waters.

THE SILVER CONTEST in the House will probably be settled this week. The anti-silver side has developed a surprising strength which renders the result doubtful. The main question is not of immediate importance because of the certainty of a veto, but the political strategy involved lends much interest to the matter. Nothing can be done, however, that will commit the republican party as a whole to free silver or the democracy against it. CAPITAL.

A Father to His Son.

BOTH PREACHERS.

The Presiding Elder of a young itinerant Methodist preacher in Arkansas has furnished us the following letter, the message of a father to his son. The father has long been a preacher of great ability and knows the things whereof he writes. He did not write for the public, not supposing the public wonld ever see his letter; but for the benefit of his son, whose success in the ministry is the most fondly cherished wish of the loving father's heart. Let others read, inwardly digest and profit by the wise counsel here given:

DEAR SON:—Yours of the 1st is to hand; glad to know that you are pleased with your place. I hope you will be a success as an instrument in God's hands to bring sinners to Him and to build up your Church in the gospel of Christ. You will find a great difference in the station and circuit work. You will spend all your time with one congregation, and you will find it a difficult task to be social and at the same time to maintain that dignity and reserve that becomes a minister of Christ. You will have to do much studying and praying, to have two fresh and vigorous sermons every Sunday, and a fresh prayer-meeting talk each week. Too much familiarity with the people on the streets will make you less interesting on Sunday. Too much reserve will make you seem proud and vain to your people. A village pastor should spend almost all of his time with his books and visiting from house to house. You will have to visit systematically. Get you a Pastor's Visiting Register, visit every family of your church regularly, praying at every visit, putting down the number and names of all the members of each family, their individual relation to the Church, etc. Pastoral visiting is not social visiting. You should visit socially when convenient but pastorally whether convenient or not. A pastor should be a messenger of grace in every family, and carry light and cheer and comfort to every house. You should be careful not to indulge in the gossip of the people. Let the sick, the infirm, and the indigent poor be your special care—O what a task to scatter the seeds of kindness from house to house. But, son, Jesus will help you. You must forbear foolish talking and jesting, which are inconvenient, and keep out of street talking and wrangling—argue nothing on the streets or business houses. The place for you to do your arguing is in the pulpit. Keep out of town politics.

O what rules are given to a preacher in the Discipline! "Never be unemployed, never be triflingly employed. Do not spend any more time at any place than is strictly necessary." I hope you will read carefully "Pastoral Theology" and the rules given by Adam Clarke to a preacher. Take the Advocate, THE ARKANSAS METHODIST and the Quarterly Review, and read by way of recreation the North American Review and occasionally a daily paper, say a Little Rock or Memphis daily—but O the Bible, the Bible, the Bible, the Bible, the Bible, the Bible, the Bible, THE BIBLE. I know you are good and a good preacher, but I want you to be better and better. Preach better and better. Do not preach everything at once. No, no; save something for next time.

You have become a station preacher quite early, and you will have to live and study by rule to be able to fill the place. Take notes and keep from repeating, except the great soul-saving doctrines, and present them with a studied variety. Do not be awkward in the pulpit. I urge you to preach every sermon in two places, before you preach it in the pulpit. Preach every sermon before the glass and on your knees. An awkward, slobbering young preacher, who snorts and raves and stares and murders the King's English, is a disgust to a cultivated congregation. Be spiritual, but not noisy; be deliberate, but not prosey. A short and sweet sermon, delivered in a spiritual, religious mood, does more good than a long, labored thing, that has but too teeth in it—logic and length. I pray that you may become a polished preacher, as well as a spiritual preacher; have an ambition to excel, but avoid vanity. Do read Pauls 1st and 2nd letter to Timothy every week as long as you live, and read his Epistle to Titus. Son, do not be bitter and sharp and smart in the pulpit nor out of the pulpit. No, no; but be pacific, mild, spiritual and forbearing; be gentle toward all men. It is a hard piece of business to reprove, to exhort with all long suffering and doctrine. Be faithful to the souls of men in reproving sin, but do not curse and swear in the pulpit. When you get so mad at sin as to curse the sinners, then you drive them away from you. Be self-confident, just in proportion to your sense; and never think more highly of yourself than you ought to think. Never mind your salary, let the stewards see after that, and do you see after preaching and visiting. Do not let any man on your official board see you in a hasty or angry spirit. Keep yourself spiritual and prayerful, and then you will not be fault-finding. Let the stewards do what they may, do you keep in a good humor with them, and tell them of their virtues and their power to do good, and never find fault with them about money matters. Talk only when strictly necessary about money. But it is getting late—do right, and if it is God's will you can stay at———four years. God bless you, my noble promising son. Pray for your father. One son a station preacher, the other a steward. It is enough. I am, &c.

Thoughts About Grafting.

Not long ago while stopping at the hotel in Missoula we met with a fruit tree agent who claimed superior excellence for his stock because the practice of "short-root" or "piece-root" grafting, he said, was not tolerated in his nursery. Short root grafts, we learned, are made by simply using a short piece of the root of an apple tree for the stock and grafting a scion to it in ordinary the way. Our friend claimed that a tree propogated in this way will put out but few roots, and they probably on the same side, and hence fail to furnish propper sustenance or give necessary support to the tree. Besides, there is not sufficient vitality in such a root to form a perfect union. The dead matter is not thrown off. A sort of fungus substance is left, and although it may be covered up and the tree appear vigorous for a while, yet just as you begin to expect fruit you find that your tree has the "black heart," begins to wither and soon dies. The whole root graft is made by taking the entire root of a plant grown from an apple seed as the basis for the tree. This has all the elements of a perfect tree; all the fullness of life from the parent stock, from every part of it—not from one portion or one side only—is reproduced in it. There is sufficient vigor to throw off all foreign matter, to form a perfect tree, to stand the shock of transplanting, to send out roots in every direction deep into the soil, keep a good sound heart, produce plenty of fruit in its season, grow to a good size and live out its allotted time.

While our friend discoursed most earnestly upon the conditions of apple tree life in the physical or natural world, illustrating his ideas by use o wood cuts and actual specimens brought from nursery and orchard, we readily assented to the correctness of his theory, and at the same time could not help thinking how forcibly it illustrates the condition of soul-life in the spiritual world. How much short-root grafting is practiced in our religious nurseries. The results are seen in the visible growth and in the quantity and quality of the fruit produced. In this day of haste and bustle, in the endeavor to make a great show with as little outlay and in as short a time as possible there is a great temptation to neglect thoroughness. Men desire fruit, but like the disciples who followed the Savior while he fed them with the loaves and fishes and went back when he made known the conditions of true discipleship, they are not willing to make the sacrifice required, and are disposed to manufacture a spurious article. Some will take up with one part of the Bible, that which suits their tastes and coincides with the views that they already hold, and throw away the rest. Others will fall in love with one or two attributes of the Deity—His love, goodness and forgiveness, for instance—and would exhaust them if they were not infinite, while perhaps they ignore His justice or His holiness altogether.

One will take up with one or two phases of Christian duty, Sabbath observance, temperance, etc., and manifest great activity in promoting them, while perhaps very indifferent towards other duties just as binding upon the Christian. We have known persons who would lay great stress upon one or two doctrines or ordinances of the Christian religion and seemingly pay but little attention to others just as essential. Such are apt to become hobby-riders. One man is wedded to one particular mode of water baptism and denies salvation or communion to all who have not gone down under and come up from under the yielding wave. We have heard a man argue on water baptism by the hour and make light of heart conversion and deny the existence of a commandment to keep the Sabbath holy, illustrating his faith by his practice in starting on a journey, a business trip, on Sunday. Some brethren are as zealous in urging the second blessing," that we fear they do not attach sufficient importance to the "first," and are in danger possibly of not giving due diligence in attaining following ones. We knew a man once who had been the leader of a holiness band, but who refused to take part in a revival meeting where help was greatly needed, offering as his excuse that he had to work on Sunday, irrigating his crop, where he then lived, and he was unwilling to give up the practice. Saturday as a day of rest and are not preaching and expecting the immediate coming of Christ to dwell in person on the earth a thousand years.

We might go on, ad infinitum. Such persons have a zeal that is not according to knowledge. They are one sided in their views and wanting in the wisdom that cometh from above, and while possibly claiming the witness of the Spirit do not always bring forth the fruits of the Spirit. They cry, "Lord, Lord," but do not the commands of the Lord. They are short root grafts, and possibly short lived—short in everything but profession. When one hobby is knocked from under them, or they are transplanted to a field where the climate is not the most favorable they die at once, or receive a wonderful shock from which they never recover.

We need more whole root grafting in our spiritual nurseries. A whole Bible in the creed, a whole Christ in the heart, and "the perfect law of liberty" embodied and exhibited in the life of every Christian, should be our motto. Christ the "root of David" and the "life and light of the world," was the doctrine of John; while Paul prayed that Christ might dwell in the hearts of man, that they might be rooted and grounded in love and be "filled with all the fullness of God." The great mystery is Christ in us the hope of glory. The Christian's life is hid not with a creed, a dogma, an ordinance, a profession, or a performance, but with Christ—a real living Christ—in God. The divine life is imparted and the divine presence revealed to the individual believer as really, as graciously, and as fully as if there were not another soul in the universe. The great bounding, loving, bleeding heart of the Infinite One, of the Living Vine is made bare and the poor withering, dying branches are grafted in, not by man's device or ability, but by His own infinite power, and we are strengthened with might by His spirit in the inner man and prepared to bring forth fruit unto eternal life.

Notes.

—Some of our Baptist friends have endeavored to make the impression that the great and honored Baptist, Mr. Spurgeon, was not strictly an open communionist, saying that "open communion by Mr. Spurgeon extended to three services only, to the same individual. After that he must submit to Christian baptism as held by the preacher, or the privilege ceased." But the incorrectness of this is proven conclusively by a letter from Mr. Spurgeon himself to Rev. Z. T. Bennett, D. D., editor of the "Arkansas Methodist," bearing date May 13, 1889, answering particular inquiries on this subject. He says:

Members of other Christian Churches are welcomed to the Lord's table with us as visitors; but if they come several times, it would be proper to inquire why they neglect to worship with their own church. "The limitation is placed to prevent the formation of a class who are not under the discipline of any church. Good reasons being given, there would be a continuance of the permission."

This settles the question. We would rejoice to see our brethren of this vast family of God's people in this country following the example of the greatest Baptist preacher and one of the greatest preachers the world ever produced.

—The Russian famine continues to increase in extent and severity. The government is exerting itself to afford relief, but cannot meet the demand upon it. As there was a general failure of crops throughout Europe last year, and a great surplus produced in America, this country must furnish much of the help necessary to relieve the starving millions. What is done should be done quickly. Ship loads of wheat and flour and meat are being forwarded. Let all do something.

—The application of Utah for admission as a state has been practically laid aside. While the leaders avow their renunciation of polygamy in obedience to a professed late edition of a revelation from heaven, yet upon investigation it is evident that the old ideas and feelings remain, and if admitted the new state would be controlled by the Mormon church.

—The Upper Works at the Anaconda Smelter have shut down, it is said, indefinitely. The cause is unknown. About five hundred men are thus thrown out of employment.

—Increased attention is being given to fruit-raising in Missoula county, especially in Bitter Root Valley.

—We regret exceedingly to learn of the dangerous illness of the wife of Bishop Haygood. The Bishop has been kept from attending a number of District Conferences. We sincerely trust that there has been a change for the better ere this.

—If our friends who are connected with the Epworth League will furnish us reports we will gladly give them one or two columns in each issue for this department of our work. We are greatly interested in the movement and desire to see it prosper here in the Northwest. Sometime ago we published some articles written by Epworth Leaguers which were copied into other periodicals. We would not object to more of the same sort.

—At a meeting held in honor of Frederick Douglass, at which there were many negroes, Col. Ingersoll was among the speakers. Disregarding the principles of ordinary courtesy he made it a point to bring out his stock in trade, and assail the Christian religion, although there were several ministers present and on the program. He advised the colored people "not to follow the God of the whites or any God who had permitted slavery in the world." Mr. Chauncey Depew replied by telling them that slavery was universal in the world when Christ appeared on the earth, and that just so far as true Christianity had extended over the earth slavery had disappeared. The appeal to reason and the rebuke to the proud infidel, and the defense of religion were so effective that there was a scene of great enthusiasm.

Dr. Buckley, in commenting upon Ingersoll's speech and the reply, says:

As for endeavoring to induce the negroes not to follow the God of the whites, "who hath made of one blood all nations of men for to dwell on the face of the earth," it was the Christian religion that sustained them in slavery and made them oftentimes preachers of the gospel of peace and good will to their masters by their spirit and conduct as well as their words. It is that which is saving them from the consequences of being thrown into utter ruin by the sudden gift of freedom.

From whom did the negroes get the principles and spirit of that religion that did so much for them but from the preachers and Christian people right among them? And yet these are the people whom Bishop Mallalieu has characterized as having a "so-called Christianity," and that the "blood poison of slavery still taints the circulation," etc. If it is a "so called Christianity," and tainted with "blood poison," surely a great editor like Dr. Buckley, one so full of resources, would not rush to it so readily for aid in defense of the truth when assailed by a foe like Ingersoll. As the "Texas Advocate" says in commenting upon the incident, "the truth will out."

—We rejoice at the revival influence that is prevalent throughout the length and breadth of the M. E. Church, South. God is owning the labors of his servants, and people are being converted by thousands. The work here in the West and Northwest is no exception to the rule. This has been pronounced the most prosperous year in the history of our work in Montana. Almost every charge has been blessed with a revival and nearly two hundred conversions and accessions have been reported. The revival fires are sweeping over the East Columbia and Columbia Conferences. There have been a hundred conversions on one charge in Pendleton District. While the "Pacific Methodist" says that they have never seen it after such a fashion in our church in California before. The same good news comes up from our frontier fields in Kansas, Colorado, New Mexico, Oklahoma, Indian Territory and Texas—all along the Western border. Bishop Marvin, in an urgent appeal to the church, once exclaimed, "From the Rio Grande to Puget Sound an Empire calls us." What would the sainted Bishop say were he here on earth now and could hear the pæns of victory coming up from this vast field that he traversed and mapped out. He would shout, "glory to God in the highest! 'just as many of God's people are doing. Praise the Lord for what he has done. "We feel like going on."

—We were greatly shocked on last Sunday, as we went to our appointment for preaching, to see a man plowing in his field, and particularly, to learn that the field and team were owned by a professing Christian. While there is no law here to prevent such conduct, yet it is painful to think that there are those among us who so disregard the public sentiment in a Christian community, to say nothing of the claims of the higher law upon the conscience, as to openly and defiantly desecrate the Lord's day. Shame on such a course.

—It appears hardly possible that while we are having such open weather here in Montana, and farmers are going forward without interruption in their work that they are having such storms in the East and South. Our friends will have to emigrate to Montana.

—The Board of Missions will have met and performed its work before another issue of the 'Methodist." Its doings will be watched with solicitude by many hundreds of people. Knowing the spirit of the men who compose it we believe the best that is possible will be done for every needy field. Hitherto it has moved slowly in extending its work in the West, and particularly in the Northwest. This has resulted in the loss of some fields to us, and has caused no little hardship, attended with much solicitude, to many faithful workers. But we believe that our work here is beginning to be regarded with more favor by the entire church. It is being found out that there is a work for us to do here; that the difficulties encountered are not peculiar to our church; that while we do encounter opposition, yet that in proportion to the expenditure of money and the men sent by the home church our success equals, if not surpasses, that of any other church in the same field. Other organizations receive their increase largely by transfers; ours principally by conversions and from those who were never with us before.

We are doing what we can to encourage the idea of self-support. But this cannot be effected in a day or even a year. There are some charges that will require assistance for a long time. This is the case in all the older conferences. There the weaker charges are helped by the stronger; here, as yet, all our help has to come from the General Board. But the missionary fund is coming to be regarded more and more as a sacred fund, to be used where it will best promote the cause of Christ.

There are new and inviting fields that we are kept from entering because of a lack of funds and of men. People of our own flesh and blood and native land—our own household—are without the Gospel; their children growing up godless, and they going to the bad. They call for help. We plead with the Board to do all in its power for the increase and enlargement of our work in Montana, Idaho, Washington and Oregon. Many of our workers are crippled in their efforts to do the work of the church and are practicing the most rigid economy in order to avoid debt and squeeze through to the end of the year. Would that their hands might be untied and their hearts unburdened so that they could get into the Lord's vineyard, and do with their might the work that is so near their hearts.

—Mr. Spurgeon has been called the most fearless and popular Gospel preacher since the days of Wesley and Whitefield. There is not a little concern as to who shall be able to fill his place, hold his vast congregation and carry on his work. The same spirit of unrest and solicitude has followed the decease of other noted preachers who were settled over local congregations. There seemed to be a fear lest the work should not be kept up. How different when Mr. Wesley passed away. While he was mourned by countless thousands and there was none to take the place that he had filled, yet his work, the forces so wonderfully set in motion through his instrumentality, was so effectually organized that there was no demand for any particular man as a successor. Ten thousand tongues, inspired by the self-denying zeal and heroism of him who said, "the world is my parish," were already busy preaching in many lands the doctrines that he had taught and emphasized. The great victory that he gained in death seemed to give them fresh courage and they went forth to greater conquests shouting the dying words of their leader, "the best of all is, God is with us." It will be much the same when Gen. Booth is called home. A movement that is so manifestly of God will not lack for a leader. Though the Lord buries his workman he carries forward his work. The Lord will not lack for a man to stand before him, whether it be in Spurgeon's Tabernacle or any other place where souls are to be saved and his Kingdom advanced.

—A recent writer in the "St. Louis Advocate," advocates the establishing and maintenance of an orphanage under the care of the church in Missouri by distributing and providing for the little ones in Christian homes, instead of keeping them all together in one place. He claims that it is cheaper, and much better for the children as they have more of the parental and real home influence thrown around them in this way. There is much to be said in favor of this plan. We know of a little blind child here in Montana who was thrown upon the county. She was provided for in a private home where she won her way to the hearts of her guardians, that she was cared for with all the tenderness that could have been bestowed upon an only child, and to-day is scarcely aware that she is an orphan. The plan has been worked with wonderful success in Chicago and other places. Why could we not organize such a work under the auspices of our church here in the Montana Conference? A board could be appointed to make provision for homeless children, and all our preachers authorized to act as agents to look out for needy cases and also for homes, soliciting correspondence with the board. In this way Christian training might be secured to hundreds of helpless ones for whom Christ died, and joy and gladness carried to many homes that are now without the glee and sunshine of youthful life. Let us think about it.

—A gentleman professing to be a Christian, and living in a Montana community, remarked to a friend not long since that they had been "fighting the Methodists for twenty years." As a matter of fact the Methodists are stronger there than they have been for many years. What a pity that our brother had not been fighting the devil instead of the Methodists. How much better it would be for himself, for his home, his community and his church. It is high time that professed Christians should quit fighting each other and devote their energies to the overthrow of the common enemies—whisky drinking, Sabbath desecration, gambling, swearing and a hundred other vices that abound in almost every community.

—Certain ministers in Chicago have united in a call for a "Parliament of Religions" at the World's Fair, to consist of a convention made up of representatives from all the various religions of the world, both Christian and pagan. It is not to be for worship, nor for discussion, but to learn from each other, see wherein there is agreement, etc., etc. We may be considered too old-fashioned in our notions, but we have no sympathy with it whatever. It is too much like declaring a truce and inviting the devil to the biggest banquet that has ever been held—publicly recognizing him in the presence of an assembled world. The old fellow tried that scheme with our Savior nearly nineteen hundred years ago when he took him and showed him all the kingdoms of the world. The proposition was promptly rejected. We trust it will be so in this case.

—There have been several strong and well tempered articles of late in the "Nashville Christian Advocate" upon the tobacco habit, especially as indulged by ministers of the Gospel. We would steer clear of fanaticism, but from the depths of our heart we would that every minister in our great church could be prevailed upon to give up the filthy habit of using tobacco. We know of brethren beloved for their gifts and their works' sake, but whose presence can hardly be endured in many homes because of the offensiveness of the tobacco fumes that they unavoidably carry with them, to say nothing of the influence that they exert upon the younger members of those families. We are jealous of the influence of our standard-bearers and we want them to be ready and able to carry the Gospel with clean hands, clean hearts and clean lips to every creature.

—Is there any folly greater than that of the parents who give their children a finished education in selfishness by granting all their requests and humoring all their whims? We pity from our heart the poor children who are reared in this way. Better for them by far the hard and bitter lessons of poverty and self-denial than the perpetual indulgence which checks all kindly feeling and perverts the most generous instincts of the heart.—Nashville Advocate.

—The young preacher has many advantages. He may lack knowledge and experience; but he is possessed of strength and enthusiasm. The disappointments of life have not cooled down his ardor, nor made him timorous and distrustful. He believes that great things can be done, and is willing to try to do them. If, over and above this fact, he have a solid piety, there is hardly any limit to his possible usefulness.—Nashville Advocate.

—In his book on "Methodist Union," Dr. Harrison shows that the Methodist Episcopal Church has increased 81.76 per cent. since 1868, and that in the same period the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, has increased 137.43 per cent. These are very gratifying figures. The form of Christianity which can achieve such results is neither dead nor dying.—Nashville Advocate.

—The "St. Louis Christian Advocate" of April 13th comes out in charming Easter attire and chuck full of choice contributions and selections, with suitable illustrations and mottoes for an Easter occasion. Among the good things are Easter greetings from the editors of a number of our church papers and the Bishops of the two branches of the Methodist church, North and South, as well as from Dr. Morton, Church Extension Secretary and Dr. Barbee, Book agent. We hail with joy such substantial evidences of enterprise and prosperity. Long wave the grand old "St. Louis Advocate."

—The "Pacific Methodist Advocate" of recent date contains the following:

The MONTANA METHODIST came to us last week with its four inside pages blank. Not quite so bad as getting a slice of good old-fashioned Calvinism sandwiched in between upper and nether chips of well-leavened Arminianism, as happened recently with ours. We regretted the loss of the "inside" of the MONTANA, though a carte blanche is always a compliment. An interesting editorial on "A Bishop of the Northwest" stopped in the middle of one of Brother Stanley's finest periods describing the fertility and promise of Montana. We endorse the recommnedation so far as the printer forwarded us. A Bishop for the Northwest and vigorous, business-like policy! The Spirit of God waits on consecrated industry and generous confidence.

We regret the mishap referred to. It is not our intention to do things by halves, especially in sending out the METHODIST to our subscribers and exchanges, though we confess our preference for a blank page rather than a dose of the blue stocking diet that our brother refers to. But worse still a number of our preacher subscribers have complained of not receiving several issues of the METHODIST at all. For this we are sorry, and shall endeavor to correct all such irregularities. Afflictions will come to editors and publishers as well as to other people. However, we are disposed to get all the good possible out of the ills of life, and have found no little compensation in the knowledge thus furnished us of the extent to which "the little MONTANA" is read and appreciated. The Pacific survives and flourishes. So does the METHODIST. May it ever be thus.

Rev. Joseph King writes us from Nevada, Mo., "Have just closed the best District Conference it has ever been my privilege to attend. Our Conference has lost another strong man, Rev. V. J. Sevier. This makes two of our most robust men who have fallen since Conference. The work in Lexington District is in good shape."

A Bishop for the North-west.

MR. EDITOR:—In an editorial in the "Montana Methodist," of March 30th, the above heading appears. I have an impression that our church has two Bishops on the Pacific coast, equally deserving notice, yet from said editorial it would seem I am mistaken. I fully endorse all said as to Bishop Haygood, but there is "another man," and Bishop of our church, who has done more for Southern Methodism in California, and on the Pacific coast, than all the other Bishops combined, I think. Yet he is ignored throughout the article mentioned. Bishop Fitzgerald went to California in 1855, and assisted in paving the way for those who came after him. His home is in San Francisco; the home of Bishop Haygood is in Los Angeles. How you happened to overlook him, I am at a loss to understand. You had to pass him by in order to reach Haygood. We read all in the "Methodist," and cannot let you make a break like this without calling your attention to it. But I do not propose to be a critic, so I will quit.

Bro. R. S. Clark received five into the church yesterday, but I will let him report as to church affairs. Now, if you don't ignore Bishop Fitzgerald again, you may have a rest from me, but if you do then look out. This is all meant well.

Truly yours,
J. B.

We appreciate the candor and the kindly spirit of the above criticism. We would be very sorry to think that we had done the slightest injury to our good Bishop Fitzgerald. He is our personal friend. We helped to make him a Bishop. He has been the fast friend of Montana and the West almost from time immemorial; has talked, prayed, voted and worked for us when many others stood aloof, though most of this work was not performed before he was a Bishop. We doubt not that he is still with us in spirit and only lacks time and opportunity to do all in his power for the West, and every other portion of the Lord's vineyard to the oversight of which he has been called by his brethren. We shall be delighted to have him with us in Montana when assigned by his colleagues to this field. It was the general expectation that he would make his home on the Pacific coast, and but few, if any, thought that Bishop Haygood would come West. But moved by a mighty impulse, which we believe was divine, the latter got to California first, and having been assigned to that episcopal district, and on the ground continually, and working heroically and successfully since then, he is more intimately associated with our work on the coast in the public mind as a Bishop thus far, than Bishop Fitzgerald, whose duties have called him elsewhere and who has spent but little time, comparatively speaking, on the coast since his election, for which no accusation is brought against him by this scribe.

In the article referred to we were simply urging the need of an episcopal residence in the Northwest, and naturally enough referred to Bishop Haygood and his work in California, with which the entire church is familiar, to illustrate and give force to our argument. If it had been Bishop Fitzgerald, or Bishop Duncan, or Bishop Granbery, or any one or more of our chief pastors on the ground and doing the work, the reference would have been in correspondence with the fact. Our brethren here in the Northwest have tried to secure the services both of Bishops Haygood and Fitzgerald, but the latter was away (and neither he nor his family are on the coast now) and the former was busy, and the expense would have been heavy in either case for new charges to bear, and so we had to get along without them. Hence our earnest plea for "a Bishop for the Northwest." We are not particular who it shall be so that he is "blameless, as the steward of God; not self-willed, not soon angry, not given to wine, no striker, not given to filthy lucre, but a lover of hospitality, a lover of good men, sober, just, holy, temperate; holding fast the faithful Word as he hath been taught, that he may be able by sound doctrine both to exhort and convince the gainsayers."

Day-Dreams that Come True.

Don't laugh at the young and enthusiastic because of their day-dreams. We often hear it said of the high expectations of noble men and women: "They are only day-dreams." But some of the grandest achievements of human history were once only day-dreams. Joseph's elevation above his brethren was once only a day (night) dream. The escape of Israel from Egyptian bondage was once only a daydream. The rebuilding of Jerusalem was once only a daydream. The spread of the Gospel the despised Nazarene throughout the world was once called only a daydream. Yes, thank God for the grand daydreams that have been realized, and for the blessed assurance that others equally grand are to be realized in the future. The possibilities are wrought into actualities by the living faith of active conscientious working daydreamers. The grand daydream of a heaven to be gained thrills the soul and strengthens the hand of the toil-worn saint. The grand daydream of the possibility of being instrumental in saving a soul from death and thereby hiding a multitude of sins inspires the faithful pastor and the earnest layman to be instant in season and out of season in their efforts to bring sinners to Christ.

TIDINGS FROM THE FRONT.

Oakesdale, Wash.

W. S. Hornbuckle: We are in a meeting at Rosalia. Will keep you posted as to results. We held our third quarterly meeting at Pine City, April 2nd and 3rd. Our presiding elder was with us preaching to the delight of all. We baptized two and received one from the Baptist Church. Our church is well established there, composed of those who are true and tried.

N. B.—Will the preachers of the Spokane District please inform me what delegates will attend the District Conference at Oakesdale, June 23rd, so that homes may be provided for them? Please state who will come by private conveyance so that provision may be made for the animals.

Address, W. S. Hornbuckle, Rosalia, Wash.

Corvallis.

Brother Waggener is much encouraged at the outlook. At his last appointment at Corvallis the large church was well filled with delighted hearers and there were two accessions to the church. We look for a time of refreshing at our District Conference at Corvallis the 26th to the 29th of May. Let all of our preachers and people who can do so make it a point to attend, and let all pray that it may be a set time to favor Zion.

Demersville.

The third quarterly meeting for this charge included the second Sunday of the present month. The morning service was held at Demersville. The congregation, though small, was attentive, and the service a profitable one. A small debt, caused by failure to collect all the subscriptions made on the day of dedication, was provided for in a few moments. We were greeted in the new town of Kalispel at night by a large, orderly, intelligent and very attentive congregation. Brother Lee, thus far, has been unable to secure a house in which to preach regularly at this point, which is much to be regretted. Our services were held in the house occupied by Rev. Mr. Fisher, the Presbyterian minister, who at this time was away attending Presbytery. Quite a number came up and expressed their gratification at hearing a sermon by a Methodist preacher once more. Kalispel is on the Great Northern railroad, and numbers about 1,200 inhabitants. Brother Lee was invited, while we were there, to preach at two different points in the valley, one man remarking when he promised to announce the appointment, "It will spread like wild-fire." We sincerely trust that a fire may be kindled by the Holy Spirit through the preaching of the word in that community and that Brother Lee will report a good work wrought there. Our visit at the home of Brother and Sister Lee was an enjoyable occasion. How sweet to the soul is Christian fellowship. What a privilege for Methodist preachers to meet and talk and take counsel of each other. The battle may press us at times, but the victory is sure to come by and by. We were glad to find our Brother and Sister and their two sweet children in fine health. May the Lord crown their self-sacrificing labors with abundant success.

Grantsdale.

Brother Flowers, on account of the illness of his wife, was unable to fill his appointment at Canyon Creek school-house, west of Hamilton. At his request the writer went and preached on Easter Sunday to a good and very attentive congregation. This is a new point. We took dinner with a Brother and Sister Watson. He is a Baptist and his wife is a member of our church. Brother Flowers has made a good impression, and we trust that good results will follow his labors here.

Pioneer Life in Montana.

By L. B. Stateler.

About the 20th of July, 1864, we pitched our camp near a little mountain stream and slept that night on the ground, as we had been accustomed to do on our journey. The next morning I walked a few steps from the tent when I came on to a large rattlesnake which I killed with a stick. I went only a few steps farther when, behold, I ran onto another which I also dispatched in the same way. I returned to the tent and told my wife that we were right in a rattlesnake den and would have to fix up differently for our lodging. So, during the day, I cut wooden forks which I planted in the ground and upon which I laid poles and made our bed about two feet or so above the ground, and we were thus protected during the night from those dangerous reptiles.

There were two or three hundred miners scattered along up and down the gulch, taking out gold. It was what they call placer diggings. The gold is found in the dirt or gravel and is separated or "washed," as it is called, by streams of water, called "sluices," conveyed through pipes or long boxes or troughes to the place and turned with great force against the embankment. The water is then forced through sluice boxes, carrying the dirt and gravel with it (though in some instances the latter has to be shoveled in), which are so arranged as to catch the gold in crevices in the bottom of the boxes, while the dirt and sand, being lighter, are carried away.

The bunch grass, which is peculiar to this country, grew here in great profusion, as most of the country, both mountains and valleys, was one vast prairie. The horses and cattle that we brought along, and which were greatly jaded by the long fatiguing journey, were turned out and very soon were in good condition again.

In the little herd of stock that we brought along were six cows and calves. We at once made an enclosure of pine logs, called a "corral," in which we kept the calves during the daytime and the cows at night. The grass was so very nutritious that the cows soon gave us an abundance of rich milk. We had carried with us tin pans, in which the milk was kept, and a tin churn for churning it, and we were soon supplied with plenty of butter. A mountain stream ran near our tent. A long house was built over it in which the milk was stored, where it kept cool and nice. In addition to that, we constructed a rude water-wheel which was placed in the rapidly flowing stream at one end of the milk-house and so adjusted it as to furnish power to do our churning. Thus, much labor was saved. The butter was sold at the rate of one dollar and a half per pound in gold or three dollars a pound in greenbacks. This was the prevailing price at the time. I mention these items merely to show how we were enabled to live; for aside from our few cows we had not one dollar in the world with which to purchase food or meet our expenses.

Everything in the shape of the necessaries of life had to be brought a great distance by wagons or pack animals across the mountains. We were more then four hundred miles from Salt Lake, away in the midst of the wild mountains, and two hundred and fifty miles from Ft. Benton, the head of navigation on the Missouri river where an occasional steamboat brought a load of groceries and goods from the States. Hence everything was very high. The average price for flour was twenty-five dollars per hundred weight, in gold, or fifty dollars in green-backs. It was a little cheaper at one time, and then went up to double that price—$50 in gold and $100 in green-backs—at another time. I give the above as the average. Coffee was one dollar a pound, and sugar a half dollar. Coarse blankets were twenty dollars a pair in gold. Calicoes and coarse plain goods were fifty cents a yard, and everything else in proportion. We had brought a cookstove with us from Denver, the price of which would have been two hundred and fifty dollars. When our cabins were built we provided them with fire places. We made bedsteads and tables with our own hands, using the tools that we had brought along. For chairs we used stools, which were sometimes made more comfortable to sit upon by being covered with the skins of animals, and backs were sometimes improvised by fastening an inverted ox-bow on one side of the stool. Lumber was sawed with whip-saws or hewed out of the trees with axes, much like that used in the old time puncheon floors.

From July till the approach of winter, my wife, with her own hands, made three hundred pounds of good butter, which at the prices named, provided us with food to eat and raiment to put on, sufficient to take us through the winter, as we thought till grass should come again.

Game being abundant, we managed to get our meat from the forest or wild prairie, and by dressing the skins of the wild animals I provided myself, in part, with clothing. I preached to my congregation, clad in a buck-skin suit made by my wife's own hands.

One item I should mention in connection with the first winter that we spent in Montana. Our stock of supplies purchased in the fall gave out before the wagon or pack trains could reach us in the spring. A "corner" was made on the goods that were in the stores and everything went up to exorbitant prices. Flour sold for one dollar a pound. This caused much suffering among the people and for a long time we had to live on "meat straight," and wild meat at that, just such as could be killed in the mountains in mid winter or early spring. Relief was on the way, but between us and the supply trains, which were on Snake river, in Idaho, there were deep snows through which it was impossible to force the wagons.

In the meantime our cattle were grazing in the Jefferson Valley not far from the camp, which had been removed to this place because the range was better and it was a more desirable place in which to spend the winter. The following incident occurred: A deer had taken up with the cattle and we had noticed it there a time or two. My wife said to me one morning: "Yoke up a pair of the oxen and let us go up the valley and look after the cattle, for I think there is a cow up there with a young calf." I replied; "All right. I will take the gun along. There is a deer that stays up there with the cattle, and maybe I can kill him." When we drew near to the little bunch of stock, sure enough, there stood a great big buck near them. So my wife said, "You get out and walk on; the dear will be looking at me driving the oxen and won't notice you, and you can easily get near enough for a shot at him." Thus it turned out. The deer, attracted by the wagon, didn't seem to observe me. I got as near as I wished, drew up and fired, and down he came right in his tracks. I hastened up, cut his throat, and turned away with a feeling of shame, and prayed that I might have forgiveness if I had done wrong in betraying the confidence of the poor animal, which seemed to have no fear and look upon us as his friends. We now had a supply of meat sufficient to last us quite a length of time. We felt that it was providential—that animal had been sent to supply our want in a time of need. It is true that in the last extremity, to keep us from starving, we could have killed one of our domestic animals, but they were our dependence for a living in the future, as they had been in the past, by the supply of milk and butter that they furnished.

A Preacher's Wife Abroad.

Dear Brother Stanley: Since my arrival in old Missouri on Dec. 19th, 1891, I have been intending to send you a few lines, but another preacher has claimed my time on the writing line, and three children the rest of the time.

My visit again to my old home where childhood days were spent was pleasant. Father, mother, two sisters and one brother are there to visit, and the grave of my oldest brother—Fayette, who has gone on before and will welcome the next one of our family at the beautiful gate. God grant that ours may be an unbroken family in heaven.

The winter has been so disagreeable—mud, mud, snow, rain, hail and sleet, then fog, and a little sunshine once a week. How I appreciate the climate of our dear Montana. Give me the West for my home after this.

At present I am on a visit to one of our old works—"Jamesport Circuit." How delightful to be at the District Conference of Gallatin District. The preachers were enjoying themselves as usual with the work in hand. Just think of as many preachers at the one District Conference as we have at our Annual Conference in the great, big state of Montana. Oh, why can't our preachers here in the old home state see the need of our western work? [Some of them do see and feel it, but their wives, unlike the writer of this letter, cannot be made to see it, and they are kept away—Editor.] And even when a few have gone out to help, one or two of the old war horses here sneer at the boys now in the front of the battle [Perhaps they fear they will have to give up some of their favorite preachers. Shame!—Editor], and say they are like the "fox in the fable"—is the reason they try to get others to come. I told them it was not that way—it was because they know the need of the field and know the Missouri preachers [Not those, however, who distrust and sneer at their brethren on the borders of our land. We rejoice that there are only a few such "war horses," and their number is growing beautifullv less—Editor] were the ones for work.

I am trying to get subscribers for the MONTANA METHODIST [Amen to that. Would that a hundred others would do the same—Editor], and trust that I can send in some names soon. It is taken already in the home of our Brother Hill, Jr., whose place was such a delightful home during our two years' stay on this charge. But how we miss the loving voice of his dear wife, who is singing with the angels and joyously awaiting the coming of her husband and Nellie and Fondie, her two children. Her crown will be decked with jewels of precious souls that she helped on to God, and many around old "Ketron Chapel" will meet her in the "Crowning Day" that's coming by and by.

Little J. E. Jr., can walk, and gets many compliments. Eugenie is much petted, as she was our baby when we were here; and Ruth, my baby girl, is quite a favorite, as she "talks like her papa."

From the Church Extension Sec'y.

Brother Morton, our Church Extension Secretary, whose office is like a perfectly fitting and never fading garment, loves the West, and cannot forget the men whose lives are devoted to its spiritual welfare. The West can never forget him, neither will the great Church of which he is such a faithful and efficient servant. The following is his Easter greeting to the St. Louis Advocate (leaving out one paragraph, for which he will excuse us), which we thought our readers would appreciate. It is characteristic:

This Easter Greeting goes from the Church Extension office to your venerable senior editor, who, of all that occupy the tripod in the Church today, was the earliest, and has ever since been the staunchest advocate of our cause. May his bow abide in strength, and may his mantle fall upon his juniors so that their eastern travel may not eat up the devotion of the paper to the interests of the Great West.

TO YOUR CORRESPONDENTS:

WASHINGTON LETTER.

[From our regular correspondent.]

WASHINGTON, D. C., APRIL 5, 1892.

The war clouds that hung about the horizon have hid their heads and local political storms of more peaceful character now attract attention. A tremendous "low" has developed in Rhode Island. That little State has proved big enough to be the center of an electioneering cyclone. Huge popular gatherings, enthusiastic outpourings of voters, vast, intelligent, and highly-appreciative audiences addressed by distinguished gentleman and masters of debate, with remarkable power, learning, and stirring eloquence; all on our side of course. A regular hippodrome; a gang of imported blowers; a howling, artificial, brass-band excitement, with stock arguments and economic fallacies, worn out policies and stale logic; that's the other fellows' side. Both sides proclaim that the enlightened and self respecting yeomanry of the gallant little State will not suffer the wool, whether free or not, to be pulled over their eyes.

Picket firing on the tariff question has been the order of the day in Congress, while the battle has been raging among the factories of Rhode Island. Congressional orators here at the front have been blazing away at the enemy all along the line, one part insisting upon the beneficent, practical success and necessity of a discriminating, high-protective tariff and the other denouncing such tariff as an oppressive robber-tax, making the poor poorer and the rich richer. Each side is earnest, sincere, abounding in logic and is cock sure that it is right.

But if the tariff provokes picket shooting preliminary to the great struggle next fall, the silver question is fruitful of deep strategy. The Republicans have been laughing at the Democratic free silver quandary, but the Democrats have now masked their position and are watching for the Republican Senate to walk into the free silver ambush. In the mean time sincere men of both parties declare free silver to mean debasement of the currency, practical repudiation of debts and financial ruin, and on the other hand others declare it essential to the prosperity of the country and justly demanded by the people. Amid these arguments and contentions what can the poor fellows, and there are a good many of us, who confess they do not understand the tariff and silver question, but we vote as our respective fathers did, with the old party unless indeed we break loose and follow new leaders as many have done in the West and South?

CONFLICTING TESTIMONY. Truth and falsehood are strangely blended in political as well as in other discussions. The newspaper is much blamed for its misleading, partial, imperfect, fallacious, prejudiced and contradictious news and reports of men, things and beliefs. But what are the newspapers except so many challenges to intelligent, sound and well-considered opinions on all subjects political and non-political?

THE SCHNEIDER MURDER TRIAL in this city is a fresh illustration of the necessity of judging between the true and the false. The prosecution asserts in effect that the accused husband wantonly shot his wife and her unarmed brother; that he immediately began preparing evidence for a plea of self defense by throwing his pistol down by his victim, and trying to impress upon witnesses when on his way to surrender to the police that he had bullet holes in his clothes; that his friends subsequently deposited near the place of shooting an extra pistol, and that holes were punched in his clothes while in his cell. Witnesses contradict each other at every material point. Some swear that five shots and no more were fired, all inferentially from the pistol of the accused. They noted the number at the time. They counted them. They counted them mentally. They were aware of five shots without counting. Others swear they heard more than five shots and all the way from seven to twelve; they heard a fusilade; a succession of shots like exploding fire crackers; two distinct shots and then rapid firing as though two pistols were at work. They saw flashes going into opposite directions. Even the dying wife stated that she did not know who fired the first shot, and that her husband fired them all. The jury and the public must need hunt through all this tangle of testimony to find the truth. Similar contradictions extended over the whole field of inquiry. And what is true of this trial is true of all practical questions. We must hear the story of all witnesses and find the facts. Little by little the truth which is mighty will prevail. Even the tariff and the silver questions will be settled some day, and give way to others.

FASHIONABLE FANCIES. Leaving war, politics, murder and philosopizing, let us take a hasty look through the plate glass windows of our most fashionable purveyors of female adornments. Colored night gowns with ribbons to match are to be "the thing."

PARASOLS are rainbow-hued. Red in combination with other colors is a favorite, as for example, black trimmed with chiffon, and changeable silks, will be common.

HATS are to be sky scrapers and regular May pole affairs so abundant are the streamers of colored ribbons. One of the prettiest of the new materials is gauze finely plaited, having the edge just tipped with ostrich down.

CAPITAL.

A Trifle Inconsistent.

We clip the following paragraph from a recent number of the Michigan Christian Advocate, a paper which we read with pleasure and profit. Our object is not to condemn the paragraph, but simply to ask a few questions which are suggested by it:

"Dr. C. H. Payne very properly resented the indignity put upon Dr. Albert, because he was refused, in the South, equal privileges with him. Why was this discrimination against Dr. Albert? Was it lack of intelligence? No, for he is editor of the Southwestern Christian Advocate. Was it lack of any quality that goes to make up real essential manhood? No! What was the objection to Dr. Albert? He is a colored man."

And yet at the very time when the incident occurred which particularly aroused Dr. Payne's wrath he was traveling from one Conference organized exclusively on the "color line" to another of exactly the same sort. Will Dr. Potts tell us how he can consistently condemn hotel keepers for classifying men according to the color of their skins, until he first brings his own Church up to the point of squaring its practice by its theory in this regard? Why is Dr. Albert a member of one of the colored Conferences of his Church? Is it because of any lack of "intelligence" or of "any quality that goes to make up real, essential manhood?" No; it is simply and solely because "he is a colored man." We occasionally hear it brought as a reproach against our Church that we once put a quarter of a million of our members into the galleries. Our dear brethren who have a vocation to twit us thirty years after the event for the "caste spirit" which we thus displayed, have thrust (thrust is the proper word) this same class of members into separate congregations and Conferences. We boldly affirm that, exceptional instances apart, there is not a tithe of the Christian fellowship between the two races in the Methodist Episcopal Church that once existed in our own communion. It is one thing to lay down an abstract theory, and draw out all the conclusions and inferences that it can be made to yield; and it is quite another thing to apply this theory to a real, concrete condition of affairs. We do not impeach the sincerity of our brethren from over the line. In the face of a very perplexing problem, they have done what they candidly supposed was for the best, and we honor them for the benevolent spirit which they have exhibited in contributing so much money for the education and evangelization of the colored race. The fact that their actual conduct has not always reached the heroic level of their avowed principles, is not a reason for questioning the honesty of their purposes. Every human programme is modified in its execution by the force of existing circumstances. We ask Dr. Potts in all kindness to consider whether our Church did not also do the best it could, when, instead of becoming the inciter of a servil insurrection, it contented itself with doing simply what St. Paul did; that is, with preaching the gospel to masters and slaves alike, and allowing its principles to accomplish their own results in their own way?—Nashville Christian Advocate.

The Narrow Way.

I know Thy hand, dear Saviour,
Has led me all along;
I know Thy loving kindness
Should ever be my song.

But while I try to follow
Thy leading every day,
The pathway seems so narrow,
And rocks are in the way.

I know Thy hand assists me
To climb the rugged hills;
But must the way be narrow,
And life beset with ills?

Is there no grassy meadow
To cool my burning feet?
Or must I always suffer,
To be for Thee made meet?

Thou knowest best, my Saviour;
Perchance, if smooth the way,
If streams and birds and flowers
Beguiled the sunny day.

My hand from Thine withdrawing,
And walking in my pride,
I'd miss the way at evening
And in death's vale abide.

Then lead me, O my Saviour,
I'll follow trustingly,
And by Thy grace sustaining
I'll enter heaven with Thee!

Editorial.

On the Wing.

From Corvallis to Nashville.

After several days of busy preparation, on the morning of April 30 th, we bade adieu to wife and wee ones and boarded the Missoula-bound train on the Bitter Root railroad on our way to attend the annual meeting of the Board of Missions at Nashville, Tennessee. The surplus space in our grip was packed with exchanges and writing material. But the car was so full of old acquaintances who got on at the various stations that there was no time for perusal of papers nor penning of paragraphs.

It is interesting to note the great change that is going on in this valley. Only a few short years ago a small two horse "jocky" (and a rickety one at that) carried the passengers, and Silver Thorne's mule teams (two or three of them) carried most of the freight back and forth. Now there are frequently two well filled passenger and fifteen or more well loaded freight cars in the daily train from Grantsdale to Missoula. The green prairies and grainfields and budding orchards appeared fresh and inviting since the recent rains. The frosty nights have kept the fruit buds from blooming, which has thus far saved the fruit crop from destruction. There never has been such promise of abundant crops of cereals, vegetables and apples in this region before as there is now. At Stevensville Mr. Bass told us that he expected to raise three thousand boxes of apples this year. A year ago we predicted that this valley would, in time, become famous for the production of vegetables, standard apples and small fruits; that the large farms would be cut up into smaller tracts, and observation proves that this is rapidly coming to pass. It will mean greater prosperity for a far greater number of people. There is no reason why this region should not almost equal Walla Walla as a vegetable and fruit producing country, and we know what that is now, where land is worth from one hundred to two hundred dollars per acre. We knew of no more desirable place in all the great Northwest to make a home, and with industry and proper management, a good comfortable living, than right in the beautiful Bitter Root Valley, in Missoula County, Montana.

At Missoula we tarried till six thirty p. m. and boarded the splendidly equipped Northern Pacific east bound train. Overcome with fatigue we were soon lost in slumber. At Helena we awoke to find that the falling rain had turned into snow. Reaching Bozeman at two twenty a. m., we stopped off to spend Sunday, repairing to the Hotel Bozeman. By a little strategy—the only way to accomplish our purpose—we got to hear an earnest, orthodox and edifying sermon by the pastor, Rev. W. T. Goulder. We did not go in until he was just ready to take his text. Even then he tried to back out and work us in, but it was too late.

The snow came down—it storms nearly every time we go to Bozeman,—and at night it was three or four inches deep. But we spent a pleasant and profitable hour at the Sunday-school in the afternoon, and had a delightful service at night—a good congregation for such a stormy time. It was refreshing to meet with old friends whom we have known for fifteen or twenty years. Goulder sat up and we talked and talked and talked till the wee small hours came and brought the hack to take us to the train. What would Methodist preachers do if they could not occasionally meet and hold fellowship one with another? Here we found the ministers of the Helena District Conference and learned much about our fellow-workers whom we so much longed to see. We made the most of our time, for it was the last time we were to come in contact with a soul that we knew until we should reach St. Louis or Nashville.

We were greatly refreshed in spirit and at two twenty a. m. were aboard the train once more and soon were testing the capacity of a "sleeper" to furnish a weary body with needed repose. The next morning we were gliding down the valley of the Yellowstone, where there is but little to interest the traveler after the first or second trip through it. We passed Billings, Custer, Keogh, Miles City and Glendine during the day. The entire country appears to be one vast stock range where the cattle graze upon thousands of hills. There appears to have been abundance of rain, though the grass is short while the cattle are in fair condition. The presence of scattering teepes and groups of Indians on the Crow reservation remind us of the thrilling adventures and the scenes of strife and blood-shed enacted in this region in comparatively recent years. Here on these plains the red man made his last great stand in his refusal to bow to the superiority and scepter of the pale face, and here were peformed the military feats that gave him a world wide renown and that will cause him to live in history forever. We were just in the midst of the "bad lands" as the sun went down and darkness closed in upon the desert place through which we were passing.

We formed the acquaintance of a young Swede minister who is engaged in evangelistic work among his country men in Porland, Seattle and other cities on the coast. He appears to be a consecrated man. We also met with a Rev. Mr. Brown, a congregational minister from Ohio, who had been on a trip to Washington. He contributed much to relieve the monotony of the trip. He furnished us with half a dozen good papers—exchanges—that he had brought with him from the editorial office of the Advance when leaving Chicago.

Next morning we had reached the level prairies, the wheat growing region of North Dakota. But how different from last fall. Scarcely a furrow had been made in some fields. They were soaked with water, and the last year's crop had not yet been threshed. Winter was loth to relax his grasp. We saw some snow. The buds on the few trees we saw had scarcely begun to swell. As we got into Minnesota things improved, and the farmers were busy seeding. They are hopeful that the excessive rains will insure them against drouth later and thus help in the end.

We reached St. Paul about six P. M. on Tuesday. The change from the dreary solitudes of the great plains to the center of a great bustling city, is one for which the average Westerner is not prepared, unless he "has been there before." A man may be perfectly at home on the back of a bucking broncho and be able perfectly to manipulate its movements, or preserve his equilibrium on the hurricane deck of a jolting stage-coach, while threading the rockiest defile, or rounding at breakneck speed the rugged edge of the most frightful chasm; he may be accustomed to the roar of the cataract, the thunder of pounderous quartz stamps pounding out the precious metals, but when for the first time he is set afoot and alone (a stranger) amid the rumble of moving trains, the ringing of bells, the screaching of whistles, the snorting of locomotives, the shoutings of train callers, and the general din and uproar that prevails, and is jostled by a thousand people all rushing hither and thither to get off the train or to get on, or to do something, they hardly know what, in the Union depot at Kansas City or St. Paul, if he does not have sensations never experienced before, then he must be stolid indeed. But there need be no trouble if the traveler will use discretion and follow directions of the men in uniform who are on hand and when properly approached are gentlemanly and obliging.

The season here is much later than at the same time two years ago. The trees are hardly beginning to put out their buds. The yards are looking the least bit green. The city was full of excitement on account of the municipal election on that day. We had only time to get a lunch, and at half past seven were aboard the Burlington train, and on the Wisconsin side gliding along the bank of the Mississippi toward St. Louis. Overcome with the fatigue of labor and travel, we retired early, and next morning we were in northern Illinois. The change of latitude was quite evident in the green pastures and wheatfields. The trees were just putting out, and by the time we reached Monmouth, a town of six thousand people, the orchards were in full bloom. This is a delightful country. We have much to say of it, but space forbids. The land is water-soaked, and crops will be delayed and cut short. Fat cattle and fine porkers fed leisurely in rich clover pastures. The blood tells. Steam threshers were busy threshing out the corn in the long rows of cribs or bins along the road. The country is gently undulating. The people appear to be well to do, but the farm buildings and general improvements are nothing extraordinary.

As we approach Beardstown, where we take dinner, the country improves. The crops are further advanced, there are more orchards—apple, peach and cherry trees—and they are out in full bloom. The scene is most refreshing. The improvements are better. The cornstalks increase. We saw shocks of corn standing in the field from last year. But rain, rain, rain, water, water, water, mud, mud, mud—everywhere we could see and hear from it was wet, wetter, wettest. The Illinois river was out of its banks, and adjacent fields undated. But little plowing done for corn yet. The rain pours down. The lightning flashes, the thunders roar as our train presses southward to St. Louis. Whether we will be carried away in a flood or blown to pieces by a cyclone before we get there or not, we cannot say now. Of this our readers will be advised in our next. For the present we thank God for journeying mercies thus far, trust him for future ones and go forward.

NEWS AND NOTES.

—Henry M. Stanley is educating three negro boys about 12 years old whom he rescued from slavery, by paying three cents a piece for them.

—There are now fifty-two licensed deaconesses in the Methodist Episcopal Church. When shall we have them in the M. E. Church, South?

—The London Methodist Times endorses the proposal made at a recent session of the Sheffield Methodist Council by which it is proposed so to relax the three years' limit as to permit a suitable person "to remain a chairman of a district, year after year, without a circuit, fulfilling the office of a Bishop, stimulating the circuits in turn by visiting them, and by general oversight." The Times think that such an arrangement would be of immense advantage to the general interest, and proposes a reduction of the present thirty-five districts in Great Britain to twenty, and that twenty of the most capable men in the British ministry be elected to the office of separate chairman.

If that is not a confession of the need and a movement in the direction of our American Methodist episcopacy or something very near like it we would like to know what it is. John Wesley knew a thing or two when he gave the episcopacy to his people in America.

—Dr. Parkhurst's course in visiting the dens of vice in New York in order to get affidavits and evidences to vindicate himself in certain statements and charges made concerning the great laxness in the administration of law, has been severely critisicised. A secular paper in Montana, condemning his course, thinks that instead of a policeman, he should rather have taken his Bible and hymn book and had prayers with the denizens. The devil is sure to make a noise when he gets hurt and try to defame the character of his assailant. Whatever may be said of Dr. Parkhurst's methods, he is a thorn in the side of evil-doers, and his faithful denunciation of wickedness in high places as well as low will bring good fruit. Somebody had to perform the disagreeable task, and we quite agree with the Examiner in saying that when a man goes into a cess-pool to clean it he does not wear his Sunday clothes.

—The United States cruiser Raleigh was recently launched at the navy yard at Norfolk, Va. There were forty thousand people present. She is provided with the most approved modern appliances for offensive and defensive action. We will soon have a strong navy. This is well.

—The official estimate of the cost of the World's Fair is $22, 226, 400. It will be worth seeing.

—The will of William Astor leaves the bulk of his fortune to his son, John Jacob. The amount will be about $60,000,000. Each of the three daughters receive $2,000,000, and the widow an annual income of $500,000 a year during her lifetime, which at her death also reverts to the son. It would be far better for the race, and the son, too, if it had been given to the poor. That is the divine plan. When the moisture accumulates in clouds it is precipitated upon the earth in showers; when earthly products are hoarded He has ordained that they rot and go back to enrich the atmosphere and the soil. Even animals, when they get enough to supply their wants, are content. Man alone, poor selfish man, alone tries to hoard, to hold fast all he gets and fret because he can't get more. But God will not be mocked. It is only a question of time when the silver and gold kept back from Him will canker and rust and the souls of its possessors will perish with hunger.

—Dr. Parkhurst, in an article opposing the election of new bishops at the ensuing general Conference, and in which candidacy for office is deplored and purification of "church politics" is called for, says:

Our position on this subject has been taken, as we have said, in the interest of "conservatism." We have a tolerable reputation for "radicalism," and wish not to compromise it; but the best radical is the reformer who stands firmly on fundamental truth, and guards sacredly that foundation. The Methodist episcopate is, "taken all in all," one of the grandest facts in ecclesiastical history. May God preserve it in its purity and power! Let us guard it with sacred scrupulosity. Let us promptly correct, and annihilate the slightest attempt to pervert it. Let us forbid, in absolute and unmistakable terms, all efforts to apply to it the usual intrigues and artifices of politicians. Let us seek, in every possible way, to make it a model of sanctified character, of the most unselfish piety, as well as good sense and practical usefulness, before our people and the world. Let us guard it, as with a circumvallation of fire, against the intrusion of personal ambition and the plottings of ecclesiastical demagogues. And, further, let us not be afraid to avow scrupulous and conservative policy in our Conferences, by our presses, and before whomsoever it concerns.

—The editor of Zion's Herald follows in the footsteps of his famous predecessor, Gilbert Haven, in his predilections and prejudices on the color question. He gives prominence to an incident that occurred on a railroad train in Texas, in which there was an "ebillition" of race prejudice upon the part of some persons whom he recognizes as belonging to the "poor whites" and by no means a representative class, and takes occasion to dilate upon the virtues of the people of color whom he recognizes are vastly superior to those who had indignantly scorned their presence. Human nature is much the same everywhere. The same inherent predjudice exists and the same "ebullition" is not uncommon among the same class in the North, where there is occasion to call it forth. (We know this to be a fact.) But the geography of this particular case gives it special significance. It is easy for the editor of the Herald to sit in his sanctum and soliloquize upon the social sins of the South, but not so easy for him and the great Church which he represents to make their practice correspond with their theory when brought to deal face to face with the social problem as it is forced upon the people of the South. The color line has not been entirely obliterated by our brethren whose bearings are taken by observations made on Bunker Hill.

—Well, the "Montana" is not the only member of our Methodist newspaper family that is designated as "little." A correspondent writing to the Pacific Methodist Advocate, says in closing: "God bless you, with your good little paper." It sounds funny to hear the General Conference paper called "little," though really it is only one-third larger in its material dimensions than the METHODIST. Doubtless many things in connection with our work in the West appear to our brethren toward the rising sun to be small. But we have learned not to despise the day of small things. We are in a land that is great and large, and represent a great cause, have large expectations, and do not expect to remain "little" always. Already "Jacob" is beginning to "rise."

—The report on the general state of the church at the Fresno District Conference, California, has these stirring words: A tidal wave of salvation seems to be sweeping over this valley, quickening every interest of the church, and men of all classes—drunkards, gamblers, saloon-keepers, infidels, horse-racers, and sinners of all classes—are turning to God and leading new lives under the power of the Gospel. Our church and ministry are going in to conquer. We realize that there is as much power in the Gospel to-day as when Jesus ascended, leaving the promise, "Lo, I am with you alway." We rejoice with our brethren in the great prosperity of our cause in the Golden State.

—Bishop Keener, the senior bishop of the M. E. Church, South, is a native of Baltimore. He studied at the Weslyan University, and after his graduation went into business at Baltimore, and in 1841 he entered the ministry. He was elected to the episcopacy in 1870. He has held the Baltimore Conference four times during the last twelve years.

—Rev. Geo. Needham, of the Rocky Mountain Methodist, has made an extensive trip through Texas, Louisiana, Mississippi, and other states. His letters are quite readable, and we hope he will get many new subscribers to his paper.

—Our readers will be rejoiced to learn of the safe return of Rev. L. B. Stateler from his winter trip. He is much improved in health and already has preached once or twice for Bro. Goulder. He thinks of making his home at Bozeman. Brother and Sister Clarke, of Helena, have also returned to their home.

—From private sources we learned that our Bro. Britt was to take the train that day after we left Bozeman, on his way to Ky. We suppose the purpose of his visit is an open secret. We wish him a safe and prosperous journey, and shall reserve space for congratulations later on.

—It was quite a disappointment to us not to be at the Helena District Conference. But the demands upon our time and pocketbook forbade it, meeting just at the time it did. An oversight prevented a communication from the METHODIST. But we are glad that our brethren remember the paper and their kind words are duly appreciated. But we beg leave to kindly remind them that it is going to take a little more "rustling" as well as resolving to sustain the reputation for "financial success" which the paper seems to have gained and which gives our friends such pleasure. Let all delinquents dispatch us a dollar at once and thus deny us the duty of inditing a dun, and afford us the delight of saying "Well done." We mean what we say. We must have more funds from some source.

—The first state convention of the Christian Endeavor society of Montana was held in Helena, commencing April 28th. Dr. F. E. Clark, of Boston, the founder of the society, Rev. E. P. Town, of Helena, and Rev. Reed, of Deer Lodge, delivered addresses. The convention was in session two days.

—The twenty-first session of the General Conference of the M. E. Church (North) was convened in Omaha the second day of May. Bishop Bowman called the conference to order, and was assisted by Bishop Foss and others in the opening exercises. S. D. Munroe, of Pennsylvania, was elected secretary and Manly Hurd and Charles Hudson assistants. There were five hundred delegates and four thousand visitors present. Bishop Foster arrived the second day. There was much discussion over the seating of the lay delegates, who demanded seats all in a body, and much unworthy and unfortunate contention for the "chief seats." A colored delegate from Missouri drew the first choice and took his pick of the house amid much laughter. Sambo starts in on top. We shall see how he comes out. Grave questions are to be considered by this body. For the sake of our common Methodism, of Christianity and the cause of humanity at large, we pray that it may be guided by divine wisdom.

—Things have gotten to such a pass that the silver question, the Chinese question, the temperance, Mormon and other questions to be considered by our law makers, are not decided so much by the personal convictions of the representatives of the people as by the probate influence they will have on approaching elections. Would that the country had more men who are not afraid to speak and vote for the right.

—Both Bishop Duncan and Dr. Morton wrote us, just in time to be too late for last issue, that the Board of Church Extension at its recent annual session had appropriated $500, for the building of a church at Corvallis and the same amount for Whitehall. We will have the abstract of the proceedings of the Board either in this or the next issue.

—Much of this issue of the METHODIST is prepared en route between Corvallis and Nashville while the editor is traveling at the rate of from twenty to forty miles an hour. If we appear to scatter, the occasion for it will be understood.

—Brother F. C. Adkins writes that he held a union meeting which, like most such meetings, was a failure. He has good congregations at all points. Prayer-meetings well attended. Large crowds of young people at almost every service. Expects to hold a camp-meeting, and wants to see us at their District Conference, and we greatly desire to be there.

—Rev. H. D. Groves, President of Howard Female College, Fayette, Mo., writes: "The MONTANA METHODIST is a welcome visitor to this office. I read with great interest of the success attending the labors of the brethren "on the bard." Surely the Lord has a work for you to do. Howard College is having a prosperous year. There are 230 students enrolled, and with our new building completed and the old one remodeled, we are prepared to accommodate more.

Latest Church News.

—All the Bishops of the church except Bishop Haygood, who was kept at home by the sickness of his wife, were present at the annual meeting in Nashville, and apparently in fine health and spirits. The result of their deliberations will be seen in another column. We welcome Bishop Duncan to the Northwest again. He will have the advantage of experience gained by his visit last year to help him in this year's work.

—The editor arrived in Nashville at ten minutes past seven o'clock on the morning of the 5th inst. At this writing we have met with a number of members of the Board and with many other brethren from different parts of the church. All speak kind words for the Western work. While the annual report of the Board shows that there has been a gratifying increase in the collections over the previous year, reducing the debt $39,474.04, yet we fear that it will be impossible to make any advance in the West over the past year. All will be done that is possible.

—"Our Homes" is the title of one of the brightest, newsiest little papers that we have lately seen. It is edited by Miss Lucinda B. Helm, in the interest of our Parsonage and Home Mission Society. It is published quarterly and the price is only twenty-five cents a year. Let our people subscribe for it.

From Jamesport, Mo.

Dear Montana Methodist:

You know by this time that this scribe is outing back among the old scenes and old friends.

My 3rd Quarterly Conference was held the last week in March, and we had a good report; 16 members added to the church, finances well up, and other interests prosperous. So they voted me a rest for a month, and sent me away—I was easily sent. My family had been away for three and a half months, and I was glad to see them.

The trip to Omaha was pleasant, and we barely escaped the storm the 31st of March, which did so much damage in Kansas and Nebraska. Two or three incidents on the way are of note.

A man took very sick, hemorrhage of lungs, on the train between Butte and Dillon. He was out of money and was to be put off at Dillon; although he wanted to reach Salt Lake, where he had a friend.

The conductor and myself took a collection for him of $24.85, to be used for funeral expenses if he should never get better, and to buy a ticket to Salt Lake if he should ever be able to travel.

A woman got on the train at some point in Wyoming, whose drunken husband had threatened to kill her, putting a gun to her temple one hundred times within the ten days just gone. She had him arrested, and while he was in jail, she took the train for her friends. He had sworn he would follow and kill her for leaving him. She was covering up her tracks to save her life. Who is responsible for the open shops that turn out this kind of samples?

At Kearney, Neb., there came on board the train a negro man with a white wife and a yellow child about nine months old. The unusual combination caused much comment, and by common consent, the old ladies on board determined that if their daughter should bring home such a husband, they would not kill any "fatted calf." I was amused at his pride of her.

On the way down to St. Joe, I found a Mr. Newbury, the editor of the "Agricultural Herald," and his wife, who is pastor of the "Free Methodist Church" at Omaha—she has a sister who is Missionary in Africa. You know "my sentiments," Mr. Editor.

Once more and I am done with the incidents of the trip.

At Hamburg there came on board the dear brethren of the St. Joe. District, whose Conference had just adjourned—Grimes and Shook and Garret and Williams and Dinwidie and Cooper and Sitton and Gibson and Vandeventer—the feelings in my heart were like those which I think will fill us "when we meet."

The Sunday at Rupe Grove with my own brother Robt., was pleasant and profitable; two at the altar, and three added to the church. I baptized Robt. LeRoy Squires, my nephew.

The next week I met my family down at Jamesport, where we spent several days among some of the warmest friends we have ever made almost anywhere. Sunday was a high day, with crowded houses and warm congratulations and tokens of love. Many prayers follow us to Montana. But I am too prolix now, and must close. The spring is late and very wet—roads terrible.

I am resting at my father and mother's and their children. We had a delightful "Easter" service together. Am sorry to miss our District Conference at Boulder, but I hope they will have a profitable time. We will return to Butte (D. V.) the last of April, and trust we may do some more good work before Conference.

Lovingly,

J. E. SQUIRES.

From Fairview, Wash.

Dear Methodist:

Our Third Quarterly Conference was held on our Ct., embracing the second Sabbath in April. Bro. Swift was with us, and at his best. His sermons were of a high order, and the results will be seen on "that day." The quarter has not been as fruitful as we wished; yet the Lord blessed us, and there were some valuable accessions to the church. Our Sunday School interests are improving.

The cry for more workers is heard all over our country here. O Lord, send forth laborers into thy harvest fields, which are now ready for the sickle.

We have a church paper now in nearly every home. As fast as they come into the church, we present them one of the many we have, and we rarely ever fail to secure subscribers.

Brethren, we could not do a better work than this, especially in the great West; for here our church is comparatively unknown, and the fact of our publishing such papers as the "Nashville Advocate" and others, inspires confidence in us, and to those who never heard of us before, the fact is revealed that we are not a puny infant, but a giant, and a tower of strength to the fallen.

Then the books we publish. Sell them. Get all of "Bingham's." They sell at sight to the young people. They are pure, uplifting, ennobling and Methodistic to the core.

Then Oxfords Teachers' Bible. We have sold a number of them. Get a Catalogue of them. We have a hundred styles from which to choose.

"Peloubet's Notes," on the "International Sunday School Lessons," is a valuable work, and should be in the hands of all our teachers and Superintendents. Scatter the "Standard Hymn Book." Sow them "knee deep." If you are troubled about getting your people to have their children baptized, sell or give them "Nichol's" Works.

By doing this, deporting, you leave behind you, indelible prints on the "sands of time?" Nay; verily, but on human souls.

How sweet the thought, that in after years, to the sometime guest, will be related how this book, and that one, was bought from brother So and So, and then with tears glistening in the eye, they speak almost reverently of you. Have we not seen it before? We shall look for you at District Conference. Coming? Now, farewell. God bless you and yours. Pray for us.

Yours in Love,

FRED ST. CLAIR.

Lay delegates: J. W. Good, from Butte; J. B. Taylor, J. W. Currin, from Boulder; S. F. Tuttle, Willow Creek; Mrs. J. W. Reeves (!) East Helena.

W. T. Goulder was secretary and W. M. Britt, assistant. The conference resolved to act as a whole in matters of business, and but two committees were appointed, one on District Conference Records and one on Public Worship.

The following is the substance of the reports made by the pastors of the various charges:

BOULDER.

R. S. Clark: At beginning of Conference year, the charge was very low in all its lines. Attendance is now good in all departments of the work. A very fine meeting had been held. Finances all behind. Preacher says he is a poor financier, would rather let the people attend to that matter. No Conference collections taken yet. Twenty persons received into church, net gain of thirteen. Large per cent. of membership attend prayer-meeting. Pastor insists on the people fasting and sets the example. Preaches in all to about two hundred and fifty people.

DEER LODGE.

S. B. Tabor: Twelve accessions to the church; ten by profession of faith; four adult baptisms, two infant baptisms. Finances well up. Only about $80 now due the P. C. and P. E. on salary. Home Mission and Church Ex. assessments collected and sent to the Board. Two-thirds of Foreign Mission assessments collected. Paid $1.50 on church debt. Sunday School expended $40. Have expended $250 for work on church building. Spiritual state good. Attendance at prayer-meeting not quite equal to membership, but good. Holds church conferences each month. Preach to 150 people. Preach to the prisoners at the penitentiary two or three times a month.

WILLOW CREEK AND WHITEHALL.

W. M. Britt: A large work. Spiritual condition not encouraging. Have held several good meetings. Received three members. Finances well up. Assessments up. Two preachers are needed to do the work. Preach to 250 or 300 people. Congregations good. One third of the people attend church.

HELENA.

In the absence of pastor, A. C. Couey reported: Finances well up. Congregations vary—sometimes small, sometimes large. Fifteen added to the church. Five adult baptisms, six infant. Pastor preaches to about 300 people. Stewards are doing good work in raising pastor's salary.

BUTTE.

A. C. Couey: (Pastor absent). The pastor is a good "rustler." Knows more people in Butte than any other pastor. Preaches to crowded houses. Has received about 30 members. Attendance at prayer-meeting good. Preaches to 500 people in a quarter. Six infant baptisms, 12 adults. Finances in good condition. Preacher well paid. Conference collections well taken up.

BOZEMAN CIRCUIT.

B. E. H. Warren: Preach at six places—five in the Gallatin Valley. Received 25 members. Have built a parsonage this year. Preach at Clyde Park in Park County. Have commenced to build a church. Part of material on the ground. Church papers well circulated. Travel 400 miles each quarter. The pastor much encouraged at outlook. Another preacher is needed on the work.

TOWNSEND.

The P. E. reported a large auditorium at Townsend. In the absence of a pastor, he preaches to the people as often as he can reach them. Finances of the charge in good condition. A preacher is badly needed for this work.

EAST HELENA.

L. Bramble: Ten members received since Conference. Two adult and three infant baptisms. Regular prayer-meetings are held and well attended. Preaching services very well attended. Preach to 150 people during the quarter. Preacher has received $160 in money and $100 in donations. Ministerial support well up. Spiritual condition is encouraging. The pastor and his people fast and pray.

BOZEMAN.

W. T. Goulder: Six members received. Two adult and four infants baptized. Congregations vary. Collected nearly all the general assessments. Adopts the plan of taking subscriptions in raising general collections. Expect to have a parsonage built by the time the Annual Conference meets. The amount of $577 subscribed for it.

STATISTICS.

The reports of the preachers showed that 2,575 waited upon the ministry of the word, 119 had been added to the church, and there had been a net gain of 93 since the Annual Conference.

MEMORIAL.

The Board of Missions at Nashville was memorialized to appropriate $4,500 to aid in carrying on the work in the Helena District.

—o—

INCORPORATION.

The Conference designated and authorized the District Trustees, viz: W. A. Hensley, Nathan P. Evans and M. O. Reed, to incorporate the Helena District Parsonage, and appurtenances thereunto belonging.

Resolutions.

The Pacific Methodist Advocate was recognized as an ably edited paper, and because of its bringing the church into closer connection with our work in the West, and in view of the fact that it has been furnished us at an expense of $10,000 for four years, our people are urged to take the paper, especially the preachers.

A resolution asking for a particular member of the Episcopal college to be sent to Montana, did not pass. The same lot befel one asking that the work in the entire Conference be included in one presiding elder's district.

The hearty thanks of the conference were extended to Brother R. S. Clark and his wife and to the good people of Boulder for their hospitality in entertaining the Conference.

A resolution expressing appreciation of the "Montana Methodist" was adopted.

DELEGATES ELECTED.

The following were elected delegates to the ensuing annual Conference: George L. Duke, J. W. Kemper, H. W. Currin, A. G. Clarke; Alternates: J. W. Johnson, S. F. Tuttle, William Beall, Charles A. Blackburn. The alternates come in relation to principals as in the order named.

THE NEXT SESSION will be held at Deer Lodge.

RELIGIOUS SERVICES.

Prominence was given to the devotional exercises. W. M. Britt, S. B. Tabor and B. E. H. Warren did the preaching, which was first class. The services were spiritual and refreshing, and the business sessions harmonious.

The Conference adjourned on Friday afternoon, after a two days' session.

DISCUSSIONS.

An interesting discussion was had on the duty of preaching the distinctive doctrines of Methodism, led by W. M. Britt, who was followed by Bramble, Tabor, Clarke, Warren and Couey.

R. S. Clark led in a discussion on the proper training of children. The presiding elder questioned each preacher upon some practical question regarding his method of work, in which some good thoughts were brought out. Rev. W. M. Britt said that the best way to make a prayer-meeting a success was to give the people something to talk about and to pray for. In answer to a question as to what he did when he had worked hard all week to prepare a sermon, and on going to the church Sunday morning found that it was not suitable to the congregation. W. T. Goulder said he took to the brush. We have known preachers or a preacher, to take to the "brush," even without as good an excuse as that.

The above items were hastily gathered by the editor from the secretary's minutes, so as to secure their publication in this issue.

The Montana Methodist.

RESOLUTIONS PASSED AY THE HELENA DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

Resolved, that in expressing our convictions as a District Conference on the importance of the "Pacific Methodist Advocate," our connectional paper in the great West, as an invaluable factor in the development of the interests of our Zion therein, we do not disparage the Montana Methodist, for we cherish with commendable pride its financial success, while we regard it as an agent in the upbuilding of the cause in Montana, from which we cannot afford to withhold our hearty support. Nor would we seem to fall below a proper appreciation of the self-denying service and devotion of its editor, Rev. E. J. Stanley, to which is due largely its financial success, and its efficiency as the organ of our Conference. And we do not only believe that it should be in the homes of all our people as a promoter of religious information and true piety, but we shall endeavor to put it in the homes of our people; and we shall not only anxiously look for it to become a weekly with twelve pages, but we shall labor to accomplish this result.

{ R. S. Clark.

OBITUARY.

Miss Ella S. Sanders was born May 18, 1872, and departed this life April 20, 1892. She was of a cheerful disposition, and was an active worker in the church, of which she became a member in Georgia at the age of 10 years. She had been much afflicted for years, but was apparently better until a short time before death came. She was conscious that her end was near, and retained her reasoning faculties until the last. She had no fear of death, but was confident and happy at its approach. After bidding adieu to the members of the family, all of whom had assembled around her bedside, she quoted a passage of Scripture, and after exultantly exclaiming, "I'll die in Jesus," fell asleep without a sigh or groan. She was the only unmarried daughter of a widowed mother, to whom she was a great comfort. Bro. T. W. Flowers conducted the funeral services in the presence of a large concourse of people. We deeply sympathize with Sister Sanders and all the bereaved ones. The departed was one of the gentlest and purest spirits that we have known. She was without reproach, and had a kind word for every one. She loved the Master and loved His cause. We shall miss her when we go to Ambrose again. May we all be as ready for the final change as she was. Praise the Lord for the hope of eternal life.

Report of Helena District S. S. Conference.

The Second Annual District Sunday-school Conference convened in Boulder, Montana, April 20, 1892, at 9:30 a. m. After religious services Rev. S. B. Tabor was elected President, and Laura K. Davis Secretary. The following pastors and delegates were enrolled:

Helena—Mrs. Callie Price, Mrs. L. R. Morris.

Butte—J. W. Good, Miss Ina Stoner.

Deer Lodge—Rev. S. B. Tabor, pastor; Mrs. A. C. Couey, Mr. Alfred MaCron.

Boulder—Rev. R. S. Clark, pastor; J. W. Currin, Mrs. Bell, John Nottingham.

Bozeman—Rev. W. T. Goulder, pastor; Laura K. Dawes.

Willow Creek and Whitehall—Rev. Wm. M. Britt, pastor.

Bozeman Circuit—Rev. B. E. H. Warren, pastor; Miss Cora King, Miss Virgie Spain.

The following reports were made:

Helena—One Sunday-school; scholars, 50; teachers, 7. Well supplied with literature. Contributions good.

Butte—Sunday-school in good condition. Enrollment of 75; average attendance, 45; officers and teachers, 8; average collection each Sunday, $1.75. Butte Mission School has an enrollment of 50. This school is in the suburbs of the city in a much needed place, and is doing good work.

Deer Lodge—Interesting Sunday-school. Enrollment, 70; average attendance, 45; teachers, 8, school and collections increasing.

Bozeman—Enrollment of officers and teachers, 10; scholars, 80; average attendance of officers and teachers, 75 per cent.; scholars, 70 per cent. School composed mostly of children under 12 years of age, and mostly from non-religious homes.

Willow Creek and Whitehall—Four schools on the work, but only one under the supervision of the M. E. Church, South.

Boulder—An enrollment of 94; average attendance, 54; teachers, 6; collections for one quarter, $20.00; school doing good work.

Bozeman Circuit, from Belgrade—An attendance of 45; officers and teachers, 9. Well supplied with literature. The pastor reports two Union schools on his charge as doing good work.

East Helena—School has been a Union school, but is now under the supervision of the M. E. Church, South; has an enrollment of 60; average attendance, 45, and doing well.

The subject, "The Model Sunday-school Superintendent," was discussed; opened by Rev. Bell, of the Congregational Church, followed by short and spicy remarks by Revs. Couey, Clark and others.

Adjourned to meet at 2:30 p. m. After religious services conducted by Rev. W. M. Britt, the following subjects were read and discussed:

"The Present Demands of the Sunday-school Work;" a paper by Mrs. Callie Price, ably discussed by Bros. Couey, Bell, Warren and others; "Why Should I Study the Bible?" by Alfred MaCron;" "The Model Teacher," by Laura K. Dawes; "Relation of the Sunday-school to the Church," an excellent paper by Rev. S. B. Tabor.

This finished the program. Conference closed by singing the doxology, and benediction by Rev. S. B. Tabor.

LAURA K. DAWES, Sec.

"The Montana Methodist"

IS A

Wide-awake, religious family paper, containing eight pages, with large, clear type, and published semi-monthly, on the 15th and 30th of each month, excepting those dates come on Sunday.

Rev. E. J. STANLEY, Editor and Business Manager.

The paper has a able corps of contributors scattered throughout Montana, Idaho, Washington and Oregon, and will contain occasional letters from California, Colorado, New Mexico, Kansas, Missouri, Kentucky, and other states, East, West and South.

The Sketches of Pioneer Life,

BY REV. L. B. STATELER,

extending, as they do, through a period of sixty years of active life in the ministry on the Western border, extending from Kentucky to the Columbia river, will be worth more than the price of the paper.

THIS PAPER WILL CONTAIN SOMETHING FOR EVERYBODY. and contribute, in a the fullest measure possible, to the extension of the Redeemer's kingdom, especially throughout this great and growing West and Northwest.

Our subscription-list shows a circulation extending from Massachusetts to California and Oregon, and from Canada to Mexico. It is rapidly increasing.

The subscription is only ONE DOLLAR a year, in advance.

We invite our friends, one and all, to join in the canvass and help double our list.

Blue Gentian and Edelweiss.

Mrs. Ballington Booth is reported to have said, that in her work in Switzerland she had noticed that the blue Gentian did not grow in the low valleys, but higher up near the snow line, and that higher up still where it is difficult to reach, grew the Edelweiss. To the Swiss the Gentian is the flower of hope, and the Edelweiss of purity. She used this to illustrate that there are people so crushed by sin that the flower of hope does not grow where they live, much less aspiration after purity, and that the Christian worker must inspire hope before he can spur the abandoned sinner to desire and seek after purity. The figure is very beautiful, and although it might not bear critical scrutiny, yet contains much of truth. Many there are indeed who have lost hope. Their passions have overpowered them, and borne them downward. The struggle has been marked in defeat. The first sin forfeited the respect of the community. Increasing sin only widens the chasm between them and pure manhood and womanhood. What they need is some one to stand by and whisper words of hope. There lies the philosophy of the attractiveness of evangelistic reformed drunkards, gamblers, prize-fighters and the like. There is in the lowest some little longing after better things. The reformation of an occasional degraded man or abandoned woman affords some ground for hope that they too may be saved. Thence they flock to hear him. Sam Small drew an entirely different class of hearers from that which attends upon Mr. Mills ministry. It is unpleasant work, but it is Christly work to go among the degraded and try to lead them up where the Gentian grows, and then point still forward to the Edelweiss.

—o—

Manners.

Northwestern Christian Advocate.

"Did you ever think wnat beautiful manners Christ had? It is evident that in a few minutes he could make friends with a total stranger. What a charm his recorded conversations then, no matter into what company you may be thrown, whether you are invited to dine with the queen, or you go to take tea with your old nurse who took care of you when you were a baby, you will be equally unembarrassed; for when one has a heart which is full of the spirit of Christ, one cannnot do much that is amiss."

WANTED.

Money wanted, men wanted, women wanted, wisdom, faith, strength, zeal, time, influence, opportunity, power with God and with men, never wanted so much in my life. Wants enlarged, increased, augmented. Want churches, halls, homes, stores, shops; want missionaries, workers, helpers, supporters, teachers, evangelists; want denominations, churches, communities; want N. Y., the State, the nation, the continent, the globe, the universe; want dollars, clothes, food; want every thing I can beg or get for God; the Holy Ghost to do his work here and elsewherd. Want the milionaire and the beggar; want the black and the white, want the learned and illiterate; want everything I can see—take everything I can see—and be glad. — Old clothes or food. Money! money! money! money! money! Did I ever ask before? I ask now. I ask because I want the heathen for a possession and the uttermost parts of the earth for an inheritance. I want it for Jesus, my Jesus, my Elder Brother, to whom it belongs. He is coming soon to enter upon it, and He says to me, occupy till I come. Come, Lord Jesus, come quickly.

—o—

A BEAUTIFUL LETTER, written by Von Moltke during the close of the melancholy ninety-nine days' reign of Emperor Frederick I., is published. It contains passages full of the spirit of Christianity: "Dear Ludwig: Life through another spring I regard as a special gift from God. But when a man has passed the biblical age he can only ask the Lord to treat him gently, to send him few of the pains and troubles of many years. True, death is never a quite welcome guest, but yet I do not wish to live another year. There are sad days ahead for Germany, and if alive when they come, I may not withdraw into still retirement, as I desire." Referring to a wedding which he had just attended, he closes thus: "Then came the emperor, his tall, stately form erect, and greeting all with a friendly smile. Only his eyes seemed dulled, and his breathing quick and difficult. It moves my heart to see him thus, with inexhaustible patience and cheerfulness, fight his dark fate, one foot on the throne and the other in the grave. And now, God bless you. Your old and shattered brother, Berlin, May 24th, 1888. Helmuth."

—o—

At a recent meeting of the Pittsburgh presbytery resolutions were adopted declaring that unless the World's Fair is closed on Sunday and the sale of liquor prohibited on the grounds they will not visit the Fair and will use their influence to prevent others from attending.

The reason an urchin gave for being late at school was, that the boy in the next house was going to have a dressing down with a trunk-strap, and he wanted to hear him howl.

Angel's Work.

I wonder if you have read that pathetic little story of the poor tired mother who took her three little children into a parlor-car by mistake, and was rudely driven into another car in a way that brought smiles to some faces, but a great pity into the tender heart of one of the passengers, a little boy. He showed his sympathy in true boyish fashion by taking some of his own fruit and luncheon to the abashed little group in the common car.

So sweet and gentle was the ministry of the bright-faced, beautiful boy, that one of the children, watching his retreating form, asked, "Was he an angel, mamma?"

"No, dear; but he was doing an angel's work, bless him!" answered the mother.

And this answer rings in my ears so persistently that I pass it on to you: "Doing an angel's work."

Is there not a little bit of angel's work for each one of us every day no matter how common place theday, may be? Perhaps you are not quite sure just what an angel's work is, but a little searching of the Scripture will make it quite clear. And having found what the work is like, suppose each of us, for just one week, watch diligently for such pieces of it as may lie in our path.

—o—

The Human Touch.

A visitor to a glass manufactory recently saw a man moulding clay into the great pots which later were to be used in shaping the glass, and noticing that all the moulding was done by hand, said to the workman, "Why do you not use a tool to aid you in shaping the clay? "There is no tool that can do this work," replied the artisan. "We have tried a number of tools, but somehow it needs the human touch." In this simple reply is the philosopy of all successful Church work. Neither money nor machinery can take the place of individual effort and sympathy.—The Congregation.

—o—

Good Advice.

If you find yourself irritated and unhappy—and with fairly good reasons for being so—take hold of yourself by the collar, and set yourself down hard, and say to yourself: "Well, what of it? Supposing that is so, how long will it be so? What difference will it make at a short time from now? A good night's sleep will dissipate the most of it. If nothing else will remedy it, death will—and that is not far away. Why should I allow the brief time I have to be happy in this life to be turned into misery? I will not do it, I will not permit myself to be fretted and chafed and imbittered." Then go and dash cold water over your head, and take hold of some sort of work.—The Interior.

EDITORIAL.

EXPLANATORY EXHORTATION.

The editor of this paper is away attending to the business the church has committed to his care. An inexperienced hand is getting out this issue. Do not hold Bro. Stanley responsible for any shortcomings in it. He is not responsible except in so far as his bad judgment in selecting the man he did to bring it out, makes him responsible. Faulty as the work is, brethren, yet may we not ask you to pray God's blessing on it, in that He may use it, as He often does "the weak things of this world?" He made effective use, in the days of old of a "ram's horn" in pulling down a stronghold — may he not use a "green-horns" as well?

"SEND MORE MEN."

Dr. John's note announcing the death of Dr. Lambuth, in Japan, brings grief to the heart of the entire church. His life belonged to the whole church. Years ago he laid it and his all upon her altars, and ever since he has been, not his, but ours. The sufferings he endured, and the works he wrought men cannot compute. God knows. Separated for well nigh a lifetime from kindred, home and country, he has nobly held aloft the red cross banner in the lands of gloom and sin and night. "In labors more abundant than us all, counting not his own life dear unto himself," heroic, saintly Lambuth has showed us how to live, and how to die. He has showed us how the missionary spirit, the Spirit of Christ, can enable a man to do and dare, work and win for Jesus; "fight the good fight of faith; finish his course with joy, and fall at the head of the column in sight of Heaven." His dying words should prove an inspiration. They were needful for our encouragement and help—not needful to tell us how he died. His abiding trust in Jesus, his pure, holy and diligent living was the preparation for his triumphant dying. "Send more men!" What a call to the church! Listen, ye men and women of our Israel—one of our dying leaders speaks. From the open grave comes the trumpet call: "Send more men." It is as if he said: Shadow of death you affright not. Cold waves you cannot overwhelm. God takes care of the dying of his children, but the work, the work here in Japan! that is the burden even in death. "Let not the work cease." "Send more men!" Hear it, heed it, O man of God, called to the ministry of the Son of God. From over the waters, from the angel thronged shore the call comes to us to-day. How many will say, "Here am I, send ME?" Who will be the first to be baptized for the dead? He has dropped his work, faithfully done to the end of his life, into our hands. God forbid that it should suffer for his absence, or our want of devotion. Oh, thou God of Paul and Lambuth, answer the need of the living, the prayer of the dying, the wish of the glorified, and call many to the work and give the church religion enough to send them—to send them NOW! Montana needs them, the entire West needs them; Japan, China, Mexico and Brazil needs them. The whole world, that Jesus has committed to the church to save, needs them, and is almost in hell for lack of them. "SEND MORE MEN!"

A slave to a false public opinion is that man who keeps his hand back from a known duty through fear of what a wicked world may say.

What this sin-burdened world needs is holy loving LIVING—not harsh, hurtful quarrelling about holiness PROFESSING. As an old Christian once said: "Let us seek the BLESSER;" and when, on our knees the better to behold Him, we catch His answering glance of love, we will be too humble to be selfrighteous, and too happy to berate the "poor in spirit" Christian who feels it needful often to pray: "God be merciful to me, A SINNER."

Why are you a Methodist, brother? Have you ever read a Discipline through? If not; get one. The investment of a quarter, coupled with a heart that loves the church, and a mind in earnest after knowledge will add materially to your experience and to your intelligence. Try it.

"He can't preach." Can't he? Well, friend, can you beat him preaching? If not, be modest in your criticisms, and if you can you ought to have sense enough to make allowances. Do what he tells you and you will know more and be better. If each of us only lived such a Christlike life that no other life could touch ours without being drawn from the evil to the good, the world would be won for Christ in the next six months. This is meant for me and meant for you, brother.

Judging from the volume of sound, the fellow that stalks out of church during services has the biggest feet and "more of 'em" than any other man in the house.

Wonder if some of our Montana congregations are dreading an Indian surprise? It looks so from the way some of their heads revolve, when a late comer arrives.

The coming great contest in this country will be between Romanism and infidelity on one hand, and Bible Christianity on the other. METHODISM on account of her numbers, her influence, her intelligence, her doctrines, and her spirituality will have to bear the brunt of the onset. Brother Methodist, get ready for the fray by exercising with our weapon, "the sword of the Spirit"—the Word of God. Study it, preach it, live it, and the issue will not be doubtful.

We sympathize more than ever with an editor. He can't please everybody. Some folks will not be pleased with Heaven—they won't get there. An editor's trials, perplexities and scoldings are enough to make the hair on top of his head "unanimously adjourn" sine DIE.

We see it announced that Dr. E. J. Stanley was to preach in Nashville last week. We suppose it means our Editor. He was not sick when he left home.

GEM GLEAMS.

There is a word in one of the Psalms which touches the deep and heavenly chord in every spiritual mind—"Lead me in the way everlasting." Oh, how many ways are not everlasting! How many of life's rivers run into the desert, and end in a heap of burning sands and the wastes of the bitter disappointment! But, oh! there are things that shall last forever; loves that shall never die; friendships that shall never be rent asunder; joys that shall never wither; hopes that shall never fail; treasures that shall never corrode; lessons that shall never be lost; beginnings that shall never end like broken columns; works that shall never cease to abide; lives that shall live on in grander fullness and larger development as the ages shall ever roll. Oh, that our days and years may touch the days of heaven.—Exchange.

A good story about an old Methodist minister baptizing an infant is told in "Echoes from Welsh Hills." "He took the babe in his arms very affectionately, and addressed in a paternal fashion a few words of advice to the young parents: 'See that you train up the child in the way that he should go, that you surround him with the best influences, and that you give him a good example. If you do so, who knows but that he may become a Christmas Evans or John Elias? What is his name?' 'Jane, sir,' replied the mother."

Nothing under a thorough change will suffice; neither tears nor trouble of mind, neither good desires nor intentions, nor yet the relinquishments of some sins, nor the performance of some good works, will avail anything, but a new "creature," a word that comprehends more in it than words can well express; and perhaps after all that can be said of it, never thoroughly to be understood by what a man hears from others, but by what he must feel within himself.—Robert South.

Some months since a rector in the Established Church visited a Wesleyan chapel during a period of religious excitement. After a little watching he arose and said: "Friends, this is all wrong; this disturbance is unseemly, this excitement uncalled for. When Solomon was building the temple there was sound of neither hammer, nor saw, nor chisel!" The Wesleyan pastor replied: "That's all right, brother, but we are not building; we are just blasting."—Selected.

"A Chip of the Old Block."

That means, as the father is, so is the boy. It might be more truthfully said, "he is the old block himself." The father reproduces himself in his boy. Not more certainly does the subject transmit his image to the plate in the artist's room than does the father make his real impress upon the son. The fathers of to day are preparing the men who shall bless or curse society and the world in the future.

The worst kind of unbelieving i not to believe God.

NASHVILLE NOTES.

—The first person that we met on entering the Methodist Publishing House was Rev. David Morton, our Church Extension Secretary, who had come down from Louisville to attend to some business connected with the Board of Missions. The work of the two Boards—Church Extension and Missions—is very intimately related. The one supplements and helps the other. We are glad to see them working in such harmony. Brother Morton looks hale and hearty as ever. Hard work seems to agree with him. He is planning to attend the sessions of Montana, Columbia and East Columbia Conferences this fall, and hopes to bring Sister Morton along. They will meet with a genuine Western welcome.

—Rev. J. A. Orman, Presiding Elder of Nashville District, is one of the strong men of Tennessee Methodism. He has a warm feeling for the men on the Western border. It was a pleasure to share the hospitality of his home. With eighteen quarterly meetings to hold every three months, a presiding elder is bound to have some capacity for work, if they use him in Tennessee as in Montana.

—A visit to the home of Dr. Leftwich, in Nashville, revived pleasant memories of a former visit and a delightful service at Tulip street eight years ago. The Dr. has many warm friends in the West. We were pleased to meet Mrs. L. B. Noland, who was home on a visit from Missouri, where her husband is engaged in itinerant work.

—It did us good to shake the hand of the assistant editor of the "Nashville Advocate," Rev. E. M. Bounds, D. D. He wields the pen of a ready writer, and his timely editorials are doing much to elevate the standard and mould the type of spiritual life and character in our great church.

—The burden of publishing house perplexities seems to rest lightly upon the broad shoulders of the book agent. Dr. Barbee is the type of good health and the soul of good humor. He inquired particularly about the church at Deer Lodge and Stevensville, and asked concerning the welfare of many friends, both preachers and laymen in Montana.

—How we were delighted to meet with Rev. W. T. Haggard, in Nashville. As he put his arms around us he exclaimed: "I want to hug you and with you the great Northwest." His heart is in the work there, and he has a warm place in the hearts of his brethren of the East Columbia Conference. He is now at Lebanon, Tenn.

—Rev. W. A. Freeman, who was once an active worker in Colorado, but whose health failed there, was one of the first to greet us at Nashville, and to renew his subscription to the METHODIST. He was accompanied by his wife. Both their hearts beat in sympathy with our Western work. Their postoffice is at Paris, Tenn. It is interesting to observe the strong hold the West has upon the affections of most men who have ever been there.

—We were entertained in the shopitable home of Bro. J. S. White, a steward of Elm Street Church, and a substantial and well-to-do wholesale merchant. He has one of the finest locations for a home in the city. It was a privilege to enjoy the society of that household where the Lord is honored and worshiped. We can never forget those dear children, and trust that they may not only acquire the accomplishments that will fit them for life, but also for the society of angels in the life to come.

—We were made welcome again in the elegant home of our friends, Mr. Nat Baxter, Jr. and family, whose hospitality was so richly enjoyed on a former visit to Nashville, and the memory of which will not be effaced very soon.

—Bishop Hargrove has a typical southern home in the suburbs of the city. We regretted that we could not accept the pressing invitation to abide there during our stay in Nashville. The Bishop has the happy faculty of making you feel perfectly at ease in his presence, whether in his home, in his cabinet, his conference, or standing up to preach before him. We count it a pleasure to have been entertained under that roof. Sister H. made particular inquiry about many old friends in Montana.

—What a joy it was, while being conducted through Wesley Hall, at Vanderbilt University, by our dear friend, Dr. Coke Smith, to meet with Mrs. Conwell and Miss Florence Conwell, the former the daughter, the latter the grand-daughter of Bishop Soule. Miss Jennie Conwell, another grand-daughter, we met in the mission rooms. Our gratification did not decrease (to put it very mildly) when we learned that they read the MONTANA METHODIST with interest. The lives of these noble, cultured women like that of their illustrious sire, are given to the service of the church, and meeting with them is indeed an inspiration.

—The bodies of Bishop McTeyire and wife, and of Bishops McKendree and Soule, are entombed in a little square on the Vanderbilt campus. On a plain substantial stone that stands in the center of the enclosure and is some three or four feet high are the inscriptions. Over Bishop McTeyire's tomb is the simple epitaph, "A leader of men, a lover of children." Over that of his wife, "A silent but golden link that bound this university to Methodism." Near the head of McKendree's grave is the following: William McKendree, Born July 6th, 1757, Ordained Bishop May 18th, 1808, Died March 5th, 1835." Near the head of Bishop Soule's tomb: "Joshua Soule, Born August 1, 1781, Ordained Bishop May 28th, 1824, Died March 6th, 1867." Dr. Summers was buried here, but his body was afterward removed by his son to the cemetery to rest by the side of his wife. We could not keep the tears back as we stood, or knelt, in such a presence. We were taught from childhood to reverence the name of Soule McKendree, whose biography we read when but a boy, was our model pioneer preacher and bishop until the time of Marvin, upon whom his mantle seemed to have fallen. While McTeyire was our friend and always took a kindly interest in us and our work in the far West from the time we first met him at the organization of the Western Conference in 1870, until the Lord called him to his reward on high. We love to linger where reposes dust so sacred. Our faith is made stronger, our heart purer and warmer, and we gather fresh inspiration for the work before us.

—The Nashville College for young ladies is fast becoming one of the most popular educational institutions of the South. It has a patronage of 260 day pupils and 162 boarding pupils from fifteen different States. Among them is our dear little friend, Marie Barret, and her sister Annie, of Montana. We would like to speak more fully of a musical entertainment that we attended there, also a missionary meeting where a young lady presided, and others made motions, seconded them, discussed questions, introduced resolutions, voted upon them, and welcomed visitors, etc., with a grace and elegance of manner that was most refreshing. Dr. Price has rare gifts as an educator. We could but wonder, while there, if our own little Rachel would ever enjoy such rare advantages as those possessed by the girls and young ladies of that institution. The missionary society of the college has furnished six or seven missionaries for the home and foreign fields. Who can comprehend the extent of the influence of cultured and consecrated womanhood upon our land?

—Nashville is quite an educational center, and the presence of professors and pupils, representing the best families of the land, in the churches, Sunday-schools, at entertainments, and in the homes of the people, must have a wholesome influence upon the social life of her people. What a blessing when all this is leavened with the spirit and teaching of the Master.

—The grounds about the Vanderbilt are just delightful. We suppose it takes hard work to solve problems and master the arts there, as elsewhere, but surely the boy who cannot get an education in the midst of such environments as nature, grace and art have furnished him there is a hopeless case. We learn that something over 700 students have matriculated there. The writer was honored with an invitation by the noble chancellor, Dr. Garland, to conduct the devotional exercises in the chapel one morning, and also by the professors to "talk to the boys." This institution is exerting a wide influence throughout our land.

—We visited our young friend, Brother Adams Morris, who lost his eyes by an explosion at Boulder, Montana, several years ago while we were holding a protracted meeting there. He is at the Tennessee School for the Blind, located at Nashville. Though not in the best of health, and feeling a little "blue" the day we were there, yet we were glad to learn that he is making good progress in his studies. The president of the school, L. A. Link, is a local preacher. There are about 80 pupils under his charge. We could but drop a tear or two as we entered the building. But a few moments later as the words of the grand old hymn, "Joy to the world, the Lord is come," sung by a chorus of fifty voices, engaged in the morning chapel exercises, came ringing down the corridors and echoing through the halls in such melodious strains as we had not heard for many a day, we began to feel that we needed the sympathy rather than the inmates of that school. They knew things that we were ignorant of. The pupils sang several pieces for us. We hesitate not to say that it was about the best music we have ever heard. The professor of music is totally blind. But what a grand work he is able to accomplish. This is a grand institution. Our heart was deeply stirred as we first listened, and then spoke a few words to the students. We could but breathe an earnest prayer for the president, the professors and teachers and all the pupils.

DEAR BROTHER :

A cablegram received by Dr. Walter R. Lambuth, yesterday, reads as follows: "Father dead. Dying message. I fell at my post. Send more men." Cablegram dated Kobi, Japan, April 28th, 8:30 a. m.

Yours Truly,

I. G. JOHN.

The above sad note explains itself to a sorrowing church.—EDITOR.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

From our regular correspondent.

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 3, 1892.

ARBITRATION of the Bering Sea matter will be against easy going Uncle Sam. Arbitrators appointed by European governments under the shadow of England's power and influence will lean to the English view of the case. And how about future disputes sure to arise from time to time? Is the American eagle to be played with by cat-like diplomacy, pushed with this paw and then with that? Are our rights to be questioned, evaded and our government postponed and snubbed until European arbitrators are called in to give a practically pre-determined and hostile verdict?

GUNS, DIPLOMACY AND ARBITRATION. The main difficulty is that Great Britains diplomatic demands are backed by half a thousand floating war batteries and by a ring of forts and defended harbors extending from Vancouver in the northwest round to the Gulf of Mexico in the south. She could capture and destroy Washington and every coast city, not excepting those on the lakes, before this country could move. In every diplomatic demand she practically says "Hands Up." Peace is good, but a rich, careless, defenseless nation does not promote peace. It is the duty of express companies and railroad corporations to make train robbing practically impossible and it is Uncle Sam's duty to render national aggressions in this part of the world a dangerous Business.

THE GIVING OF SIX MONTHS notice to Great Britain to end the agreement not to build war vessels on the lakes will also be recommended. This stipulation is unequal in its effect and practically binds the United States only.

TWO NEW MILITARY stations are to be established near the Canadian border, one in northern New York or Vermont and the other in the far northwest.

THE SHIP-LOADS OF FOOD given to the starving Russians are a national defense, though given without that intent. When during the late war Europe was ready to profit by our dissensions a Russian fleet quietly anchoring in our waters silently said "Hands Off." In future emergencies we may possibly need a friend in the east. At all events these great popular international charities indicate the rising tide of civilization and universal good will and are a rebuke to greed and oppression. And no nation needs the lesson more than does Russia our silent ally.

THE CHINESE must go, driven out by new law which requires every laborer to prove by a white witness that he was lawfully in the United States in 1882, that being the date of the exclusion act. This witness must be produced by the Chinaman in the district where he now is. A Chinaman in an eastern state who came to San Fransisco over ten years ago must produce before the collector of internal revenue in the eastern district where he may reside the white San Franciscan who will swear that he was legally a resident in this country over ten years ago. The law will practically force all Chinese laborers to leave the country. Whether or not China will drive out of her territory American missionaries, merchants, clerks and others is a serious question for them and for this country.

SILVER BILL. Representative Pierce, of Tennessee, and other friends of silver legislation have been quietly circulating a petition to the rules committee for an anti-filibustering rule whereby a vote on the silver bill can be had. They have secured nearly enough names to meet Speaker Crisp's requirement and there is a fluttering among the timid. It is possible that the bill will be passed by the house, as it certainly would be if put to vote.

HAWAII TERRITORY would be something new and is quite possible if Congress favors it. A quiet canvass is said to be in progress to ascertain what congressmen think about it. Hawaii would be a nice outpost for Uncle Sam—his sole resting place in mid-ocean. England will practically take possession of the Island if we do not.

SWIFT SHIPS. The proposition made in Congress to register the twenty one knot ships City of Paris and City of New York upon condition that a like speedy steamer shall be built in this country for every one so admitted to registry creates a sensation in England. The rules of that country watch every move around the world that threatens her primacy of the seas and no nation's naval growth is more closely watch than ours.

WILL HARRISON be nominated on the first ballot? is a question much discussed. Politicians who have other favorites and those who simply oppose Harrison will bring into the field every promising candidate to keep down state delegations instructed for Harrison increased by the scattering votes below a majority. Just now it is urged by some that Sherman can carry New York, and that Harrison cannot.

THE DEMOCRATS are more at sea if possibly than the Republicans. Gorman seems as probable a nominee as any, but nominating conventions are uncertain and apt to be shy of too ardent wooers. As everybody is stimulated to name the candidates in advance, the dark horse business is discounted. Flower and Campbell are one of the latest suggestions.

DAYTON, WASH,, MAY 5TH, '92.

DEAR BRO. STANLEY:—Since I wrote my last letter, I have held a protracted meeting at Winnette School House, seven miles from Dayton. The farmers were very busy and the weather disagreeable, but we had a good meeting. There were several conversions, 5 additions, and the church greatly revived. Rev. J. H. Shelton, our preacher at Dayton, assisted me in the meeting, and rendered us good service. He is an excellent preacher. I hope we may have several more such transfers this year. We are gaining ground all the time. "The Lord of hosts is with us; the God of Jacob is our refuge. O clap your hands, all ye people; shout unto God with the voice of triumph," G. H. GIBBS.

——o——

A Demoralizing Sentiment.

The public sentiment that requires of the church amusements, many of which would be degrading to any respectable family, as auxiliaries to invite its attendance to and secure its patronage of her honest entertainments that she provides to carry on her Lord's business of soul-saving in the earth and which should, therefore, be distinctively religious, is to be deplored. But the disposition on the part of church members to cater to, say nothing about creating or encouraging this sentiment, is more to be regretted by far, as this makes the church worldly and thereby destroys her power to prosecute successfully her divine mission of human redemption. This is doubtless a fine strategitic effort of Satan to render the church a working institution; while spiritually, she is neither cold nor hot but lukewarm, and thus exciting by this abnormal life, expulsion from the system of salvation through our Lord Jesus Christ, which we see will be the condition of the church in its seventh and last epoch. This is one of a great many of the forms of the mystery of iniquity or lawlessness that is stealthily invading the very heart of business, social and moral life of the civilized world, in this age of optimism when everything that moves is called progress. We see and hear much about the decline of revivals and revival power in the church today. And it is almost the universal opinion of those who are engaged in this work that this state of spiritual barrenness in the church is attributible to the fact that the Holy Ghost is not with her in that measure of efficiency that this work requires. And the remedy for this deprivation of spiritual power in the church is sought in fasting and prayer and in a more complete ministerial consecration, all of which is well, indeed, can not be dispensed with. But will all of this and more if possible woo the Holy Spirit when the church is making love to the world by the use of unholy methods to secure its co-operation in carrying on the enterprise of her Lord? Such an expectation on the part of the church is the heighth of folly, because her God "is a jealous God, and will not accept of a lame sacrifice." If therefore, she would be "clothed with her beautiful garments" of salvation and become "more terrible" to sin in all of its forms," than an army with banners, let her come back to God's own plan, that of "laying back in store as the Lord hath prospered" her, and then give it, with that disinterestedness taught in the divine instruction to dispose of her gifts to the Lord, contained in the words: "Let not thy left hand know what the right hand doeth: that thine alms may be in secret; and thy Father which seeth in secret himself shall reward thee openly." And (2) let her faithfully observe her covenant in dedicating her houses of worships purely for God's service, and not as lecture halls for temperance and everything that comes along that claims to be for the social elevation and good of man, that she may claim that promise of God to Solomon: "And the Lord said unto him, I have heard thy prayer and thy supplication, that thou hast made before me; I have hallowed this house, which thou hast built, to put my name there forever; and mine eyes and mine heart shall be there perpetually.' Let the church prove God along these evident lines of her endeavor to save men, and see if he will not open the windows of heaven and pour out to her such a blessing as she shall not be able to contain.

ON TO NASHVILLE.

We left the reader in southern Illinois in the midst of blooming orchards, but where the turbid waters were overflowing their banks and flooding field and garden far and wide. But we got through to St. Louis in safety and on good time to take a hurried stroll through the busy streets of the great city, and secure our ticket ready for departure at 7:30 p. m. The St. Louis Advocate office was closed, and so we missed the refreshing experience of a handshake from its trio of able editors. The loss was made up in some measure by meeting Dr. Werlein, pastor of the old Centenary, on the street on his way to prayer-meeting. He was full of his work, urged us to stop over, attend prayer-meeting and share his hospitality. It was a strong temptation. We longed to join in another service at the great church, associated in our minds with many precious memories of the General Conference two years ago. Finding that we could not go, our brother took time to give us some items of interest connected with his work. We greatly rejoice that there was and is a man in our midst capable of bearing the burden and meeting the responsibilities of such an important charge as that of Centenary. May the highest degree of success crown the arduous and painstaking labor of our pastor there. The Moser Hotel, where we got our supper, is surely one of the most popular resorts in the great city.

There was one carload—and it was crowded—of Baptist preachers and laymen and their families on the train enroute (by the L. & N. road) to Atlanta, to attend the Baptist Convention that was soon to meet there. They were a jolly company. Our route from St. Louis, through southern Illinois and Indiana, crossing the Ohio at Evansville. But we could see nothing in the darkness. The next morning we were in the midst of hills and forests and groves and fields, orchards and gardens of Tennessee, beautiful, grand old Tennessee, the State from whence our ancestors come. We were now made fully conscious of the fact that we were really in the "sunny South." The sunshine was softer, the air was balmier, the foliage of the forest was denser. The fruit trees had dropped their blossoms, and the young apples and peaches were as large as marbles. It was a great change from the wintry climate of North Dakota that we had passed through but forty-eight hours ago.

Nashville is a great and growing city, but a real southern city. There is not the rapid rush and bustle some of our northern towns have, but things appear to be substantial. People are there to stay. Even the horses hitched to our carriage protested against the gentle entreaties of the colored driver to get them to move out of a walk on our way to the Maxwell House, where we stopped. The city numbers 75,000 inhabitants, and is doing quite a manufacturing business, and has many large wholesale establishments. The State Capitol building, the Fisk University building (for colored men), and the Vanderbilt University, with its two immense towers, more ponderous than portly, overlooking the surrounding country, attract the attention of the visitor. Nashville has one of the best electric street car systems in the United States. There is a central depot located near the market square and only two blocks from the Methodist publishing house. Every car belonging to the system passes through this depot on each trip it makes, and five cents will pass you over the entire circuit of any line that you desire to take. The same fare will take you from one extreme portion of the city to the depot and then admit you to another car, which will carry you as far in the opposite direction. It is wonderful to see the speed that is made by these cars and the loads they carry.

There is an open-heartedness, an air of easy elegance and good nature about these people that is refreshing. An utter stranger will often bow to you on the sidewalk, while the well-bred negro will not unfrequently tip his hat to the passer-by. Both white and black ride on the same street cars, and we never saw even a colored woman allowed to stand while a gentleman occupied an adjacent seat. Nashville is quite an educational center. It boasts of two universities, one for white and the other for colored students; a number of the best female colleges in the South; a school for the blind, and a public school system for both white and colored pupils (though in separate schools), of which her people are justly proud. This is a city of churches.

The buildings are large, substantial and apparently well attended. It is a stronghold for Methodism. McKendree is perhaps the leading church in the city. It is centrally located. We went there on Sunday morning. The large auditorium was literally packed, and the people listened with undivided attention to a grand sermon by Bishop Galloway. Dr. S. A. Steel is the pastor. He is youthful looking. He has created no little stir of late by his plain pointed preaching against the sins of "society" people. We attended Sunday-school at Elm street, where Brother Powel is pastor, and Crugen, Superintendent. We sat in the Bible class and listened to a lecture on the lesson by Prof. Baskerville, which was rich in thought and happy in illustration. It was food for the soul. The infant class of the school numbers one hundred and fifty. The singing is led by a chorister and accompanied by a piano and a dozen or more violins and other instruments in the hands of well trained boys who appear to take great pleasure in this part of the exercise. The music is lovely and well rendered, but stirs the heart no more than some that we have heard in our plain churches and little log school houses out West.

It was our privilege to preach at Blakemore chapel on Sunday night. The building is that formerly occupied by the West End congregation. It is now located beyond the Vanderbilt grounds, and in charge of a former student of the university, Rev. J. W. Rowlett, who has had great success in his work. He appears to be consecrated as well as cultivated. Hence many people are added to the Lord.

Nashville is located on the Cumberland river, and is built upon more than seven hills. It is beautiful for situation and said to be very healthful; though the atmosphere, however balmy and fragrant, was not so exhilarating and refreshing as that of Montana. We could not help longing for a mouthful of good, pure, fresh mountain air. The Southern people keep up their reputation for hospitality. It is uneffected, dignified, refined and generous. We were made to feel perfectly at home in every home that we visited, and we were unable to accept all the invitations extended. We shall ever cherish with delight the recollections of our stay at Nashville.

THE BOARD OF MISSIONS.

This body held its annual meeting in the mission rooms, at Nashville, May 6–9. There was a general attendance of the members from every part of the church, including representatives from a number of the foreign mission fields. This is, everything considered, the most important Board in the church. Its particular work is to carry into effect the great commission, to "preach the gospel to every creature." The reports of the secretaries and treasurer were full of interest. The past year had been one of solicitude and effort upon the part of the management at home, and of marked success in the mission fields. God had greatly honored the advance made two years ago, but the church had not honored Him by giving the money necessary to meet the pressing demands. It was painful to hear the urgent calls coming up from every quarter of our home and foreign work without the means with which to answer these calls. Free and full discussion was had upon every question that came up. The claims of the West were faithfully presented and favorably received. More money would have been given if it had been at command. The appropriations were about as last year, excepting perhaps a few items of additional expense in the foreign field caused by failure in health and the return of several missionaries. The collections for foreign missions the past year were $304,744.72, which is an advance over the previous year of $53,618.18. While the Board is now in debt a little over $118,000 borrowed money, yet the appropriations are so much less than they were two years ago, that with the increased collections, it is hoped, the debt will soon be removed, together with the danger of future indebtedness.

The Board adopted the following resolutions:

Resolved, That our secretaries be requested to make personal and public appeal in order to discharge the present obligations of the Board contracted in the extension of our work in the foreign and home fields, and that a week of prayer and self-denial be appointed, and the secretaries be requested to prepare a program for its proper observance.

Resolved, That January 1–8, 1893, be appointed as the week of prayer and self-denial in the interests of missions.

The first resolution was afterward amended by adding the words, "And the amounts raised shall be applied to the liquidation of the debt."

Dr. W. R. Lambuth was detailed by the Board to act as missionary secretary, and thus fill the place made vacant by the death of Dr. Potter. His wife's health is such that he cannot return to Japan for some time.

The next meeting of the Board will be held at Kansas City, Mo., in May, 1893.

An impressive memorial service was held at McKendree church on Sunday afternoon in honor of Rev. J. W. Lambuth, our senior missionary in Japan, who was taken to Heaven in April. Able and beautiful tributes were presented by Bishops Keener and Wilson, Drs. John Reed, Tucker, Andrews, Cunningham and Yoshioka, a Japanese student now at Vanderbilt University, who was converted under his ministry.

The assessments on the western conferences remain about as they were last year. The following are the appropriations, as taken from the treasurer's list after there had been full revision and correction :

APPROPRIATIONS.

Brazil, $30,695; China, $37,458; Japan, $37,771; Central Mexico, $39,124; Mexican Border, $19,557; Northwest Mexico, $16,209; Indian, $19,660; Pacific, $5,100; Los Angelos, $4,800; Columbia and East Columbia, $6,500; Denver, $6,500; Montana, $4,000; Western, $4,000; New Mexico, $5,200; Northwest Texas, $1,000; West Texas, $800; Florida, $2,500; West Virginia, $1,072; German Mission, $3,800; Expense, $16,220. Total, $259,966.

SPECIALS.

The Board made the following special appropriations, which are not considered as real obligations. The Bishops or others in charge of the fields simply have authority to raise the amounts by private solicitation to apply to these fields.

Los Angelos, $3,000; Columbia, $2,500; East Columbia, $1,000; Montana, $2,000; New Mexico, $7,000; Denver, $2,000; Northwest Texas, $1,500; Florida, $500.

MARRIED.

At Clover Hill, Boone county, Ky., May 11, 1892, by Rev. O. F. Duvall, Rev. W. M. Britt, of the Montana Conference, and Miss Melia Hughs, of Cloverdale, Ky. There were about seventy-five guests who witnessed the joyful event and evinced their hearty good wishes for the welfare of the newly married pair by making many handsome presents. The happy couple immediately started for Montana, intending to stop over several days in Missouri on the way. What was the surprise, as well as the joy, of this scribe, upon entering the dining hall in the Union depot on the morning of the 12th inst., on our return from Nashville, to meet our old friend and brother with his handsome and blushing bride sitting at the breakfast table. We had but a few moments to talk, and we improved the time. From the bottom of our heart we wish our friends the highest happiness and the greatest prosperity that is possible. The METHODIST will join hundreds of friends in extending to our new sister a hearty welcome to the itinerancy and to Montana.

GENERAL NEWS.

—It has rained in the Dakotas, Minnesota, Iowa, Kansas, Missouri, Illinois, and some other adjacent States almost incessantly for six weeks. The ground is soaked with water, and the lower lands in all this region have been flooded. On our return from Nashville the Mississippi, Missouri and Kansas rivers were out of their banks and great damage has been done to property in the lowlands. Much stock has been drowned and not a few people. There has not been so much of a rainfall before for forty years or more. At this writing there has been very little corn planted, or ground plowed for it, in Kansas, Missouri or Illinois. We saw thousands of acres where the water in many places was from a foot to three feet deep over the land. There is bound to be quite a shortage in the crops, as a result of the excessive rains.

—The General Conference of the M. E. Church is progressing fairly well with its business. No new Bishops will be elected now, and no colored Bishop will be elected, simply because he is colored, so says the Conference, which means that none will be elected at all during this century by this body.

—The General Assembly of the Northern Presbyterian Church assembled in Portland, Oregon, May 19. This church now numbers over 800,000 communicants, 6,000 ministers, and 1,300 candidates for the ministry. The Southern General Assembly meets on the same day at Hot Springs, Ark. This church numbers 180,000 communicants.

—Says Dr. Palmore, in speaking of the General Conference:

There was a high tide of missionary enthusiasm when Bishops Thoburn and Taylor read the reports of their work in India and Africa. The results of last year's work in India have truly been wonderful. The Church has now over 30,000 members there, including probationers. Bishop Thoburn concluded his thrilling narrative of the Lord's wonderful works in the home of Brahmanism by saying: "It is always well to be prudent, but it is not prudent to try to evade the inevitable, nor wise to be indifferent to the march of the stupendous events of this era of eras in the world's history. We do not know what will happen on the morrow, or during the next year, but we do know that the sun never sets in the morning. A glorious morning has opened its portals on India and the golden beams of the Sun of Righteousness are lighting up regions over which darkness had reigned for more than thirty weary centuries." When he sat down the vast audience like the sound of many waters broke out spontaneously into the song:

"The morning light is breaking."

—English is gradually becoming a universal language. It is spoken today by 113,000 people in the uncivilized regions of Africa, as well as in India and Japan. No other European language is taught.

"The Montana Methodist"

IS A

Wide-awake, religious family paper, containing eight pages, with large, clear type, and published semi-monthly, on the 15th and 30th of each month, excepting those dates come on Sunday.

Rev. E. J. STANLEY, Editor and Business Manager.

The paper has an able corps of contributors scattered throughout Montana, Idaho, Washington and Oregon, and will contain occasional letters from California, Colorado, New Mexico, Kansas, Missouri, Kentucky, and other states, East, West and South.

The Sketches of Pioneer Life,

BY REV. L. B. STATELER.

extending, as they do, through a period of sixty years of active life in the ministry on the Western border, extending from Kentucky to the Columbia river, will be worth more than the price of the paper.

THIS PAPER WILL CONTAIN SOMETHING FOR EVERYBODY, and contribute, in the fullest measure possible, to the extension of the Redeemer's kingdom, especially throughout this great and growing West and Northwest.

Our subscription-list shows a circulation extending from Massachusetts to California and Oregon, and from Canada to Mexico. It is rapidly increasing.

The subscription is only ONE DOLLAR a year, in advance.

We invite our friends, one and all, to join in the canvass and help double our list.

Condensed Correspondence.

—Brother Squires from Butte reports a good time on all sides. One party waiting for matrimony on his doorsteps when he arrived home, and others that have called on him since. He is getting to be the champion "knot-tier" of Montana. Two additions and two baptisms. Pleasant sociable.

—Bro. Adkins, from Weston, Oregon, reports a new spire on church and aisles completed.

—Bro. H. B. Tury, Bishop of Idaho, in a private letter to the editor, gives a rap to the Presiding Elders for their remissness in furnishing notes for the METHODIST, reports eleven new members and two infant baptisms, an exhorter licensed, two farewell sermons, and a comtemplated trip to Kentucky, Tennessee and Virginia.

—Bro. Parnall is still feeble, but as brim full of energy in the good cause as ever.

—Bro. Flowers had one addition at Canyon Creek, Sunday.

—Three additions reported from Corvallis last week.

—Bro. D. L. Saunders, New Bridge, Oregon, expects to commence a new church soon.

—W. O. Waggener has taken a regular appointment at Hamilton.

—The editor of this paper and his family have received, an invitation to the marriage of Rev. W. M. Britt and Miss Melia Hughes, Clover Hill, Kentucky. The blessings of God are asked upon the happy pair and their work.

A Move in the Right Direction.

The District Conference, held in California, up to date, passed strong resolutions approving Bishop Haygood's brilliant movement of men from the North Georgia Conference to this coast, and urgently ask the college of Bishops to authorize similar movements in other of the older conferences. Bishop Haygood's experiment has proved abundantly already its wisdom.—"Pacific Methodist Advocate."

Such resolutions from the California District Conference were eminently proper, as an expression of their approval of this striking departure, in quantity at least, in supplying the West with men and money, from former success along the line of chief pastoral work. A resolution was offered before the Helena District Conference for the same purpose, but was voted down because it was thought that its passage would create an invidious distinction in our college of esteemed Bishops. But such was far from being its object. We certainly may express our heartiest approbation of the success of any one of our Bishops in supplying the West with men and money without creating an unpleasant distinction between them. There are "men of like passion with us," and engaged with us in the same great work, and we see no reason why they, like us, may not be provoked to emulation by advances along our respective lines of work. We fondly hope that "the end" of this brilliant achievement by Bishop Haygood, of a broad purpose to supply the pressing needs for men and money in the West, "is not yet." B. S. CLARK.

RULO, NEB., May 4, 1892.

REV. E. J. STANLEY,

Dear Brother:—Please find enclosed one dollar to pay this year's subscription for the MONTANA METHODIST. I believe my circuit includes a part of your first work. I suppose you remember Klipple School house and the brethren near there, especially Father Zimmerman. He has gone hence, to a brighter world, but his two sons are following in his footsteps. Our people around Troy have united, and the best built and nicest church in Troy is the outcome. Although they did not open their subscription lists till about the 1st of October last, yet in that time money has been raised and the church built; $1,200 was raised by subscription, $300 came from our C. E. Board and $695 was pledged on last Sunday when Bro. Palmore, of the "St. Louis Advocate," dedicated it for us. The cost was $2,100, so we came out with $95 more than we asked for. In the afternoon four candidates were baptized and received into the church, and I pray that God may give us many more such scenes inside those sacred walls. I read with great interest of the work as it is in Montana, and sympathize deeply with all of God's servants, who are so nobly battling for God. Although but a mere pledging in God's service, yet I can in spirit bid you every one "All Hail," and join my feeble strength to yours in pushing on the cause of Christ as he may guide and direct.

Truly Yours in Christ,

J. L. SELLS.

WHEN THE LARGE CATHEDRAL that adorns Brisbane was in course of construction, the collector for the building fund called upon a well-known mercantile firm for a subscription, but he was politely told that he should go to the rich people, who might be in a better position "to help the work along." "Go to Jimmy Tyson; he has more than any of us." Up to that time, "Jimmy's" name was never seen on any list for more than one pound. "Well," said the collector, "as Tyson is a rich man, I will go to him for a donation." "Do," said the head of the firm, "and whatever he gives you, we wil guarantee you the same amount.' The collector, a few days later, meeting Mr. Tyson, related to him what had taken place, and concluded by saying: "So, Mr. Tyson, I do not know what amount the firm is going to give until I have your name on my list." "Well," said Mr. Tyson, in gruff voice, "give me y'r pen and ink, and I'll give yees a bob or two." "Jimmy" wrote out a cheque for five thousand pounds, and gave it to the astonished collector.

Temperance.

Chicago has 6,100 licensed saloons.

A temperance society was started in Harvard college.

The consumption of beer in this country last year was 900, 000, 000 gallons.

An English paper reports the number of women murdered by inebriated husbands in two years to be 3,004.

Carroll D. Wright, the most trustworthy statistician, says, that for every dollar paid in by the saloons for their licenses, about twenty-one dollars are paid out by the people.

The New York Evening Post is of the opinion that "the money loss caused by drunkenness is one of the strongest forces that are now working in behalf of temperance."

The society for the abolition of strong drink in Holland certifies that in a population of 3, 500, 000 there are 35,000 licenses for the sale of liquor annually granted. Computing two-thirds of the population to be women and children, there is a saloon to every 33 men.

General Booth, of the Salvation Army, says that nine-tenths of the evils that he has to fight against in the social department of his work are caused by drink.

The Wesleyan Methodists are circulating a petition, which is to be represented to the British Government, protesting against the growth and sale of opium in India.

The United Kingdom Band of Hope Union has inaugurated what i termed "the Million More Scheme," being an effort to enroll in the temperance ranks all those Sunday School teachers and scholars who were not already pledged. The returns for sixty-six schools are now tabulated. Out of 918 teachers, 704 were abstainers; and out of 7,573 scholars over seven years of age 5,137 were abstainers.

A woman who made her thirty-ninth appearance before the magistrates of Sheffield, England, asked them if they objected to people getting drunk why they issued high licenses for the sale of intoxicants.

In his Scottish evangelistic tour Mr. Moody is unsparing in his denunciation of the whisky-drinking habits of the Scotch people and expresses himself as exceedingly shocked at seeing people making light of young men getting drunk.

Cardinal Manning was faithful to the last to his total abstinence principles. His horror of alcoholic drinks was so great that his physicians were compelled to find pharmacopœial substitutes when they considered it necessary to adopt a stimulant treatment.

DR. DAWSON BURNS furnishes his statistics of the National Drink Bill to The Times, showing that the sum expended in intoxicants throughout the United Kingdom in 1891 was £141,220,675, an increase of £1,725,-205 compared with the total for 1890. This gives an outlay of £3 15s. for each man woman, and child.

THE SIN OF OMISSION.

It isn't the thing you do, dear,
It's the thing you leave undone,
Which gives you a bit of a heart-ache
At the setting of the sun.
The tender word forgotten,
The letter you did not write,
The flower you might have sent, dear,
Are your haunting ghosts to-night.

The stone you might have lifted
Out of a brother's way,
The bit of heartsome council
You were hurried too much to say,
The loving touch of the hand, dear,
The gentle and winsome tone
That you had no time nor thought for
With troubles enough of your own.

These little acts of kindness,
So easily out of mind,
These chances to be angels
Which even mortals find—
They come in night and silence,
Each chill, reproachful wraith,
When hope is faint and flagging,
And a blight has dropped on faith.

For life is all too short, dear,
And sorrow is all too great,
To suffer our slow compassion
That tarries until too late.
And it's not the thing you do, dear,
It's the thing you leave undone,
Which gives you the bitter heart-ache
At the setting of the sun.

Margaret E. Sangster, in "Mail & Express."

Here and There.

We know that our readers will congratulate us upon our good taste and success in securing a "protem" during our absence from home. His service is highly appreciated. We opine that his pungent paragraphs have made such pleasant impressions that there will be a demand for more of the same sort. Perhaps the editor will have occasion to go away again soon.

—o—

We are glad to see our worthy assistant so ready in learning the trials of an editor and so happy in expressing them. We incline to think it would be promotive of general good humor to give each of our correspondents a seat in the editorial sanctum for a fortnight or so during each twelve months. But if only such a short experience, with the knotty cases laid inside for reference to the editor-in-chief, should cause the incumbent to see visions of "the hair on top of his head unaminously adjourning," surely a year's term would bring forth the emphatic exclamation, "the whole head is sick, the whole heart is faint," etc.

—o—

Apropos of the above we append the following from a secular paper which our eye has just fallen. Let our delinquents read and ponder.

An exchange says: An editor died and slowly wended his way downward. The devil saw him and said: "For many years thou hast borne the blame for the errors the printers made in thy paper. Thy paper has failed, alas! For subscriptions were never paid. Thy printers have deviled thee on Saturday eve for wages when thou hadst not a red to thy name. Men have taken thy paper without paying a cent; yea, verily, and cursed thee for not issuing a better. All these things hast thou borne in silence. Thou canst not come in. There will be continual dunning of subscribers (for this place is full of them), and discord will be created in our kingdom. Begone! Heaven is thy home."

—o—

Says the Pacific Methodist Advocate: A curious and amusing incident occurred some days ago when we went with an overland party to the great Tabernacle at Salt Lake. Each member of the party bought while there some bit of Mormon literature, a guide book, or something as a memento of the visit. Afterwards notes were compared as to the articles purchased. A Methodist minister had bought a Mormon Bible; an Episcopalian had secured a collection of pictures; a Presbyterian had brought away a Mormon Confession, and a Campbellite preacher had possessed himself of a discussion on the ordinances of the Saints. Coincidents.

—o—

Bishop Duncan was catechising a mission Sunday-school last fall in Denver, says the "Rocky Mountain Methodist," and answers would some times make the house roar with laughter. He got them along so far as to decide that there were two testaments, and that the first was called the old testament, "what is the other called?" as asked the Bishop. "A young testament," was the ready answer of a little urchin, which convinced the questioner that a Sunday-school was really needed in that place.

—o—

Bishop Fitzgerald has finally concluded, in answer to a pressing invitation from the Methodists of Atlanta, Ga., to take up his residence in that city, the gateway to the South. He has already gone, and was tendered a grand reception by the Mayor, the city authorities and the Methodist people generally. When shall it be our privilege to welcome a Bishop to the northwest—to remain with us? The M. E. Church, (North) sees the importance of such a move, and has declared that a Bishop should reside in Washington.

—o—

It is a joy to the Westerner, who, has been for twenty years on the outposts, to get back to headquarters when the tribes of Isreal gather, and breathes the warm fresh life that abounds where the heart beats. Like Paul when he met the brethren, he thanks God and takes courage. While we were greatly refreshed intellectually, socially and religiously by our recent visit, yet physically we suffered no little. With all its fragrance and balminess the air was to us bereft of its accustomed vitalizing and exhilarating properties, and not until we had re-crossed the "great American desert," or the place where it was once supposed to exist and waked up one morning at Pocatella, with the shining mountains all around us and the crisp morning air filling our lungs completely, that we were restored to our normal condition. We called upon all that was within to praise God, and we did not forget some of his benefits such as a solid place to stand upon once more, an unobstructed view of the starry heavens above us, and plenty of pure fresh water to drink and pure air to inspire us for our work.

—o—

Personal Paragraphs.

It was a great pleasure to us while in Nashville to meet with Dr. E. E. Hoss, editor of the Nashville Christian Advocate, Dr. Bennett of the Arkansas Methodist, and Dr. Kirkland of the Southern Christian Advocate. They are all members of the Board of Missions, are wide awake, aggressive men, and are putting their impress upon the church through the periodicals that they conduct.

—That was a happy mishap that led us unexpectedly into the home of Prof. Gross Alexander and wife, of Vanderbilt University. We found them both deeply interested in our Northwestern work, particularly Mrs. Alexander, who takes an active part in the work of the Parsonage and Home Mission work. We trust that a year's subscription to the METHODIST will not abate, but rather intensify that interest.

—Bishop Duncan made a most felicitious address to the young ladies at Dr. Price's College. It had all the freshness of an extemporaneous talk, abounded with wit, humor, common sense, and exhibited a degree of culture that was captivating. It will not be forgotten by those present.

—Eight years ago, while passing over Chesapeake and Ohio railroad through Virginia, on our way to Baltimore, we formed the acquaintance of a sprightly, sunny-hearted young Methodist preacher who was going, with his wife, as a visitor to the Centennial Conference. It was our privilege recently to renew the acquaintance of this happy pair at Nashville in the persons of Rev. Collins Denny and wife. Our brother now occupies a chair in the Vanderbilt, and is one of the popular preachers of that city.

—We could hardly believe our eyes when the man of small figure and youthful looking face who sat just in front of us at the Nashville College missionary meeting, was Dr. S. A. Steel, pastor of McKendree church. He appeared younger than when we met him at Memphis eight years ago. Anyhow, he is a master of assemblies and by his eloquence carried away the laurels as a fraternal speech-maker before the General Conference of the M. E. Church (North) at New York four years ago.

—At the memorial service in honor of the late Dr. Lambuth, held in McKendree church, after the other speakers had finished, Dr. Andrews related some incidents connected with the early ministerial life of the deceased, showing that the missionary fire burned in his heart and the missionary work to which his life was given commenced at home where he won the hearts of the poor in his own, as well as in a foreign land. He pictured the scene of "Uncle Top," an old negro who had been converted under Brother Lambuth's ministry, with sobs and tears hanging about the neck and bidding a final good-by to the preacher through whose ministry he had been saved. Said the speaker "It was a touching and thrilling scene as the son of Ham pronounced his blessing upon the son of Japheth, who was going forth to bless the sons of Shem."

—We heard nothing but regrets at the prospective departure of Dr. A. Coke Smith, from Nashville. He is a general favorite in all the churches there. His heart is in the pastoral work, and he goes to take charge of Grandby Street Church, Norfolk, Virginia. Our readers will hear from him through these columns ere long.

—In all the eloquent tributes to the memory of Dr. Lambuth paid by gifted and distinguished speakers before that highly cultivated audience at McKendree, not a word was said about the intellectual acumen, or brilliant genius of the deceased, but much was said about his faith in God, his humility, his consecration and devotion to his work and perseverance in it. As in former days, "not many mighty, "not many noble," according to the world's standard, "are called." It is not the great head so much as the great heart that wins with God and man. It is fidelity to principle and to duty. He that is faithful in that which is least shall be counted faithful in that which is greatest—shall be entrusted with the true riches. Thank God, these riches and this inheritance are in the reach of every child of Adam, however poor, or obscure, who will deny himself and take up his cross and follow Christ.

—We are in receipt of the Art catalogue for an exhibition to be given by the Art department of the Nashville College for young ladies It is unique, artistic and taking, and reflects credit upon its originator, and is a success as an advertiser.

—Our missionary secretaries form a trio of workers. Dr. John is doing admirable service in the office, editing the "Reporter" and preparing leaflets containing missionary intelligence to scatter far and wide. He takes great interest in his work. Brother Lambuth, having been raised in a foreign land, surrounded by heathen darkness, and having seen much active service in the field, is enabled by his very presence to enthuse the people with the missionary spirit, which we are happy to know he possesses in such full measure While Dr. Morrison, with his fine portly form, his splendid voice, his burning zeal, and his eloquence, arrests attention and stirs the hearts of the people to greater liberality. We are glad to believe that all of these brethren are feeling more than before the importance of our department of mission work. We hope that Dr. John will soon have one or more pamphlets on our Western missions ready for distribution. It is expected that Dr. Morrison will visit our Conference this fall. Surely our people will be delighted to see and hear him.

Like Christ.

He who would be most like Christ must pay the cost. If a furnace is needed to purify and brighten you. do not shirk the furnace. Patience is an admirable grace; but it is not oftenest worn by those who walk on the sunny side of the street in silver slippers. It is usually the products of head winds and hard fights; of crosses carried and of steep hills climbed on the road to heaven. "The trial of your faith worketh patience." So it is with all the noblest traits of a robust, healthy and symmetrical character. No man is rocked into godliness in a hammock. Christ offers you no free ride to heaven in a cushioned parlor car. John Bunyan sent his sturdy "Pilgrim" to the "celestial city" on foot, and some pretty rough walking and hard conflicts did he encounter before the pearly portals welcomed him to the streets of flashing gold. His piety was self-denying, stalwart and uncompromising; he relished even the stiff severities of duty, and was never coddled with confectioneries. Self-indulgence is the besetting sin of the times; but if you long to be a strong, athletic Christian, you must count the cost. It will cost you the cutting up of old favorite sins by the roots, and the cutting loose from entangling alliances, and some sharp set-tos with the temper; it will cost you the submitting of your will to the will of Christ.—T. L. Cuyler.

—o—

On our return trip we were kept a day at St. Joseph by the floods of deep waters demoralizing the schedule of the trains, and took advantage of the delay by visiting some old friends, among whom were Rev. C. I. Vandeventer and wife. Brother Van was just rallying from a severe tussle with the grippe. We enjoyed the hearty welcome and the few words of pleasant greeting, and had to hurry on, thanking God more and more for the pleasure of Christian fellowship as we sojourn here below, where we have no continuing city, but are seeking one to come, a city which hath foundations, whose builder and maker is God.

Our visit to the old home at Circleville was somewhat unsatisfactory because of the incessent rain, the deep mud, and the short time at our disposal, which forbade the meeting with a sister, a brother, an aged uncle and aunt and other loved ones whom we desired to greet once more before they go hence. A delayed train also deprived us of a visit to the General Conference at Omaha, which was in the programme that we had made out. Our train was ten minutes late into Grand Island, causing a delay at that place of just twenty six hours, after one of twenty-four hours at Seneca. But after all, we were thankful to escape so well and to get home again.

We acknowledge the receipt of an invitation to the marriage of Rev. W. T. Goulder and Miss Laura K. Dawes at the M. E. Church, South, in Bozeman, June 1, 1892. We congratulate both upon the happy event. Brother Goulder is well known to our readers as one of our earnest and active young preachers. Miss Laura we have known since she was a small girl. She is a true, noble Christian woman, eminently fitted for the work before her, and we welcome her to the itinerant ranks. That completes the list. There is not another bachelor in our itinerant host, until more are imported. We hope the Bishop will send some more soon.

—o—

A correspondent of one of our exchanges recently expressed the hope that Brother Britt and his brethren would not attempt the erection of another church at Whitehall. We suggest in all kindness that if similar advice had been given by this correspondent to the ministers and members of his own church, and had been heeded by them, in several cases that we might mention, much unhappy conflict might have been avoided, the cause of fraternity promoted, and there would now be no need of volunteering public counsel to the pastor and official members of a sister denomination.

Church News.

Missoula District Conference.

The Missoula District Conference was held in Corvallis, Montana, the business session commencing on Friday the 17th of June, 1892 and closing on Saturday following. Rev. W.C Waggener preached the opening sermon on Wednesday evening. The subject was the beauty, purity and power of the Church, showing its final triumph. It was a masterly effort, and listened to with rapt attention from beginning to end. All the traveling preachers were present except E. L Lee, of Demersville, who could not come on account of the distance and great expense of the trip. Owing to the busy season with the farmers who were either just completing the work of putting in their crops or beginning to irrigate, there was not a large attendance of laymen.

We cannot give the items contained in the reports of the preachers, as the minutes are not on hand, but the reports showed that substantial progress had been made in Stevensville, Corvallis, and Grantsdale charges. There had been about fifty accessions to the church. While not a few who had united with other churches had been awakened at the revival meetings held by our brethren. One church had been dedicated and another completed and made ready for dedication since the Annual Conference. The erection of still another is in contemplatation. Decided progress had been made in Sunday-school work.

J.B. Parnall read a paper on the essentials of successful Christian work in the West, and W. C. Waggener one on parental obligation in the religious instruction of children. We hope to furnish our readers with both these excellent papers at no distant day. The writer had something to say on "the best methods of securing a better attendance on religious worship."

The Conference was gratified at the presence of Rev. A. C. Couey, the presiding elder, and Brother J. W. Kemper, a prominent laymen of the Helena District, who were invited to take part in its discussions.

The religious services were well attended, though the inclement weather kept many away on Sunday morning. Brothers Waggener, Couey and Flowers did the preaching. Brother Couey's sermon on Sunday morning on faith as illustrated in the life and character of Abraham, made a fine impression. All regretted that he was unable to preach to the large audience at night. He is not accustomed to seeing such large assemblies of people as flock to the worship of God at Corvallis. They inspire him, and others too. Brother Parnall discharged the duties of Secretary with his usual efficiency, but felt unable to preach. Upon the whole, the religious services and all the exercises of the Conference were pleasant and refreshing. They were good for the use of edifying. The next District Conference will be held at Stevensville.

H. B. Bell, E. P. Woods, A. Collet and—Sipple were chosen lay delegates to the Annual Conference, and J. C. Gardiner and R. S. Fowler alternates.

Resolutions.

THE FOLLOWING WERE ADOPTED:

BISHOP HAYGOOD AND THE NORTHWEST.

Resolved, That as a District Conference we desire to put on record our appreciation of Bishop Haygood's magnificent movement of men from Georgia to California, and thank God for the success already attained by that movement.

2nd. We would respectfully request our Bishop, or any one or more of them, to make, if possible, a similar move in the effort to supply the great Northwest with needed men.

PUBLISHING INTERESTS.

Resolved 1st. We recommend to our people the Nashville Christian Advocate and the Pacific Methodist Advocate as our General Conference organs, and believe that one or both of them should be in the homes of all our people

2nd. We urge increased interest in the support of our Conference paper, the MONTANA METHODIST and also express our high appreciation of the labors and efforts of the editor in its behalf

SUNDAY SCHOOLS.

1st. We are gratified at the increased interest in our Sunday-schools in the District, especially in the line of our own schools, noting with peculiar pleasure the success of our school at Stevensville, and we urge upon all our people the importance of organizing and attending Methodist Sunday-schools.

2nd. We heartily commend our Sunday-school literature to our people and insist upon its use.

INTEMPERANCE, GAMBLING AND SABBATH DESECRATION.

1st. In the widespread evils of Intemperance, Gambling and Sabbath Desecration we recognize three of the most serious hindrances to the progress of the kingdom of God, with which we have to contend in this country, especially in the North west. We hereby pledge ourselves to continued and renewed efforts in waging an unceasing warfare against these gigantic sins of society

2nd. We place ourselves on record as being apposed to the opening of the Columbian exhibition on the Sabbath, and also to the sale of intoxicating liquors on the ground.

THANKS.

Thanks were tendered to the pastor and friends of our church at Corvallis for the genuine hospitality extended to them, and also to the trustees of the Presbyterian church for the use of their capacious church building.

——o——

From Deer Lodge.

A. C. COUEY.

The little city of Deer Lodge, where we have the only Methodist church, a parsonage for the Station preacher and the District Parsonage for the Presiding Elder of the Helena District, is a place of fifteen hundred inhabitants, made up of as good a class of citizens as there is in the West. Of late our town has been showing evidences of enterprise and thrift, out-stripping any former period of the history. The grading of streets, putting down sidewalks, the introduction of electric lights on our main business and resident streets, the building of a number of handsome residents all go to prove that our people are generally well to do. The leading business men, who say they know something of what they declare, tell us that we stand a very fair chance to secure the permanent Capital of the State. It goes without saying, that for situation, for beautiful shade trees and grassy lawns, and fragrant flower gardens, for inviting valley and grand mountain scenery, the city of Deer-Lodge has not an equal in Montana. It is also a fact that Deer-Lodge is the population centre of the state. It is only fifty minutes ride to Butte, the metropolis and thrifty monetary city of 30,000, and from Helena, the temporary Capital, with a population of about 15,000, about two hours ride. If what is known as the West Side will hold together in the vote this fall, I consider the probabilities for Deer Lodge being the future capital quite sure. It is also quite beyond question that for schools, Deer-Lodge has very superior advantages. Her public schools are very fine. She has the best college, in fact, I suppose, the only thoroughly equipped college in the state. This is written, not overlooking the University of Montana, run by the M. E Church, situated near Helena. That, however, is very young and not yet run in full blast. In that part of the city, where we were given grounds for the district parsonage one year ago, in what is known as the Larabee Addition, buildings have gone up very rapidly. It is now considered the most desirable part of our town for residences. Our property has greatly enhanced since we built, so that we have every reason for self-gratulation in the selection for a home for the Presiding Elders of the future, as well as for the present incumbent. I was at home last Sabbath and greatly enjoyed "Children's Day" as observed by our people here. The pastor arranged for short addresses by himself and two lay brethren in the morning, and at night a service conducted by the Superintendent, his teachers and scholars Quite a while before the hour for commencing, every seat was taken—more were improvised, all these were taken; after that the standing room at the entrance was taken, and after all, numbers were turned away to other churches, for want of room. This, Mr. Editor, is an index to the prosperity of our cause in Deer Lodge. The recitations, songs, etc., of the evening were a decided success. The pastor, Superintendent, teachers and parents all returned home, gratified, and assured that Children's Day had been profitably and very pleasantly spent. Another year, should the interest continue, the City Hall will be required to accommodate the people on such an occasion. I began the 4th quarterly around here next Sabbath, May 22nk.

During my recent stay at home, we have been busy in putting out shade trees, shrubbery, etc, in the District Parsonage yard. One sows, another reaps. We enjoy both, for there is beyond all this, the harvest time.

In our home yesterday, May 17th, we celebrated the ninth anniversary of our wedding day. Besides father and mother, there sits now at our table three ruddy, happy children, Mary Ready, Charles Joseph and Jural Mimms—aged respectively seven, five and two and one half years. God has greatly blessed us in health, and in all else needed to make us happy. We try never to "Forget all his benefits."

——o——

GENERAL NEWS.

The low price of cotton has resulted in a material decrease in the acreage of this staple in the South, where there is a determined effort to produce home supplies. The potato crop will fall far short of what it was last year. The condition of winter wheat is reported as much improved during the last month. But there is bound to be a great shortage in crops, especially throughout the Flooded districts.

—Under the tariff act of October 1, 1890 reciprocity treaties have been negotiated during the present year with Salvador, Germany, Nicaragua, and Honduras, by which certain articles are admitted into these countries from ours, free of tariff and vice versa.

—There have recently been heavy storms and cyclones in Kansas, and Wellington, in which a number of persons were killed and much property destroyed.

—Some time ago there was a cave in in the Anaconda mine at Butte, in which there were nine or more lives lost.

—There is still trouble between the mine owners and the Miner's Union in the Coeurd'Alene country. It is operating materially against the development of that region. We sincerely hope that an agreement will be reached at an early day.

—Col. C. A. Broadwater, of Helena, died at that place May 24th, of Bright's disease. He was a native of St. Charles county, Mo. He came to Montana at an early day, was successful in his business enterprises and had become one of the leading spirits in business and political circles in Montana. The work in which he took greatest pride was the erection of the Hotel Broadwater and the natatorium at the hot springs near Helena. He was a devoted friend and ardent admirer of Bishop Marvin, and on the occasion of the Bishop's first visit to the Territory, in 1872, the Col. placed his best team of bays together with his buggy at his (the Bishop's) disposal, free of charge while he should remain in Montana. This scribe had the satisfaction of enjoying this luxury for several days in company with the Bishop at the Colonel's expense. He was president of the Montana Central Railroad, was not a professor of religion, but a plain, unassuming, positive man of the world, with a kind heart and hosts of friends who will deeply deplore their loss.

—A week of hot, dry weather, during the latter part of May, melted the snow, boomed the rivers and threatened a flood, but a fall in the temperature locked the reservoirs for a time and dissipated danger for the present. The only special apprehension for the people of Bitter Root Valley was for the safety of the large mill dam near Hamilton. It is all right yet, and the saw mill is running night and day. Crops are backward and thus far the prospect is not the brightest for a good season.

—In a private note Rev. R. S. Clark remarks that the District Conference, recently at Boulder, was one of the best ever held in Montana He has been unwell for a time since it adjourned; but has had eight additions to the church in the meantime. No wonder he feels like praising the Lord. Who would not when God's cause is progressing in such a way? Boulder is the place where we began our itinerant work and made our first effort at preaching in Montana. With our own hands, after recovering from a spell of the "mountain fever" that came near proving fatal, we dug out the trenches for the foundation of our church there, and handled well nigh every stick of timber that went into the building, and we feel that we have a right to rejoice in the progress of our work there also.

—A letter from Circleville, Kansas, says: "Brother Tillery preaches for us every four weeks. He seems to be about as well thought of by the people as Brother Faubion. He is a good preacher. "The same letter contains the following items that may be of interest to some of our readers. "Times are very dull. No money, is the cry. Corn is from 30 to 35 cents per bushel; wheat 75 cents; oats 30 cents; beef cattle $3 25 to $3.75 per cwt; hogs $3 50 to $4.00. Stock cattle and horses very low. The hardest time I ever saw."

—The "African News," Bishop Taylor's organ, for June, is profusely illustrated and will be filled with articles on mission work and reports fresh from the field. The paper has been enlarged and is becoming a potent factor in the evangelization of the Dark Continent.

Judaism and Christianity.

"Deep in the heart of Judaism is enshrined a sacred, an immortal, word—duty—which makes of man a moral being and links him to the moral source of the universe. Deep in the heart of Christianity is enshrined a sacred and immortal word—love—which makes of man a spiritual being and links him to the divine source of all life. Humanity needs both of these words in order to become the perfect creation it was meant to be. The one gives the conscience, the other the heart of mankind; the one is the masculine, the other the feminine, element of the world. Judaism gives the Ten Commandments and Christianity the Beatitudes. But only the two together can yield the perfect ideal—the love that is simply the highest duty, and duty that is lost in love. And in order to come into this closer, higher union, into the faith which makes humanity whole, and not a thing of parts, and the truth which makes men free fixed and formal codes must disappear; the outer framework of history and theology must fall away, and spirit be left free to seek spirit. Then, and then only, will life have its whole meaning, as part of a larger life whose beginning and end are hidden from mortal vision. Religion will have its full sway, and there will be none who persecute and none who are persecuted, 'for the earth shall be full of the knowledge of the Lord, as the waters cover the sea.'" A glorious dream, if only a dream! Perhaps one of those visions when the people were once without.—"Josephus."

General Conference Notes.

According to the editorial correspondence of the "Independent" there is but little fellowship between even the white and colored ministers of the M. E. Church (North) in the South. There is great indifference among white churches and pastors toward their colored brethren. Frequently the white minister does not know the name of the colored pastor of the same church in the same town. There is not as much mixing of the two races in the same denomination as there was ten or twenty years ago. How is this for the doctrine of social equality that has been paraded before the public so long? It simply proves that the laws of God are wiser, more practical and potent than the devices of men. No colored bishop was elected, though there was a great clamor for one. The colored delegates were boarded at the hotels, and in a large measure kept their own company in the social circle. Even the radical Dr. Parkhurst, of Zion's Herald, administers a telling rebuke to his colored brethren, "wishing that they would not be so anxious to be seen and heard," and declaring that frequently the effort at speech-making by this class of delegates "has been most ludicrous and humiliating."

The M. E. Church, South, did the best thing possible for its colored members by organizing them into a church of their own, so that they now have their own bishops, presiding elders and other officers, and are happy and prosperous. This is the plan for the final solution of the color question religiously.

—Dr. Carman, fraternal delegate from the Canada Methodist church, was heard with great delight upon every occasion. The conference were all invited to visit Canada—"not one or two, but all of you, and bring your territory with you." This was a gentle hint and a happy reference to the question of annexation.

—Rev. J. J. Tigert, D. D., fraternal delegate of the M. E. Church, South, delivered an address which, though ably conceived and presented, was too long to be well received. If cold indifference alone had characterized its reception, the credit of the body would have been saved. But we learn that portions of it were received with hisses and groans, the delegates clapping with their hands to express their dissent from and weariness of it. Such conduct is inexcusable in any cultivated audience. Yet the Conference passed a resolution "fully reciprocating the sentiments of good will brought by the delegate, etc, and looking forward to the time when Methodism in this land shall be one body in Christ Jesus." Unless there shall be more genuine fraternity in spirit and practice, formal fraternity will ere long come to be recognized as a sham. Until there is a different state of things, we fear that the dream of organic union is decidedly Utopian.

—There was a strong sentiment expressed, and a majority report of the committee in favor of the abolition of the time limit of the pastorate. There was also a strong feeling in favor of the modification of the probation system. The rule with reference to dancing and worldly amusements was not altered. The woman question, at last accounts, had been kept out of the arena of debate. The body is said to be a very conservative one.

—The Conference adopted a preamble and resolutions condemning the practice of mob law and lynching, etc, as practiced upon the colored people of the South. That such things occur in the South is not denied. But it is strange that the Conference overlooks the fact that the press of the South is as strong in its denunciations of mob-law as in the North. The people there are so intelligent, as well-bred, as kindly disposed, and it is as much to their interest to prevent injust discriminations, to preserve harmony among all the people, protect virtue and innocence, and promote general prosperity, as elsewhere. Yea, it is far more. It is their home, where they have to live and must have entailed upon them all the evils of all kinds of violence and disorder. These denunciatory productions say nothing about the prevalence of the same practice in their own peculiar section of country, and not one word of condemnation is uttered against the horrible sins—gross outrages upon the virtue of pure women and not unfrequently little innocent, helpless children—that usually provoke these lynchings. As a rule they are no more the expressions of race prejudice than were the defences made by western settlers of their homes and loved ones in the days gone by. Human nature is very much the same the world over. A true man, whether in the North, South, East or West, will protect his home and wife and children at whatever cost. Our opinion is, that there is more real "color blindness" and prejudice in the authors of these abullitions against lawlessness that is confined to one side of a certain line than there is any where else, and that they tend more to foster and pro note the evils they denounce than to destroy them.

—Rev. W. M. Beardshear, the fraternal delegate from the United Brethren in Christ, says the Independent, made one of the most stirring addresses of the session. His speech was crisp, witty, practical and enthusiastic. He dipped into the time limit question and the woman question at a lively rate and won the Conference by his courage and wit. His unique descriptive powers found full play in describing the low lands as he had seen them with a pump in every hollow evidencing the great effort of the landowner to get water for his home or his barn. He said: "coming to this Conference I passed many of these lowlands and found the horse-trough floating in a pond furnishing a platform for a frog hallelujah chorus; while the top of the pump projected from the surrounding waters with its handle at an angle of forty-five degrees lifted to Heaven as if invoking the Doxology "Praise God from whom all blessings flow." When the fun had subsided, he impressively expressed the hope that this condition of things might be but symbolical of the gracious outpouring of the Holy Spirit upon the Conference, the Church and the Nation. The effect was marvelously powerful. The inimitable address might be given in full and secure the most attentive reading from every Christian. His closing epigram was received with applause, spontaneous, bursting forth again and again. He said: "If all the world goes Methodist I say, let her go. It is said there will be no sects in Heaven. We will be neither Methodists, Baptist nor Presbyterians. Whether or not the earth shall go Methodist, one thing is certain; in Heaven we will all be United Brethren in Christ."

Obituary.

William A. Price was born in Virginia, April 28, 1806. In 1816 he moved to Kentucky. From thence he came to Missouri in 1843, and to Oregon in 1884. Brother Price united with the church at an early age and lived a consistent life until April 17, 1892, when he fell asleep in Jesus. Though the battle was long, he had a triumphant victory through our Lord Jesus Christ. There was not a struggle at the last. "Mark the perfect man; behold the upright, for the end of that man is peace."

MARRIED

At the residence of Robert W. Nicol and wife near Hamilton, Montana, June 1, 1892, at 5 o'clock P. M., by Rev. E. J. Stanley, Mr. George A. Robbins and Miss Grace G. Goff. There was a number of guests present and a beautiful supper was served. Mrs. Nicol is a sister of the handsome young bride. We wish our young friends, both of whom we have known since they were little children, a long and happy life, and an abundant entrance into heaven at last.

The Lord bless his children and grand children and lead them to a grand reunion in the kingdom of our God.

IN MEMORIAM.

Sacred to the memory of Little Jennie, daughter of Frank and Lottie Hull. She was born May 26, 1889, and died April 28, 1892.

Rest the sweet babe, rest on,
Asleep on Jesus' breast;
Sleep till the resurrection morn,
Sweet be thy peaceful rest.

"These are my lambs," said Jesus,
"I take them in my arms,
I lead them by still waters,
I shield them from all harm."

These are the Master's jewels,
The objects of His love;
He guides them from this earthly home,
To His bright home above.

Papa and mamma, weep not for little Jennie, but for consolation in your sorrow look to Him who said, "Suffer little children, and forbid them not, to come unto Me, for of such is the Kingdom of Heaven."

[The above was read by Miss May Blackwell in the Epworth Reading Circle at Deer Lodge, Mont., and its publication in the METHODIST was requested by the Circle.—EDITOR.]

WASHINGTON LETTER.

WASHINGTON, D. C.,
May, 24, 1892.

RED TAPE has never been authoritively defined. Washington affords opportunity to study the subject. Red tape is how not to do it. It is the letter that killeth. It is pharisaism in office. It is the tithing of business mint and cumin. It is homage to rules and idolatry of pet methods. It is small criticism and large neglect of weighty matters. It is gagging at trifles and swallowing a loaded camel train. It is official superciliousness insisting on routine against just rights and reasonable claims. It is failure against the patient and skillful cunning of the imposter, but a bar to the poor man with a good cause. It keeps thousands of honest government creditors out of their dues, but is weak against jobs, frauds and log-rolling. It is locution, circumlocution, interlocution, words, words and evermore words and thistles, but no figs nor grapes.

The red tapist spends more time in grinding his scythe than in mowing. His main end is the sharpening of tools and everlasting talk about tweedle-dum-and-dee—, the red-tapist will pardon us, tweedledum and tweedledee, with the accent on the last syllable. The Post Office clerk who refused to mail a letter to N. Y. City because no such post office was on the list, was a red-tapist and so was the man who didn't help a lady at a great fire because he had never been introduced, and the incompetent who kept an applicant waiting for weeks because he omitted the particle "the" from his claim and the over smart official who wouldn't permit a man to spell his name "Jaykob" and stirred up the whole office because another spelled his "jorg."

"THESE FEW REMARKS" have been evoked by various provocations, great and small, such as the locking at midday of one and but one of the numerous entrances to the Interior government building at Washington, but why no man can tell. Perhaps it is a relic of the late war. There is no reason for it, yet red tape daily bars the door, and will continue to do so as long probably as the German sentinel and his successors set to watch a hole in the time of the first Napoleon paced until finally relieved a few years since. Of the same nature is the rule excluding the public from the halls of government buildings after 2 o'clock. This in general is a pure piece of official trifling. The only persons excluded are uninitiated people from a distance whose time is limited and who above all other visitors should have free access. The only person benefited by such rule is probably the elevator man.

CORPORAL TANNER'S recent letter in the matter of General Dudley's increased pension exposes a case of red tape. It seems that in 1886 a law was passed increasing the pension of soldiers who had lost a leg at the knee joint, from $30 to $36 per month, and that Gen. Dudley applied for this increase. The application was adversely reported upon by a strict constructionist of the Pension Office, and there was no official medical examination Yet Tanner, who was the Commissioner of Pensions, allowed the claim. But hear Tanner: "I knew absolutely of my own knowledge, through my own eyesight that General Dudley's leg was amputated so near the knee that he had always worn an artificial leg with an artificial knee joint. * * * A medical examination by all the doctors in Christendom would not have changed my opinion regarding the condition of that stump. I know an amputated leg when I see one. I have had occasion to look at a pair of them since August 30, 1862, every day of my life. I know an artificial leg when I see one, and when I see a man with a leg amputated so near the knee joint that he has to wear an artificial leg with an artificial knee joint, I know it absolutely, and I know that of necessity that leg is amputated at or near the knee joint. Surprising as it may seem to the chief of division who states that he reported against the claim being allowed, I never saw his report. The fact is I did not go through the papers at all. My knowledge was personal and absolute, and I felt as competent to read the law as the chief of the division. I simple took the bundle of papers and wrote across them. 'Allow this claim at $36 per month from March, 1886.'" Fortunate is the Government bureau that has a chief that understands his business as well as Corporal Tanner knows a knee joint when he sees one. The trouble is these short lived officials usually depend upon red tape subordinates for practical details. Their time is absorbed in grave law questions and in the details of appointments. If by great industry and large capacity they master the business it is about the time they are rotated out of office.

Woman's Parsonage and Home Mission Society.

The annual meeting of the Central Committee as the Constitution requires, was held at the same time and place with the annual meeting of the General Board of Church Extension, in Louisville, Ky., April 13th, 14th, 15th. On the first day the committee met in its office in the house of Mr. Geo. P. Kendrick, whose kindness in providing this office cannot be too highly appreciated. The following members were present: Mrs. Bishop Hargrove, Miss Emily Allen, Mrs. S. S. King, Mrs. Ellen Burdette, Mrs. M. K. Carter and Miss Helm. Applications for aid to parsonages to the amount of $6,250 in donations, and $1,225 in loans were presented by the Secretary. These were carefully and prayerfully considered and fifteen donations granted to the amount of $2,975, and three loans to the amount of $740. Besides these, three donations were granted on condition special donations be raised for those places. The places to which grants were made are scattered over fourteen States and Territories, and are both needy and important. As the Constitution requires, these appropriations were formally reported to Board of Church Extension for approval or disapproval. They were, without hesitation, approved, and the work of the society during the year was highly commended by the Board. That a larger number of persons might be able to attend the meetings, they were held on April 14th and 15th, in Chestnut Street Methodist Church, and were rendered very interesting by talks on general home mission work, in which active workers in other denominations joined. It was decided to call a convention of the home mission workers of the M. E. Church, South, for general consultation. The exact time and place, with other details, were left to a committee. The subject of the evangelization of the mountains of Kentucky and West Virginia attracted much attention, and the committee determined, with God's help, during the coming year, to endeavor to raise funds for a mission school in those mountains, to be known as the "Sue Bennett Memorial." Miss Sue Bennett, as Secretary of Kentucky Conference, was planning this mission when Our Father called her home. Miss Belle Bennett subscribed $500 to this memorial mission. Other large gifts are expected from those interested in that most needy field. Mrs. Gross Alexander was re-elected editor of "Leaflets." Miss Belle Bennett was elected to fill the vacancy on the committee, left by the death of Miss Sue Bennett. The report of the year, closing March 31, 1892, was encouraging. More auxiliaries were organized than any year previous, and a more decided increase in dues reported. During the year the Central Committee aided 23 parsonages to the amount of $4,675 in donations, and $1,000 in loans—whole amount, $5,675. The conferences aided 32 to the amount of $2,400 and over. The amounts granted by conferences are not always given. The Central Committee and conferences together aided 55 parsonages to the amount of $8,075 and over. Besides these the auxiliaries report $8,192.62 raised as special donations for local work, with which 79 aided their local parsonages, either for pastor or presiding elder. This shows the Parsonage and Home Mission Society through its Central Committee for general work, its conference organizations for conference work, and its auxiliaries for local work, aided during the year 134 parsonages—that is an average of over two parsonages and a half each week. What a relief it would be when the appointments are to be made at the annual conferences if each preacher knew, and the bishop sending him knew, that wherever sent he would find a comfortable home awaiting him. Under the stimulus of this connectional organization this happy dream of the past bids fair to be a reality in the near future.

The General Treasurer received during the year in dues, $2,011.48; the Conference Treasurer retained $2,011.48; whole amount of dues, $4,022.96. The General Treasurer received in special donations, $1,500.03; in loan's fund, $216. Conference Treasurers received in special donations for conference work, $337,-25, whole amount received by General and Conference Treasurers, $6,076.24. If special donations raised by the auxiliaries for our local work be added, we have the grand total of $14,268.86.

"OUR HOMES."

In January, 1892, the society began to publish a paper under the title of "Our Homes," that was at once received into favor and put upon a paying basis. We are deeply grateful to the many friends who have given our paper not only encouragement, but the highest praise. This paper is intended not only to give needed information of the society's work, but to represent generally the work of our women in the home field; to stimulate them to the highest endeavor for a Christ-like spirit in themselves, and Christ-like labors for the salvation of souls, and to give to our young people reading matter both interesting and of literary value. The price is only 25cts a year, and sample copies will be sent to all who may write for them. We will send it free to anyone sending us twelve subscribers. We most sincerely ask the prayers of all who love the Lord, the Savior of sinners.

ODD CORNER.

"No," said Uncle Pete, "that 'ere Eve didn't hev no temptashun at all only er apple; if it had er been a water-melon it would er been different."

Greene: "White, how did you learn to keep books?" White: "I never learned. Why?" Greene: "I notice you never return any you borrow."

"Say, waiter," exclaimed an impatient customer. "I've been here a full hour!" "I've been here since seven this morning," answered the waiter. "Tiresome, ain't it?"

A youth was heard to remark to a jolly and fat Teutonian: "Haven't I seen you before? Your face looks familiar." "Is dot so?" said Hans. "When you get as old as me your face will look familiar, too."

Penelope: "There, uncle, that makes two hundred and seventeen presents. Aren't they lovely?" Her Uncle: "My dear, I think I now understand why we're told that in heaven there is no giving in marriage."

A New York gentleman was put out of patience by some blunder of his new groom. "Look here!" he cried, "I won't have things done in this way. Do you think I'm a fool?" "Shure, sorr," said the groom, "Oi can't say, sorr, I only came here yesterday."

Little Horace was telling his grandmother what he had learned at Sunday-school. "Adam was the first man, Methuselah was the oldest man, Job was the most patient man, Moses was the worst man—" "Why, Horace!" "Yes'm, he was. He broke all the ten commandments at once."

A professor in a German medical college had one exasperating student, according to the Illustrated Welt. "You see, Herr Dumm," said the professor to this young man one day, "the subject of this diagram limps, because one of his legs is a trifle shorter than the other. Now, what should you do in such a case?" "I should limp, too, I think, Herr Professor," replied the student, with an expression of perfect innocence on his stupid face.

A Yale student recently handed in a paper to his professor and was surprised the next day to have it returned with a note scrawled on the margin. He studied it diligently, but was unable to decipher the note and so he brought his paper back to the professor. "I can't quite make out what this is; if you please," said the student. "That sir," said the professor, "why that says, 'I cannot read your handwriting.' You write illegibly, sir."

OUR CHILDREN.

BY MRS. MATILDA C EDWARDS.

The little ones God giveth us,
The fair,sweet flowers,
That look in beauty on our way,
Are always ours.

God gives forever what He gives,
His word is sure;
What He doth give to day He gives Forevermore.

He gives and takes our darlings back,
To lead us on;
And upward through the pearly gates,
Where they are gone.

O mother in thy bitter grief,
Who e'er thou art;
Does not the child before thee gone,
Draw up thy heart?

To that unclouded home above,
Where all is rest,
And ' though its soft brown head no more
Leans on thy breast,

Cans't thou not calmly through thy tears,
Look up and say:
He who is wise and good, has called
My child away.

He gave the stroke, His loving hand
Has filled my cup,
And He will keep my babe for me
Till I go up,

And mingle with the blessed throng,
That around Him shine—
Then will my child be mine again,
Forever mine.

The Annual Conference.

Conference will soon be here, the time when, as one expresses it, we as Methodists—preachers, laymen, stewards,trustees, Sunday school workers, one and all—"come to judgement." How rapidly the years come and go. The further along one gets on the journey the faster the milestones seem to flit by into the unreturning past. It seems but yesterday since we received our appointment and were visited at home in our affliction by good Bishop Duncan, who came out of his way specially to see us, and now in less than a month we are to stand before him as the highest representative of our great church to give an account of our work, to counsel together, and to receive marching orders for another year. "Come to judgement." Yes, that expresses it very well. Every individual is being judged, and ought to judge himself every day, yea every moment. But be this as it may, at least once every year, everybody and everything in connection with the Methodist army passes under review. Reports are made, results are footed up, and the work of each, from the humblest Sunday school scholar to the highes dignitary, is taken account of and placed on record and helps to swell the great aggregate. If a trustee has been unfaithful, if a steward has failed to take up his collections, a layman to do his duty, or a preacher has "lorded it over God's heritage" and oppressed one of the least of His children the fact comes to light at the Annual Conference. The question is asked publicly when every preacher's name is called: "Is there anything against him?" And if there is the matter is carefully investigated and the real offender handled without gloves.

But not only are the workers judged, but the principles of the great system by which they are governed in their work are put to the severest test. It is a time of tapping of wheels, tightening of nuts, overhauling, adjusting and oiling up the machinery, the filling up of tank and bin with material for fire and steam and getting ready for another run. If there has been friction anywhere the cause, whether in engine or operator, is ascertained and removed, if possible. In this way, by close and constant contact with the people, by closest scrutiny of men and methods, by frequent adjustment and appliance of her simple, plastic but powerful machinery, Methodism has arrested attention, commanded respect, inspired confidence, extended her lines out into all the earth, so that to-day her adherents are numbered by the millions.

An Annual Conference is a wonderful occasion to Methodist people, and particularly so to the preachers. To them it is the family re-union, the place of rendezvous when the soldiers, who have been separated for a year in the thickest of the fight, camping on the field, and perhaps living on short rations, come, perhaps with battle scars, to recount their trials and triumphs and mingle their sorrows and joys together. We would that every member of our church in the Northwest could attend the sessions of our approaching Conferences. It would do them good. It would increase their faith, give them enlarged views of the great work they are engaged in and inspire and fit them more fully for their part of the work.

Have we fought a good fight? Have we kept the faith? Are we ready to come to judgment? If not, let us be up and doing, for the time is short.

NEWS AND NOTES.

—The Republican party, which met at Minneapolis, nominated Benjamin Harrison for President and Whitelaw Reid, of New York, for Vice President. The Democrats, at Chicago, nominated Grover Cleveland for President and Gen. A. Stevenson, of Illinois, for Vice President. As both Harrison and Cleveland are known to be unfriendly to free coinage of silver, neither of these nominations have produced any special enthusiasm in the West.

—The Third Party State Convention for Montana has nominated Will Kennedy for Governor, Harvey Cullom for Lieutenant Governor; J. T. McKay, Auditor; J. K. Lattimer, Treasurer; Miss Ella Knowles, Attorney General; W. Y. Pemberton, Chief Justice; Samuel Mulville, U. S. Senator. Miss Knowles announces her intention, so we understand, to take the stump and enlighten the public as to the claims of her sex for recognition.

—It is a satisfaction to every Christian in America to know that in the White House at Washington, when the great dinners are given, honored guests are entertained and important councils are held relating to the ministration of our government at home and abroad. There is also a family altar erected, where the Bible is read and the God of heaven is worshipped daily by the president and his family. What an example to all our people.

—Bishop Early once asked Henry Clay how the churches were prospering in Kentucky. "Why," said he, "they are all whip and spur,trying to keep up with the Methodists." Would that it were thus always and everywhere, and that the Methodists would continue to lead in the "old paths" in which our fathers trod.

—Some time ago a Mr. Leff, a prominent infidel of Butte City, challenged any minister of the Gospel in the city to read a certain chapter in the Bible before his congregation, offering one hundred dollars to the one who would do so. The challenge was accepted by several ministers, but by consent, Rev. E. J. Grosenevеldt, of the Presbyterian Church, was given the honor. It was the fifteenth chapter of Leviticus, which refers to the sanitary laws of the Jews and those laws in the Old Testament which have been endorsed by the highest medical authority in the world, and which have contributed so largely to the healthfulness and vigor of the Jewish people. The church was crowded upon the occasion. The challenger and some of his cohorts were there. When the speaker began a brief statement as to the nature of the chapter, the infidel rose to object, when the preacher ordered him to keep silent, or he would be put out of the house at once. The reading proceeded without further interruption, followed by a strong sermon against infidelity. Mr. Leff was utterly discomfited and a great triumph scored for Christianity.

—One of the most remarkable and singularly destructive calamities on record, recently occurred in Oil City and Titusville, Pa., in which more than 300 lives were lost and from $3,000,000 to $5,000,000 worth of property destroyed. A cloud-burst filled the valleys with an overwhelming flood and undermined a great tank of oil, which spread its contents over the water, when a spark from a passing engine ignited the oil and sent a sheet of flame sweeping over the devouring flood. Many who would have escaped from the waters were overtaken by the fire, their oil-soaked garments rendering them an easy prey to the fiery fiend. The details are horrifying.

—The World's Fair will be immense. Fifty-six nations and colonies will be represented in buildings on the ground furnished by each country. Thirty of our own states, some of them equal to empires, will be represented by special buildings. The aggregate cost will amount to $30,000,000. It will overshadow every display of the kind thus far. It would be a shame to our civilization to turn it into a saloon and keep it open on Sunday.

—We have recently read "In Darkest England, on the Way Out," by Gen. Booth. It is a wonderful production. The author is second to no man of this age as a reformer and uplifter of his race. He understands the condition of the people down in the pit, is in sympathy with them, and by a great strong arm, backed by power given it of God, is bringing thousands up to a higher and better life. Thank God that the fire that burned in Wesley's heart has not yet gone out, that the training he gave his (spiritual) sons still proves effective, and that the grand work he inaugurated among the poor and neglected of his day is still going forward whether it is under the Wesleyan banner or bears the Wesleyan name or not. It is under the blood-stained banner and in the name of Him who is Lord of all.

PIONEER SKETCHES.

Trip to Oregon.

BY L. B. STATELER.

Not far from the Spokane bridge, west, we passed an immense bone yard, several acres of ground covered with the skeletons and bones of horses. During an Indian war that had been raging Col. Steptoe pursued the retreating savages to this point where he succeeded in capturing their entire herd of horses. The soldiers began congratulating themselves upon having such a large band of stock to take back with them, when the commander replied promptly: "You shall not take a horse out of this band. The Indians would say that was all we wanted." He then gave orders that every Indian horse should be shot, and the work of slaughter began and continued until the last gallant steed lay dead upon the field. This had the desired effect. The savages seeing their stock all dead come in and surrendered. The commander then demanded the murderers. They were delivered up, seven in number, and hung to the limbs of the rees,of what is now called the Hang man's creek.

Southward from Hangman's creek, along the way, we came into a country covered with small mounds the base of which were about ten feet in diameter, and they rounded up about four feet high, and so close together that in some places you could not drive a wagon between them. They are on the high and low ground alike and are very remarkable. There was no sign of a town at Spokane Falls at this time.

We passed through what is now called the Palouse country, crossed the Snake river on a ferry boat run by means of a wire cable and from thence pressed on to Walla Walla, which was then a beautiful town of one thousand inhabitants, located in the fertile Walla Walla valley. Here we were greatly refreshed, getting all the supplies necessary for the remainder of the journey. From here we went on, following the main traveled road,to the Dalles,a long tiresome journey of one hundred and sixty miles or more. At the Dalles we shipped on board the steamers our horses, wagons,—everything—and were conveyed to Portland, Oregon, which is located on the Williamette some twelve or fifteen miles above where it empties into the Columbia. The population, if I remember correctly, was only about five thousand at that time. From there we continued on up the river until we came to Albany, the terminus of our long and tedious journey. We arrived there on the twentieth day of October, having been forty-two days on the road.

The Columbia Conference met that year in the town of Corvallis, Oregon, Bishop Kavanaugh presiding. I attended the Conference a stranger, not being recognized. At the close of the preaching, on Sunday morning, I went forward and shook hands with the Bishop, who recognized me and expressed himself as greatly surprised and pleased to see me. He afterwards introduced me to the Conference.

It had been my purpose to proceed at once to California, where if the climate suited, I might take work and remain. But Bishop Kavanaugh over-ruled my purpose, and at the close of the Conference I was read out as a supply for the Albany circuit. I at once entered upon my work as a circuit preacher, and hoped that I might put in a successful winters's work on the charge. But about those days the rain began to patter down. The rainy season was on and the rain fell continuously day after day, until the entire valley seemed to be a sluice of water. I was not to be out-done, and so got me a gum suit and expected to continue my work. But I found that the rain not only affected things outside, but the very beds that I slept on felt damp to me. The effect of the of the wet weather and damp beds soon became apparent upon my system. My mouth refused to give utterance. My throat was affected so that I could not make myself head. I had to give up my work. The doctor informed me that as soon as I could get out of the country I must do it, as I could not remain there, and instead of of going south to California as I had expected, I prepared at once to retract my steps to Montana. Thus we spent the winter, sad and sorrowful and depressed in that rainy region, and in April we set about preparing to return to our distant mountain home.

Butte Letter.

DEAR METHODIST: Your coming is irregular, and I lay it to the high-water and "washouts," and am glad for your sake, that so good an excuse seems to be at hand for you.

The closing quarter of the Conference year is here and soon we "come up to judgment" again.

My work here was never more pleasant, and in spite of very inclement weather, the attendance and interest have been good all the time.

We took our "Church Extension collection," Sunday, and actually got more than we asked for.

We hope to "clear the deck" and make a good report at Conference.

About 30 names have been added to the church, at Butte, during the year, and about as many at other points under my ministry, making upwards of 60 during the year, for which I am thankful to Almighty God.

Butte is a great centre, and growing rapidly, about $5,000,000 worth of work now under contract in the city. Vice and crime are extant. My house was burglarized May 15th—Sunday, while all were at church. We tried four fellows for it, and secured convictions of all against them, and caught another suspicious looking man who was whispering to our prisoners and found 12 watch-chains and other jewelry on him. So we got 5 out of four. One of them who plead guilty was recognized as soon as he entered the court-room, as a boy we had arrested in Colorado, 3 years ago for stealing from us—followed me 1,600 miles and stole exactly the same amount from us again.

The cases against the "Concert Halls" were decided against us, but we are now trying a petition to be presented to the city council, for an ordinance against them.

The foolish fellow, who offered $100 to any minister who would read any chapter he might select, was quickly taken up by three of us, and by courtesy the Presbyterian minister read it, and received the hundred. I needed the money to paint my church, but the second hundred did not come.

The churches are very prosperous and aggressive, in spite of all the blatant evil of the city. The Baptist State Association was held the first week in June and was a time of great interest to those who are concerned in the spread of the truth. Governor Leslie, was "Moderator" and treated us courteously.

The State S. S. Convention met here, June 28th–30th, and a great time of good was experienced.

Peter Koch wrote to one of our brethren of this city, that Southern Methodism "carried off the palm in the Bozeman Convention last year." So mote it be. We now expect to entertain the Annual Conference here in Aug." Let them come."

Our dear brothers, Britt and Goulder, have lately married, and I do not hesitate to say, that the Conference is stronger than before, though there is not a "single" preacher within the bounds of it.

I must hasten to close. The weather is mixed yet. The health of myself, and family is excellent. Am sorry to hear of the illness of Bro. Warren's family; and that of Bro. Parnall. May the good hand of God restore them all. Bro. Price is contemplating a time of school life yet, and I suppose we will lose him from the Conference this summer.

Bro. Couey passed through last week, to his home looking much worn. Bro. Tabor is well and moving majestically on.

Lovingly yours,
J. E. SQUIRES.

Importance of the Primary Department in Sunday School Work.

A Paper Read by Mrs. S. B. Newman, before the Gallatin County Sunday School Convention in Bozeman, Montana, June 2nd. 1892.

Children must be taught, for of them we make men and women.

The children of to-day are the shoulders upon which the great burden of the church must rest to-morrow.

The pillars of the church and State to-day, in their general make up, are fashioned largely by what they were taught in childhood.

To take a boy and make a man of him is no easy thing.

It is as easy to prepare a channel in a very crooked and irregular stream for the passage of a steam boat; there are places where the channel must be entirely changed. A great many things to be taken out and places to be dug deeper. In plain the whole river must be worked.

So will the boy,faculties to be changed, some to be dug entirely out and ten times we would almost say new faculties to create. The whole boy must be worked with a careful hand, as the potter would work his clay to make some beautiful vessel.

There are four things which go largely and almost entirely to make the man.

First: What he is taught.

And first of all it must be the pure, unadulterated Gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ. But in a way the child can understand. Too many children are taught in a way that would puzzle men to understand.

That the mind of an innocent child should be crammed with theology and ecclesiastical history is a mistake.

To teach children, there need be no argument, only a plain statement of the truth. The innocency of childhood is such that they will quickly grasp a truth.

It might be illustrated like this: A child who has been told of God, being in an infidel's office where a large placard on the wall read like this: "God is nowhere," the child was asked to read the sentence, she spelled it out thus, G-o-d i-s n-o-w, here. "God is now here." It is a law, naturally so, that children will be taught. The after life depends largely,and almost universally on the first ten years of life. Principles are instilled that will go with him through life, good or bad. Lessons are learned, true or false, which becomes apart of the moral make-up of the man in after years, and such they are that time will refuse to uproot them.

These truths are so well understood, that it has become a maxim of the Catholic Church. "Give us the first seven years of your child, and you may have him the rest of his life, but he will die a Catholic."

It sound very nice to say, "Wait 'till the child is old enough and let him decide for himself." It will not do. The idea is born where sin originated. In plain, it is the whisperings of the evil one, who would say, "I want the immortal spirit of your child. I want to thwart the purpose of God. I want to make the blood of Christ of more none effect to the child wait till he is old enough to know whether he would come to Sunday School or not." If thus allowed to run, the child will decide naturally, necessarily, and almost universally, in favor of sin.

Our children must be cared for, and taught the truths of Divine life, by the parents, by the church, in the Sunday School, or they will be taught by the world, in the world, for the world.

Teach the life of a little child to lisp the name of God, reverence, to pray. Live for it, and in it, and you have gained that child for God. Turn it loose and let it run with the common herd, it learns to hate the church, good people, despise the name of God, and if ever the name of the Divine Magesty is used, it is taken in vain.

Fifteen years of such tutorship, being moulded, and fashioned, and assimulated. It then becomes a matter of uncertainty, doubtly so, whether that child will ever be led to God.

There are seed in the heart, that nothing but the blood bought saving grace of the Lord Jesus Christ can tear it out.

A grave responsibility rests upon the church of the living God, in that their perishing souls lie at your door. If saved, if rescued and the world now for God, it will not do to wait till they are grown, and then try. But begin the work in their childhood, with a vigorous, determined, consecrated effort and the victory is won, the rescue made.

Secondly:

By whom they are taught.

We duplicate ourselves in the children we teach. Our life becomes their life, our souls theirs. We can bring a child up to our level, but no higher. An inventor can make no machine greater than the one which resembles his brain. It takes a mechanic to make a machine. We We might go into the mechanic's shop, and there have access to all his instruments, and material, and we could never make a watch that would keep the time of day. So it is. If we would lead the child out into the green experimental fields of gospel truth, we must first go there ourselves. David said, "Teach me thy way, oh, Lord. Hide not thy face from me, and sinners shall be converted unto thee."

It is positively wrong in our Sunday Schools to give the preacher the Bible Class.

Give him the infant class and he will do three times more good. Give your consecrated spiritual teachers to the children in the primary department and allow none to teach there, spiritually minded, godly men and women.

And again. If you have normal teachers in your school, take them away from your large classes and give them over to the children.

It takes advanced men and women to teach children, and men who have been with God. Some may say that it is easy to deceive a child, but no class of people realize the spirituality of their teachers more rapidly than the children.

III. How they are taught,

Is an important factor in developing the moral, spiritual and intellectual man.

As is generally practiced in our schools, classes are arranged to contain from six to seven, to twenty or thirty in each, and this not an uncommon thing in the same room where from eight to ten other classes are reciting. This is a misfortune of which I will speak later. In these classes, usually there is an hour devoted to the study of a lesson.

Some teachers spend the entire hour in telling the children a tale.

Now, if you please, an occasional anecdote, by way of illustration, is a good thing, and cannot well be dispensed with; but away with your tales. Children become disgusted and lose interest; they are as conscious as men with reference to the object in going to Sunday-school.

They tire of such. They are eager to be taught gospel truths, provided the proper methods are used to gain their attention, otherwise, the interest which has been gained by improper methods, will lose its hold, and not unusual the case, the children are more difficult to manage and instruct them if they had never been inside a Sunday-school.

Teach the children, by all means, gospel truths and gospel duty.

If it be possible, use a wise, clean illustration with a moral and point to it—one which bears directly upon the lesson, and you have gained your class.

Do not use more than one or two illustrations during a lesson: never more than three, or else you tire your class and they lose sight of the great moral truths which you vainly endeavor to teach.

You do more good. They like it better. You hold your class better, to talk to them directly with reference to the lesson. If you have a story to tell, a song or prayer to learn, let it come after the lesson is completed.

IV. And lastly. Where they are taught.

A child can be taught at home, in a barn, or under a shade tree, lessons that never will be forgotten.

Ordinarily, we are limited to an hour once a week, in which to teach lessons that are destined to make them men and women. It is difficult to take a class of, say twelve children, in a crowded house, and teach them as they ought to be taught, in the given limited time; yea, it is impossible.

This proves the necessity of class-rooms or a place where the children may gather and be separated from the whole school.

May the Lord hasten the day when church steeples and spires and ornamental decorations be converted into rooms, where the consecrated teachers can do their work thoroughly, and where they can, with their class, get down upon their knees before God and teach them how to pray in a practical way.

And now, the Primary Department is needed. First, because children make men and women, and they are what they are taught to be. Second, primary rooms are needed because they cannot be taught successfully and practically without them.

From Spokane.

MR. EDITOR: I read the MONTANA METHODIST regularly. I have not seen anything in it from Spokane for a long time. I think it a shame that the great metropolis should be thus neglected. The Great Northern Railroad will add wonderfully to this young city. The river is at its highest. The beauty and grandeur of the falls at this place cannot be depicted by pen nor illustrated by brush. The rushing waves, as they come dashing over the precipice, seem to speak of the power of God. As we behold them we are so overwhelmed with the grandeur of the scene that we can but turn away and say, "How marvelous are Thy works, Lord God Almighty." The background of mountains in the distance, and broad acres of flowers, add to the beauty of the scene. Demosthenes, with all his oratory, would fail in its description.

While we are so wonderfully blessed, let us not forget our eastern friends, whose heads have been overshadowed by a storm-wreathed sky. They have had to listen to the death-shrieks of many a perishing friend.

Our church is moving quietly along. Brother Swift is looking quite fatherly since little Helen has come to his house to stay. Brother Hodges is a faithful, good pastor. He is a model of neatness. I don't think the Palouse dust would dare attack him. The Sunday-school, prayer and class-meetings are attended well, and al who come seem interested. Christian people seem to be awake. The M. E. Church has a Deaconess Home in this place. The sisters are at work in earnest, seeking for the lost. We have the Salvation Army, too.

Our District Conference is in session. You will hear more of our church work soon. OCCASIONAL.

——o——

From Belgrade.

DEAR BROTHER STANLEY: I often read your paper, but I do not find much space devoted to children's missionary work [simply because there has been no demand for such space until now, and we cheerfully yield it to our correspondent.—EDITOR], so I thought I would contribute a letter for the benefit of those who are engaged in the juvenile work.

Belgrade is a new place, and like our Sunday-school, is still in its infancy, but both are growing rapidly.

We have a missionary society in connection with our Sunday-school, which meets every Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock, for the convenience of the children in the adjoining country. The little folks manifest great interest in missionary work, and most of their readings and recitations (we have a programme every week) are on that subject. Of course we have a variety, and some are quite cute.

I hope the ladies in all the churches will pay more attention to the juvenile work, for no one can realize what a help they are to a church and pastor until they have been brought into connection with the church and Sunday-school.

Hoping this will not be side-tracked to the waste basket, I remain,

CORA KING.

Belgrade, Mon.

We are very glad, indeed, to receive such a good letter from our sister, and to know of the good work in progress at Belgrade, and especially of the work among the children. The church building at that place, at one time, gave us no little solicitude, and for awhile it appeared doubtful whether it would be completed and paid for. By faithful and persevering effort it was not only completed and paid for, but we now have a good parsonage built there, a preacher living in it, and a church and a live missionary Sunday-school in full blast. Surely the Lord is on the giving hand, and is ready to honor his people. We shall be glad to hear from this school again, and from other schools and churches and Epworth Leagues. That is what our paper is for: a means of communication between the workers, who are too far apart on the wall to speak audibly to each other (See Nehemiah iv: 19, 20). Not simply for the preachers, but for all whose hearts and hands are engaged in work for God here in the Northwest, and who have a word of good cheer for the encouragement of God's people. Such correspondence is never side-tracked into the waste basket.—EDITOR.

It Will Thrive.

If you want a stalwart Christian character, plant it right out of doors in the great field of Christian usefulness, and though the hot son of trial may try to consume it, it will thrive until it becomes a great tree, in which the fowls of heaven may have their habitation.—Talmage.

——o——

THE worst economy in church finances is to scrimp the minister's salary. A couple of hundred dollars saved there is poorly saved, for that sum may mean to him all the difference between an easy mind and elastic spirits and a sense of anxiety and depression that detracts from all his work. That last hundred or two is the oil that makes the machinery run without friction. It is not a bad thing, either, to give the minister a little more than has been agreed upon.

Here and There.

FROM WHITEHALL.

Rev. W. M. Britt adds in a foot note to a private letter: My work is in a fair condition. Financially, pretty well up; spiritually much below what I would like, but encouraging. Last Sunday at Summit Valley I received two members by letter from the Baptists. There were two other applications, who, with yet two other applicants, are to be received the next time I go there.

FROM UBET.

Our Brother, W. S. McMurry, writes to renew his subscription for the METHODIST, and says: I am well pleased with it and would not like to do without it, as it keeps me posted on the work of our church in the great Northwest, as well as on many other things of interest. There is no preaching by our ministers nearer than Bozeman. We have had preaching once a month by R. M. Cronen, a Northern Methodist brother, but his time has expired and he goes to conference soon. We also had several discourses by a Christian, or Campbellite, brother and one by a Presbyterian. Seven have united with the Methodists and four with the Campbellites. We have a flourishing lodge of Good Templars and a good Sunday School on the union plan, superintended by a Baptist brother.

In connection with a pressing invitation to attend District Conference at Oakesdale, a very dear brother writes: "We feel that you and the "Montana Methodist" belong very largely to us, and that we have a right to command your presence." Our brother is more than half right. The "Montana Methodist" and its editor belong to the church. The brethren in Spokane district are part of the church and have done much to help the paper and encourage its editor. We do not dislike the commands they send us—seasoned with such kind words. It would be a great pleasure to obey, were it possible. May the Lord continue to prosper them. We accept to meet them ere long.

The wife of Rev. J. R. Waggener, a superannuate of the Virginia Conference and father of Brother W. O. Waggener, recently passed away. She was step-mother to our brother here. It is expected that the father will soon join the son in Montana and make his home with his son. We shall welcome this venerable veteran to our midst and trust that his coming may be a mutual blessing to both him and us.

Mrs. H. Parnall, her daughter, Miss Josie, and her son, Master Johnnie, of St. Joseph, Mo., are now visiting Rev. J. B. Parnall (a cousin) and wife at Stevensville. There presence will contribute materially to the pleasure and profit of our people in the social circle, as well as in the church and Sunday School work. We trust that our Montana climate and contact with our people will prove a blessing to them.

—o—

Mr. John Brazeal, late of Sunnyside, Va , is now stopping with Rev. W. O. Waggener and wife at Corvallis. He is Mrs. W's brother. May he be sufficiently pleased with Montana to make his home here. It is in this way, the transferring of the young people here, that we get the interest and co-operation of the church in the East and South in our behalf. And yet there is room.

—Rev. M. Hope is in charge of the Presbyterian Church at Stevensville, Corvallis, and Victor. He is a native of Scotland, but attended the seminary in this country. He is just out of school, and appears to be in earnest in his work. His sermons have the Methodist ring. We wish him success.

—Recently the editor filled two of Brother Flower's appointments, at Olford's and at Etna, traveling nearly twenty miles to make the round, while the regular pastor went off up the valley to marry a couple, for which he received a handsome fee—a ten dollar bill. As we had done part of the work we suggested a division of the receipts of the day, but our brother could not perceive the propriety of a pro-rata in that part of the performance. Anyhow, we had a refreshing service at Olford's school house.

—Not long since we preached for Brother Flower at Canyon Creek to a good congregation, and organized a Sunday School in the afternoon.

—The high water kept Brother Waggener from filling several appointments at Fair Play.

—While the water has been higher than usual and has done some damage in the way of washing out bridges and obstructing traffic and travel in portions of Montana, and has perhaps overflowed a few gardens that were too near the main water courses, yet we have had nothing worthy of the name of a flood, as compared with the great and widespread inundations in the States East and south of of us. We are too near the sources of the great rivers for such things to occur here.

—Things were rather quiet about Corvallis on the Fourth. Two preachers and their families, with quite a pleasant group of neighbors and friends recreated among the rocks and pines and cooling springs east of Corvallis and greatly relished the lemonade, ice cream, strawberries, fried chicken and other delicacies dispensed by deft hands upon that occasion. Long live the Fourth of July and the great cause of which it is the monument.

—Brother Goulder informs us that he expects to publish a daily paper during the session of Conference. Our brother will find out that it takes gold as well as Goulder to go through with an undertaking, such as any thing less than a General Conference rarely ventures upon. But our Montana preachers and people don't do things by halves.

—Invite your friends to subscribe for the "Montana Methodist."

—o—

Our Episcopacy and Itinerancy

Since the Methodist army has become one, largely, of occupancy as well as of conquest, in many places, there are two features of our polity that are put to a severe test at the return of our annual convocations. We refer to the episcopacy and the itinerancy.

In the earlier days when our soldiery was engaged in field duty going forth, without purse or scrip, houses or lands, conquering and to conquer, then was little thought of easy places. When Whitefield wrote to Wesley while in America, sking what he could offer for his services, the laconic reply went promptly back: "We will give you bread to eat and raiment to put on, a place to lay your head such as your Master had not, and a crown of glory that fadeth not away." This became the keynote of the itinerant hosts. It was all they cared for or expected. Not a few of them "gloried in tribulation"—preferred taking the hardest places and going where the battle was fiercest. They were not afraid of the Bishop, for that dignitary had threaded by paths and blazed trails through the wilderness, and lived on scant fare as well as they. He was a man of God and would not willingly afflict. The church was not afraid to receive men so unselfish and so full of the Master's spirit.

But now, since there is not much garrison duty, so many easy places to be filled, the further usefulness of our system is doubted by many, and its usages are disregarded. It is said that in many of the leading charges of the Northern Church the preachers arrange their appointments with the official board months before hand, and the bishop simply notifies the bargain. On one occasion the bishop said in a knowing manner, "I am simply your secretary to ratify the contracts you have made."

We are heartily glad that this has not yet come to be the rule among us, and we trust it never will. The episcopacy, coupled with our itinerancy, has contributed largely to the world-wide prestige and glory of Methodism. It may be abused by ambitious men, if such should even be placed there by the church, but it is so guarded that such evils can be early arrested. It is the same polity, under an other name, that has studded the earth with Salvation Army posts and is sending thousands of consecrated men and women into the slums in search of the "submerged tenth." It is the lack of such a factor that has caused the great waste of force and time, and greatly hindered progress in other organizations, older and richer than ours. We have known of several Presbyterian churches rent and torn for years by troubles that a bishop could have settled in an hour or so. Not a few of our brethren of this great body have felt the lack of a distributing force, a voice that speaks with authority the word "Go," that will supply its thousands of vacant churches with pastors and furnish its equal number of idle servants, who are standing in the market-places, saying "No man hath hired us," with something to do.

To secure order and promptness in carrying out the great commission, there must be a distributing force somewhere. While all kinds of secular business calls for agents—litigation for a lawyer, sickness for a physician, building for mechanics, etc., yet the place that needs a minister most, as a rule, is the last on earth to issue a "call." He must be sent. We cannot give up our episcopacy.

Personally, this writer possesses strong attachments for home and all its endearing associations. We incline to anchor to the soil. The location of a camp, on a trail where we grazed our horse and lunched in the shade of a pine by a rippling brook, lined with flowers and ferns, possesses such attraction that, on a second trip, we have ridden an hour or two later and passed more places, almost or quite as convenient, just to camp at the same place again. It is with great trepidation that we go among entire strangers. During our early ministry, it was heartrending to leave a circuit and say good bye to our friends, especially those converted during our stay there. It is the greatest task imaginable for us to move. It breaks us all up to think about it. We know some of the inconveniences and hardships of preachers and their families, and are familiar with the arguments for and against the itinerancy. But still, we believe it to be most in harmony with the spread of the gospel. The Church of God was not organized to furnish men or families with easy places. It was organized for conquest. It is militant. Its officers, like those of any other successful army, are to be ready for marching orders at a moment's notice. Methodist preachers have been called "five minute men." They are ready to go to the end of the earth when duty calls. It is only by men of this spirit that the world can be taken for Christ, and with such it can and will be won sooner than we may imagine. When men cannot comply with these conditions, they are at liberty to take other relations and work in other departments, and should do so. If they are worn out, or partially so, they should be cared for, as the nation does for its veteran soldiers.

We rejoiced to see such decided opposition to the removal of the time limit by the Omaha General Conference. It would be a fatal step towards the overthrow of our itinerant system. The change was approved by the noble laymen of that body. God bless them and all such, now and forever more.

Just now many preachers are wondering where they and their families will be after next August. It is quite human-like to think of such things. We know something about it. But let us not worry over much. The Master has promised that the man who hath left houses and lands, home and friends, for his sake and the gospel's, shall find them again in this life, with eternal life in the world to come. Thank God, he keeps His promise. He will not forsake the righteous nor permit his seed to beg bread, nor permit a faithful efficient preacher to be long imposed upon by receiving poor appointments. Water finds its level. The poorest of us generally go for what we are worth, and get as much as we deserve. The greatest affliction that we ever received, in the way of an appointment, turned out to be one of the greatest blessings. So it has been in many cases.

It is often hard for a church to give up a successful and popular pastor. But possibly he is needed to build up the work elsewhere. We must not be too selfish. Then, if we have a poor and unsuccessful preacher, we are encouraged to endure him for awhile until Conference, when we part company on terms agreeable and honorable to all, and next year our brother finds a fruitful field, and we a pastor who fills the bill.

Our system may be imperfect: where is there one that is not? But we believe it the most efficient ever yet adopted in preaching the gospel to every creature and spreading scriptural holiness over these lands. The etter we understand it, the more web like it, and the greater our desire to see it carried out, until this world shall be conquered for our Lord and for his Christ.

—During the last five years the Salvation Army in this country has extended to 500 cities and towns. In the last twelve months it has preached the Gospel to over 25,000,000 people. The "Shelter" in New York City which provides a bath, bed and breakfast forfifteen cents, has sheltered 9,000 persons.

—The M. E. Church, South, now numbers 46 Annual Conferences, with a Mission in Japan not yet organized into a Conference. We have 5,231 intinerant and 6,404 local preachers, an increase during the year in the former of 181, and the latter 38. The membership numbers 1,266,562, being an increase of 48,001 during the last fiscal year. There are 13,206 Sunday schools, 93,517 officers and teachers, and 747,788 scholars. The Church owns 12,485 houses of worship, valued at $18,889,495; 2,890 parsonages valued at $3,431,633. Contributed last year for Church Extension $71,084; for conference collections, $145,886; for foreign missions, $263,933; domestic missions, $127,390. Raised by the Woman's Board of Missions, $83,866.

—A German saloon keeper recently said that the letters W. C. T. U. meant "Women constantly torment us."

—Dr. Cuyler says: "Charles Wesley did more for Christ when he sang, 'Jesus, lover of my soul,' than if he had written fifty volumes of theology."

—There is need of a leaflet in the nature of a guide-book for fraternal orators, stating what themes will evoke "prolonged and hearty applause," and what will start "respectful murmurs of disapprobation." —Richmond Advocate.

—The proceedings of the last General Conference at Omaha would furnish a chapter. Let our next delegate be furnished with a copy.

—When soldiers are parading in peace for the applause of women, the "step" is kept, and the ranks swing like a machine. When men are in battle, their movements after the bullets begin to fly have little grace of motion. They are too earnest for fine prancing. The preacher who is prim and proper in pulpit and grammar, without a mote on his broadcloth or flaw in his syntax, seldom captures or kills. A sermon that will parse has wasted itself on finish to the loss of force. When a minister is in earnest, the "predicate" must look out for itself.—Richmond Advocate.

Conference Notice.

Brethren please take notice and send the names of all who will attend the session of our approaching Annual Conference at Bozeman, August 10, 1892, from your charge. Please, brethren, attend to this at once that I may provide entertainment. All who will come will be entertained, provided I know of their coming in time. Brethren, do not neglect this.

W. T. Goulder.

Bozeman, Mon.

The Montana Conference will convene at Bozeman, Mon., the 10th of August, instead of the 4th. See Brother Goulder's notice in another place. Let the preachers see to it that all the collections are taken. We hope to have a clean record this year, as heretofore. Also see that your registers are corrected and your charge all in shape for your successor.

Again, we beg our brethren, the Stewards, to bestir themselves and see that the preacher is paid in full. He needs every dollar you promised him, with which to pay his bills, buy him a suit of clothes, and pay his way to Conference and back. A special effort on your part will contribute very largely to his comfort. Don't neglect it. Brother, we mean YOU.

Hit It Quick

When the iron is hot hit it quick. Our Book Agents, Book Committee and General Sunday-school Committee are very anxious to establish a high grade weekly organ for the Epworth League. It is greatly needed, not only to assist in pushing the organization into unoccupied territory, but even more if possible to help in thoroughly vitalizing and giving aggressiveness to existing leagues. Such a paper would be a big blessing to the work. To give it full throbbing life right from the beginning, it must have an assured patronage. Now, let every Epworth League in Southern Methodism canvass the matter at once, and send in as many subscribers as possible. For twenty and over the price will be 50 cents per annum. Very cheap for the character of it. Of course if the proposition does not received sufficient attention from our leagues the paper will not be published. Let no league neglect it. Almost every league in existence by a little effort among friends can send in at least twenty subscribers. Will our pastors and presidents of the leagues see that a list goes to Nashville immediately.

The iron is hot hit it quick.

Yours truly,

J. R. Pepper,

Cor. Sec'y: Gen. S. S. Committee.

Cleveland's Nomination.

Probably no nomination was ever more vivicously opposed than was Cleveland's by Tammany. Rife with the desire to "down" him and augmented by the possibility of Hill's nomination, every weapon in political warfare was brought to bear on their adversary. But since the inevitable tide destiny has once more placed Mr. Cleveland at the head of the democratic party, there seems to be no doubt that he will receive the support of Tammany and that the same power used to prevent his nomination will be used to educe a successful ultimatum in the coming election. There is a general expression of satisfaction by the democrats and they urge Mr. Cleveland's ability to poll a majority in New York state and claim Stevenson's popularity in Illinois will put that state in their column and that their chance in Indiana is good.

Harrison and Reid.

The republicans are jubilant over Harrison's success and contend that he was never so strong as at the present, and never so capable to lead the party to glorious victory. They aver Mr. Reid's popularity among the business men of New York will tend to give the ticket a decided color of favoritism in that state, and never had any leader a more united and determined party back of him than has Harrison: With a clearly defined platform which meets the people's demands, they shall march into the field with a strength and unison never before paralleled.

Conjectures and Opinions

Are multifarious and of many phases at the capital, as well as elsewhere. But who can fortell the drift of this mighty nation's choice, and which of the aspirants shall be the recipient of the highest honor of the American people, is a perplexing question to answer conservatively.

Secretary of State.

Who will fill the vacancy of Secretary of State is the question now agitating the prophets. There seems little doubt but that President Harrison tendered Mr. Depew the position and that gentleman formally declined the honor.

Rumor has it that either General John W. Foster or Col. Hay may succeed Mr. Blaine? There is some doubt as to Mr. Foster's acceptance, owing to the fact that much of the work in the Behring Sea controversy has developed upon him. Mr. Foster has given this intricate question arduous study and careful consideration, and is about to submit the question to the arbitrators. No doubt the honor would be gratifying to him, but it may be impracticable to assume the duties of this important office without jeopardizing our interests in the Behring Sea dispute. It is understood that the President will make a provisional appointment for the remainder of Mr. Blaine's unexpired term, which must be made by July 4th.

Senator Davis

Has very properly introduced a resolution proposing retaliation upon Canada for her discrimination against American vessels passing through her canals.

The resolution provides substantially that a toll of $2 per ton for freight and not more than $5 per passenger shall be imposed upon the vessels, cargoes and passengers of such discriminating governments passing through the St. Mary's Falls Canal after August 1st, and so long as the President may deem proper. A Canadian paper very wisely says "Whether the Washington treaty is violated or not is a question for jurists. It is inclined to think that the Dominion Government is risking a good deal, and says it is not altogether safe to provoke Congress and the Adminstration to strike at Canadian railroads, who now carry on business in the United States without having observed in all its parts the interstate commerce laws binding upon American roads." That we will tolerate such obnoxious diplomacy against us is absurd to suppose.

Unhappy Blaine

Is learning by sad experience that misfortunes fly in flocks. The recently death of his son Emmons makes a third loss of children within a year. His only surviving son and child has recently been divorced from his wife. It was for marrying this then immature son to a woman of greater age that Blaine sharply reproved Father Ducey. These heavy domestic afflictions may well make Mr. Blaine's political troubles of trifling momement to him and his wife. The latter is credited with a large influence in her husband's course. He is said to be fond of authorship as he is conspicuous for ability and that he will in this favorite pursuit find an agreeable substitute for annoying, uncertain, and deceptive political labors.

ANNUITIES.

At the annual meeting of the Board of Missions held in Wilmington, N. C., in May, 1891, provision was made in the matter of annuities, on a plan similar to those adopted by other Mission Boards. It is believed that it can be made a source of revenue to the Board, and will afford to members of our Church a safe and satisfactory mode of donating money to the cause of missions.

Many persons have money for which they desire safe investment, as they may need the interest that may accrue from it while they are living; but wish the principal, on their death, to go to the benefit of some benevolent object. Under the system of annuities many of the leading Mission Boards receive money from said persons, issuing to them a bond which insures to the donors interest at say— per cent. per annum, payable semi-annually, while the party is living; the interest to stop on the death of ne donor, and the principal to go into the treasury of the Board of Missions. Bonds have been prepared by our Board, and persons desiring to make such donations can obtain them by applying or writing to I. G. John, at the Mission Rooms; or to Dr. Morrison or Dr. Lambuth, who will be traveling throughout the Connection. We invite correspondence with all who may desire to make such bequests.

Christ and the Soul.

How little, outside of the words of the great Teacher, is known of the soul. The spirituality of human nature seems to be a primitive truth, an original intuition implanted by the Creator. All the reasoning of the ages that have ignored or discarded this great truth have proven unsatisfactory indeed. They don't satisfy the inner cravings of human nature. Man cannot be reconciled to the thought that he is a mere animal. But the proof from intuition is not entirely conclusive. The subject has proved too deep and too vast for poor human nature, unassisted to fathom.

Poor Socrates, while possessing at times glimpses of truth, yet he "saw through a glass darkly," and seemed burdened and bewildered by his search.

It is most difficult to get the true voice of human nature as it came from the hand of God. It comes up mingled with the clamor of a thousand hostile sounds that distract and confuse. The trail of the serpent has marred the handiwork of the Maker. Skepticism on one side and sensualism on the other have caused a hard struggle for the light that burns in the soul. The idea of the soul inhabiting the body, and the laws regulating it are hard for the average man to grasp. It is easier to believe the senses, and far more agreeable than to follow the intuitions of the higher nature. Especially does it become true as the moral nature deteriorates. Those whose lives are base would rather not believe in accountability and immortality. The thought is unwelcome and painful, and they strive to get rid of it.

The struggle for daily bread amid poverty and hardship, and especially when surrounded by vice, has such an effect upon the fine sympathies and sentiments that there are many among us to-day, who scarcely know, and who hardly believe that they have souls. They would fain disbelieve it to rid them of remorse. They only take knowlege of the body, the outward world, and the present life. They lose all just conceptions of the true nobility of human nature. Especially is this the case with those who labor twelve or fourteen hours a day and seven days in the week in the shop, or mine, or before the blazing furnace and at starvation wages. They lose sympathy for everything that does not contribute directly to their benefit. They come to be narrow and selfish and base, their hand against every man, and imagine that every man's hand is against them. They become dead through the deceitfulness of sin. And this is the tendency of much of the teaching of the present day. It degrades man, makes him a mere animal, a machine to be worked and used and abused for awhile and then turned over to perish forever. This was largely the condition of affairs in and about Judea when our Savior came to the world. Materialism, as taught by the Sadducees and others, had cast its blighting influence over true religion, and then was greatly needed one to arouse mankind and rescue the true doctrine of the soul from the gross darkness that prevailed and restore it to its proper place in the world's thought. This was part of the work of the Son of God. Everywhere he went he proclaimed the soul, the soul! He made it prominent, and urged that men should provide for its wants. He did not advance arguments to prove its existence nor undertake to explain its phenomena. It was not necessary. He just talked to men a though they needed no proof, were conscious of the possession of immortal souls, a birth right that characterized humanity—all classes and conditions, rich and poor, great and small, bond and free. It was the common inheritance of every man, and was in itself truly great and valuable—more so than the "whole world" beside. It did not come from the earth, but is the offspring of God who is the Father of our spirits. Its attributes elevate it above the body and all early things. He taught that the soul is man. In the soul, its affections, its volitions, its attitude toward things, man takes on character which decides his destiny. It is not the body, however circumstanced or surrounded, that decides a man's real value. It is the soul, that indefinable something that thinks, reasons, chooses, loves, hates, hopes and fears. Here is found real character, his dignity and his worth. Christ did not stop to explain the mystery of the soul no more than that of the body and the thousand other mysteries that environ us. He simply proclaimed the fact, provided the remedy for its rescue, and issued the call to a higher divine life. In proportion as this call has been heard and heeded, humanity has been redeemed from ignorance, superstition, sensualism, selfishness and every debasing influence, and elevated, purified, and has attained to the highest good in this life and fitted for that which is to come. "What shall it profit a man if he gain the whole world and lose his own soul, or what shall a man give in exchange for his soul?"

Conference Charcoal Crayons.

Having been asked who are your preachers in Montana, and where are they, the following may not be out of place:

At the head of our little column stands its veteran, war-worn Stateler, saintly of soul, and courageous of heart. As ever, his face is to the foe. A long fight, a hard fight for Southern Methodism in this great West has he made.

Blessed be God, ere his eyes were closed, and his ears were sealed in death, he has been permitted to see the fruits of conflict, and hear the shoutings of victory. He is nearly home. He is sending his treasures ahead.

For him glory's heights are almost won. When he gets there, he will stand in the front ranks of Heaven's heroic spirits, and at his side will stand with him she who blessed and helped him here, and who awaits him there.

At Grantsdale and Canyon Creek blooms the Montana Flowers, free, frank, friendly, and still proclaiming the word of life. Popular with the masses, they gladly hear him, and in the evening of life as in its morning, and at its noon he is preaching a free salvation and Almighty Savior, a present spirit, a glad experience, and a blissful inheritance.

At Boulder, Clark's clear, clarion notes are rallying the host of God. He belongs to the immortal, spiritual "Red Guard" of our frontier work, who "die but never surrender." He is renewing the power and spirit of his youth—mounting up on wings as eagles, running and not wearying, walking and not fainting.

As Presiding Elder on the Missoula District, editor of the MONTANA METHODIST, and general all around man for any hard service the church may require of him, stands Stanley, safe, steady, sound, solid, and he is still pushing the battle to the gates. Years of faithful, earnest, devoted service has he given to the church. Poorly paid, yet without a murmur, he has done, and is doing his work. When God makes up his jewels he will know where to find him and where to place him. Many an uncrowned head of earth will that day be crowned, and jewels will fadeless flash on many a brow that on earth knew no adorning. Those nearest the throne, receiving the direct rays of the eternal light will shine the brightest—Stanley will be among them.

Couey, courteous, calm, cool, cautious, clear-headed, and consecrated, holds well in hand the work on Helena District. No grass grows under his feet. In administrative and preaching ability he and his appointment fit. A bright future lies before him—a future of honor in the church, and usefulness to the church.

Price, pure, pious, polished, pointed, powerful, and withal practical, is doing first-class work in our capital city, and giving our church a standing there that she stood in need of. His trust is in God, and his faith is well founded. By his forceful, earnest presentation of scriptural truth he is accomplishing [illegible] good. He is doing deep plowing, breaking up the fallow ground, and sowing the good seed that must one day bring forth a bounteous yield.

He is gathering some sheaves now, but there are "more to follow."

Tabor, tried, trusty and true, is in every way a success at Deer Lodge. Development, growth and increase are seen all along the line. It is granted to but a faithful few to attain "Tabor's height."

Parnall, preaching a pure gospel, and practicing a practical piety, is winding up a successful four years' work at Stevensville Frail as to the flesh, but strong of spirit, earnest, enthusiastic, and energetic, he has set before him a lofty standard, and is attaining unto it. He will never stop satisfied with the "second blessing," but will press forward until, with the thousandeth blessing behind him, the future furnishes him infinite progression along lines parallel with God's perfections.

On Bozeman Circuit, Warren waves the banner, utters the war dry, and the clans are gathering around him for the capture and possession of Eastern Montana for God and Methodism. He is doing a great work, as he builds with sword in hand. May his blows all fall on the common foe, and none light even inadvertently upon the heads of his friends in our own "household of faith."

At Butte, Squires, songful, spiritual, sagacious, and successful, stands to his guns. He is well nigh irresistable, and altogether irrepressible.

Progress is seen all along his lines; he is a busy man. Preaching often, singing much, visiting constantly, and making many matrimonial manacles, keeps his hands full, but he has a firm grip on all. What a presiding elder he would make!

Lee, loyal and true has had a hard fight at Demersville. Fearful odds have been against him, but he has faltered not. The sentinel at the extreme outpost, knows little of comradeship, and gets often but scant sympathy or praise. Unnoticed by many, prayed for by few, perhaps misunderstood and unappreciated. At headquarters, surrounded by opposition, fronting furious foes. Such a man needs both grit and grace. Lee has both.

At Whitehall, Britt, brave, brainy "holds the fort," and recently he has secured from Kentucky a valuable re-inforcement. His works already praise him, and now we may expect double success.

At beautiful Palmy Bozeman, Goulder goes a gait that tells for good on all the interest of the church. His winning ways and soulful singing has won his way into the hearts of his people, and won to be altogether, and for aye, all his own, one of the sweetest of hearts and most modest of maids.

At East Helena, Bramble, bold and brawny, is doing good and faithful work for the Master. His people appreciate him, and results follow his efforts.

At Corvallis may be found Willie Waggoner, weighty of body, tempestous, blizzardic. and cyclonic of voice, but ———Prov. 27:2.

—o—

Paragraphia.

Conference is nearly here. Another year's work is done. Its record is made up. God holds the books. May he pardon the mistakes and short-comings, establish the good, and give courage and consecration for future fields and efforts.

Many of the bravest and best of the old, middle-aged, and young, in Southern Methodism have fallen at their post.

During the last twelve months, I hear there are gaps in the ranks of most of our conferences, but not one of our little Montana band has been taken. We thank God that we are all alive this day. Shall we not bless Him for life preserved, and added opportunities for usefulness given?

The time draweth nigh when the old man, whom rheumatism and weariness boweth down on Sunday, and preventeth his going to church, can walk four miles in a political torch light procession, and stand erect one hundred and twenty minutes as he listeneth to the political harangue.

The chief foe to-day to peace and prosperity, to brotherly love and the the success of the gospel, is grasping cupidity, mamomized monopoly, and mammon-loving individuality.

Select Selections.

—Whatever you dislike in another, take care to correct in yourself.

—We are in the world. Let us be cheerful and joyous. Morose sullenness is no part of Christianity.

—The force of character is cumulative. All the foregone days of virtue work their health into this.—Emerson.

Like the kingdom of heaven, the fountain of youth is within us.
If we seek it elsewhere, old shall we grow in the search.

—Unselfish and noble acts are the most radiant epochs in the biography of souls. When wrought in earliest youth, they lie in the memory of age like the coral islands, green and sunny, amidst the melancholy waste of ocean.

—Faith opens a window through which the soul sees a God of love, a Savior from sin, a state of endless purity, a heaven of ecstatic bliss. Unbelief seeks to wall up that window. Surely unbelief is mad, and its teachers are the world's mischief makers.

A Christian refusing the rich guerdon offered for a sharp practice, an untruthful representation, or a dishonest business transaction, would be pronounced, by an unprincipled operator, a weakling and a fool. No doubt the martyrs of other days were also counted as fools by many unprincipled, self-seeking men. But when the light of faith is thrown upon the noble army of martyrs around the throne of God, and upon the wailing Dives in hell, it is no difficult to see upon whom the charge of folly falls. Surely, the highest wisdom is righteousness, and the most consummate folly is sin. He who sacrifices himself on the altar of truth and religion, is the wise man; he who sacrifices himself on the altar of falsehood and unrighteousness, is the fool.

—A charming writer, speaking of a modest soul, says: "A tiny flitting bird of slight song may with careful scrutiny be seen twisting in and out of the drooping fir tassels. Many would pass it unnoticed, but the observant eye will detect the gleam of a gold circlet upon the tiny gold-crested wren, Thus men will pass unregarding many a noiseless, retired worker for God in some sphere of seclusion and shade. But they who watch and know will be aware at times of the light of a saint's glory haloing the modest head."

—Beyond the struggles and the heart-aches of the weary pilgrimage is the better life with all its gladness and perfection. This life is not far from every son and daughter who is fully trusting Him who is the hope of the world. The heavenly home will be given those who walk by faith and follow the great Captain. Beyond the hoping and the dreading there is sweet rest for weary feet and aching hearts. When the labors of life have been endured, and the Lord's work is done, the children of God will be gathered home to join those who have been redeemed from sin and death.

—Faith does not give birth to the love in which it trusts; it only lays hold upon it. When man's faith is feeble, heaven's love remains absolute and immeasurable as ever. It is still an everlasting love, wooing men to make it their hiding-place from danger, their banqueting-house in which to satisfy their spiritual hunger. There is no limit to that love but man's unbelief, and it flows, an unintermittent stream, to every trusting heart.

—Think as we may of the blindness of the zeal of Francis Xavier, it seems scarcely possible to question his sincerity or to refuse admiration of his earnestness. This latter quality was shown one night when in his dream he shouted, "Yet more, O my God, yet more!" When he awoke his room mate asked why he had uttered those words. It seems that in his dream he saw spread out before him the long journeys he was about to take, the sufferings he was to endure, the labors he was to perform. But the vision, instead of daunting his intrepid spirit, only quickened his desires and forgot the cry, "Yet more, O my God, yet more!" And this was his battle cry in his working hours, the expression of that mistaken zeal by which he induced a million heathen souls to enter the Papal Church. The zeal and its expressive watchword are worthy of imitation and adoption by Christians who hold a purer faith. Giving such a yearning for winning souls to the love of Christ as he had for the enlargement of an impure church and his cry for converts to the truth, to every Christian worker, how soon the world would be won for Christ! Would that all evangelical churches were so baptized as to look on the countless millions yet unsaved with agonizing desire for their conversion, and to cry day and night "Yet more, O God, yet more!"

Spokane District Conference.

DEAR METHODIST: I send you an account of our District Conference, which met at Oakesdale, Wash., June 23, 1892. Rev. B. Swift, P. E., in the chair.

F. F. St. Clair, elected Secretary; H. B. Terry, Assistant.

There were nine preachers present, Bro. Burger being absent on account of failing health, and eleven delegates.

The session was most harmonious, and we had "showers of blessings" all through it, praise God!

The Sub-Bishop, while not physically strong, presided with "ease and ability."

The preaching was of the highest order, and brothers Shelton, of Doyton Sta., and Gibbes, of Doyton Ct., surely out-preached themselves.

It was Shelton who proposed that a map be drawn of the three Northwestern Conferences, designating the mission ground and the fields occupied by our Church, and send a man to the Eastern and Southern Conferences, and lay it before the people in an intelligent manner, and plead for men and means for this most important territory.

REPORTS FROM CHARGES.

DAVENPORT CT., F. F. St. Clair, P. C.: 13 accessions; 13 infants baptized; 13 family altars; 27 Church papers; 3 Sabbath-schools (75 people); $198.30 raised for all purposes; 2 S. S. libraries; a successful financial system.

SPOKANE STATION, W. H. Hodge, P. C.—22 accessions; 5 infants baptized; 7 family altars; 12 Church papers; 1 Sabbath-school, 165 pupils; raised for all purposes, $442.25; one parsonage.

PALOUSE AND MOSCOW CT., J. W. Compton, P. C.—5 accessions; 3 infants baptized; 6 family altars; 25

Church papers; 2 Sunday-schools, 60 scholars; $2,459.15 raised; one new church.

OAKESDALE CT., W. S. Hornbuckle, P. C.—9 accessions; 6 family altars; 13 Church papers; $203.90 raised; one parsonage.

BIG BEND CT., A. Y. Skee, P. C.—4 accessions; one infant baptized; 4 family altars; 5 Church papers; one Sabbath-school, 30 pupils; $703 80 total expended; one new church.

POTLATCH CT., H. T. Burger, P. C.—4 accessions; $52 raised; one Sabbath-school, 40 pupils.

LEWISTON CT., H. B. Terry, P. C.—12 accessions; 3 infants baptized; 8 family altars; 22 Church papers; 4 Sunday-schools, 145 pupils; one library; total collections, $1,221.30; a new church.

GENESEE CT., H. T. Burger, P. C.—5 accessions, 6 infants baptized; 6 family altars; 8 Church papers; $1,234.15 expended, for all purposes; new church in course of erection.

COLFAX CT., A. Anderson, P. C.—1 accession; 3 family altars; 10 Church papers; one Sabbath-school; 25 pupils; $18.50 raised.

ROCKFORD CT., E. P. Warren, P. C.—6 accessions; 6 family altars; 9 Church papers; $46.25, total raised.

The following delegates to Annual Conference: Wm. Priest, A. H. Crow, W. R. Winniford, E. P. Warren—Principals; Wm. Gray, J. S. Roudolph, J. N. Barker, C. W. Yockey—Alternates.

Genesee, Idaho, was selected as next place to hold District Conference.

Two hundred and thirty dollars subscribed to send representative to Southern Conferences.

The following resolutions adopted by rising votes:

WHEREAS, The preachers of this district and their families have been the recipients of the Christian sympathy and solid help from the Woman's Missionary Society of the Baltimore Conference in the shape of a valuable box of clothing and other comforts; therefore,

Resolved, That the thanks of this district are due and are hereby tendered to the godly women of that society, and we pray that God may bless them in "basket and in store," and that the blessings of our God may be upon them and their families and their noble work.

J. W. COMPTON,
A. Y. SKEE.

Resolved, That the thanks of this Conference are due and are hereby tendered to the good people of Oakesdale for their hearty Christian hospitality extended to us.

J. W. COMPTON,
WM. PRIEST.

Resolved, That the thanks of this Conference are hereby tendered to the United Brethren Church for their kindness in allowing us the use of their house of worship.

J. W. COMPTON,
F. F. ST. CLAIR.

All the brethren reported missionary fields adjacent to their works. Okanogan County is said to have 5,000 inhabitants and not a preacher of any kind to even bury their dead!

Lord, help and arouse us up from our lethargy. Amen.

We were all disappointed because of your inability to be with us. Come to our annual.

We praise God for the measure of success vouchsafed unto us, and we take courage and press onward for grander victories in the future.

F. F. ST. CLAIR, Sec'y.

Fair View, Wash., July 4th, 1892.

From Fish Creek.

FISH CREEK, June 30, 1892.

DEAR BROTHER STANLEY: Our fourth and last Quarterly Conference of this year was held on this charge at the A. O. W. W. Hall at Waterloo, on the 25th and 26th, and the different appointments well represented. The sermon preached on Sunday morning by our presiding elder was spiritual food for the waiting soul. The brother beat his record, and the fine music rendered by Bro. T. T. Black and sister and W. M. Britt aided greatly to our enjoyment. The wish of our Conference is that Bro. Britt may return to us another year. S. F. TUTTLE.

Medical Lake, Wash.

W. S. HORNBUCKLE: We missed you at our District Cenference, but the Lord was with us. All told, we raised about $300 for different purposes—nearly $100 for dom stic missions. I have been compelled to come to this on account of rheumatism, which has hindered me in my work. I hope, however, to recover soon.

From Walla Walla.

REV. M. V. HOWARD: We have just closed our camp-meeting near Engle's Chapel. The meeting continued ten days. One was happily converted to God, two received by letter, and the church greatly revived. Brothers Michael, Gibbs and Atkins were with us and preached to the delight and edification of the people. Old-fashioned shouting was heard several times. We hope to meet you at the Annual Conference at Palouse City. May the blessing of God be upon the little "Methodist."

From Whitehall.

MR. EDITOR: I notice in the editorial department of the "Montana Christian Advocate," of the 7th of June, the following from the editor, Brother King:

"We have been advised, times without number, that ours is a political Church. Knowing for ourselves that this assertion has no truth in it, yet we suppose some that are poorly informed are led by such statements to look upon us as a political Church. Here is a quotation from the Episcopal address made at the late General Conference: 'With regard to politics, the attitude of our Church is strenuously non-partisan and non-sectional. It acknowledges no allegiance to any political creed or association.'"

Bro. King adds that "this address voices the sentiment of our Church exactly, and we hope our sister Church will give herself no more trouble on this score."

Now, had Brother King also given us a few extracts from the proceedings of the way, way back General Conference, it would have made interesting reading. We are truly glad to know that the late General Conference absolved its members from further allegiance to the party in power, and we want to say further that we have no sympathy with that spirit that cannot detect and punish crime north of Mason and Dickson's line as well as south of it. We want only valiant soldiers, who will protect innocent virtue North, South, East and West. E. G. BROOKE.

PIONEER SKETCHES.

FROM OREGON TO MONTANA.

L. B. STATELER.

Meanwhile, I read in a paper the doings of the old Missouri Conference. I had been lost to the church in the states for three or four years, while the dark cloud of war hung over the land. But Bishop Marvin, learning that I was somewhere in the Rocky Mountains, appointed me to an anomalous position — that of Superintendent of Missions in Montana and Colorado. It seemed strange, as those two territories were a thousand miles apart and not even connected by railroad, and there were no funds appropriated for support, not even to pay traveling expenses, and there was not another man associated with me in all that vast field.

Early in the spring, April '67, we set our faces toward home, following up the Columbia River, the same way that we came, as far as the Dalles. From there we took a different route, following the old emigrant road across the Blue Mountains to Snake River, by way of Grand Ronde, thence by way of Bose City and along the south base of the Salmon River Mountains, by the famous lava beds. The appearance of this formation is very remarkable, rising from six to eight feet above the common level of the country. The vast amount of molten lava seems to have been forced up by the intense heat from below, and then it hardened as it cooled. There are vast crevices in the stony formation, down into which if a stone is dropped it disappears and the sound comes back until it is lost in the seemingly bottomless depths. The place is dangerous and frightful. I started to walk over it, but drew back with horror when I came to these frightful chasms. It was in the same kind of a place as this that the Modoc Indians in Oregon hid themselves a number of years ago, when pursued by the United States troops who sought to punish them for the murder of Dr. Thomas and Gen. Canby, and from which hiding place they were forced only by starvation.

We came without interruption from Indians, having in our company two men besides our own family. We crossed the main range of the Rockies at Bannock Pass, came through the little town of Bannock, where gold was first discovered in Montana in anything like paying quantities, thence on to Rattlesnake Creek, down the Beaverhead and Jefferson Rivers, thence to our old home at Norwegian Gulch, from where we had started, arriving here in August. We were glad to return again to our rude cabin and renew our efforts to do good amongst the people.

I began at once to arrange for supplying the work the best I could. The ensuing autumn I was appointed Presiding Elder of the Montana District, by the Bishop in charge of the Missouri Conference, though not a solitary man was sent to assist me. This continued for several years. I preached at Willow Creek and extended my labors as far as Gallatin Valley, Helena, Gallatin City and Bozeman, preaching in private houses and buildings used for school purposes and wherever opportunity offered.

I wrote to the church papers and begged for help to be sent — men to occupy the needy fields. The settlements extended rapidly and were without preachers. There was a great demand for our preachers amongst the people, many of whom had come from sections of country where our church was strong. But it was the old story. Every year the work was read out "to be supplied," which after awhile came to mean that it was to remain unsupplied.

As I received no assistance from the missionary board, nor from the people who were too poor to assist in the support of the ministry at that time, we had to depend upon our own private resources for the necessaries of life which were supplied by the offspring of the few cows that we had brought with us on the long journey across the plains.

I labored for six years before any preachers were sent to my assistance. In the fall of 1870 the Missouri Conference sent three men, Revs. W. L. Blackwell, A. M. Kiergan and C. W. Sanford, but not until I had proposed to collect the money to pay their traveling expenses and had pledged them a support after they arrived. I sent a wagon, team and driver to the railroad, four hundred and fifty miles, to meet them and bring them to Montana the expense of which came very largely out of my own pocket. The year following I went to the session of the Western Conference, which now embraced Kansas, Nebraska, Colorado and Montana. It was held at Council Grove, Kansas, 1700 miles from my home, 450 miles of the journey having to be made in a road wagon. I paid $20 for the privilege of riding on the wagon, furnished my own provisions and slept every night on the hard ground. That year I made a great effort to get more men and succeeded in getting three from the Western Conference, one from the Missouri, four from Illinois and three from the Mississippi, which, with the three already here and myself, made fifteen laborers in the field. The board of missions being very limited in its means, gave us very little assistance, just enough to help pay the traveling expenses of the new men to their fields of labor.

NEWS NOTES.

Rev. A. C. Couey, P. E. of Helena District, writes: I am closing up my work on the District very pleasantly. Reports are generally full so far as I have gone.

—Rev. L. Bramble writes from East Helena: We are getting along very smoothly here. Had a very pleasant children's service. Our Sunday-school is doing well and church growing in numbers. We now have twenty-two members. Prosperity better than ever before. We expect our report at conference to be an improvement on any heretofore made from East Helena. Pray for us.

—On Thursday the 14th instant, the Sunday-school at Stevensville, went picnicing amid the shady pines and besides the sparkling waters of Mill Creek on the west side of Bitter Root river. There was a good attendance, a number going from Corvallis. It was a most enjoyable occasion and in every way a grand success. H. B. Bell, the superintendent, does nothing by halves. Two large hay wagons, furnished with seats, and actually covered and festooned with evergreens, each drawn by four horses, were provided to convey the school to the grounds.

—The Fourth Quarterly Meeting for Stevensville circuit, held at Stevensville the 16th and 17th of July, was an enjoyable occasion. There was a good attendance of the official members, a careful inquiry into the condition of the church, and a large attendance and enjoyable service on Sunday. Brother McAllister, of the M. E. Church adjourned his service and attended our church at eleven o'clock, in appreciation of which kindness services were omitted at our church at night.

—Brother Waggener reports that congregations are increasing at Corvallis. The editor had the honor of filling one of his appointments there recently, and can testify to the large attendance and good attention. We are in a strait at Hamilton for a house to preach in. There is surely a pressing need and a promising outlook for earnest, heroic Christian work at hand in this part of the valley just now. May prompt and wise provision be made for this important field.

—Rev. J. R. Waggener, a superannuated preacher of the Virginia Conference, is now living with his son Rev. W. B. Waggener, at Corvallis. He shows the marks long and faithful service in the itenerant ranks. While suffering from infirmity, yet he is able to preach and pray with the old time fervor, and our people will doubtless hear from him. We are glad that he is well pleased with Montana. Mrs. Cates, of Richmond, Va., is visiting our Corvallis pastor and his family, and is delighted with our mountain land.

—A circus that recently visited Stevensville was accompanied by the usual number of "confidence men" who were ready to take advantage of the unsuspecting and rob them of their hard earned means. Among the devices used was the "shell" game which is known to be a "sure thing" for the man who runs it. The poor dupe who lays his money in the table always loses. To our great astonishment and mortification, we learn that a number of what were regarded as the steady, "solid" men of the community were duped into trying their luck, and lost, of course, in every case, one man losing to the amount of sixty-five dollars, the money intended for the purchase of a mowing machine. The sharpers carried away about four hundred dollars from the town, we are told. What a sad commentary upon a community that claims to be Christian, when it patronizes such iniquitous institutions to this extent. The money would not have been lost if it had not been "put up." The man who lays his money on the gambling table is, virtually, as guilty as the one who cheats him out of it, for his object was to get the other fellows' money without giving him value received. He is simply beat at his own game. O that men would see the guilt and crime of gambling! O, that professing Christians, especially the people called Methodists, would come to see the corrupting and debasing influence of that circus and avoid it as they would the yellow fever or the small-pox.

—Our brethren of the M. E. Church, North, are tired of being counted as having somewhat to do with politics, and especially of being considered a political church, and take the pains through their bishops and general conference to deny the charge. We would rejoice to know that this is true at the present time. But that such has always been the case is hard for people to accept who have read the resolution and extracts taken from the proceedings of the general and annual conferences of our sister church as compiled by Ramsey Smithson in a little volume issued several years ago, called, "Political Status of the M. E. Church." But then, perhaps we should forget the things that are behind.

—The annual conference is to Methodist preachers very much what a family reunion is to the members of a household who have been separated for a time. Here they meet with brethren and sisters, fathers and mothers in Israel, sons and daughters in the gospel, and the spirit that prevails during this occasion has much to do in toning up the individual preacher's life spiritually, in imparting inspiration and enthusiasm for active and heroic service during the coming year. How important then that our annual gatherings should be times of re-newed consecration and pentecostal out-pouring of the Holy Spirit; when hearts should be melted and fused together and filled with zeal for a higher spiritual life and for the salvation of souls. Let this be the character of our conference at Bozeman. Let not the business so fully absorb our minds as to interfere with religious fervor. From the good Bishop down, may we come together in the fullness of the blessing of the Gospel of Christ, and may there be such a manifestation of the divine presence as will call forth the expression similar to that made concerning our brethren at one of their meetings in Japan, "The Christian's God has come down to them here." Thus will we be able to go up and possess the land.

God has been very gracious in bringing each member of our body through the toils of another year. While severe affliction has rested upon several of our preachers and upon the families of others, yet we thank God that it has not been unto death. In all probability, Brother and Sister Parnall will, on account of nervous trouble, be compelled to seek a lower altitude and thus sever their connection with our conference, which they and all of us regret very much. This, we trust, is all the working force that we shall lose by transfer, and we rejoice that God in His providence is prompting others to come to our help. There is great need of several more men, and they are ready to come if only they could be provided for. May the Lord open the way right soon.

—Bishop Galloway has gone to England as the fraternal delegate of our church to the Wesleyan Methodist Conference. His letters to the "Nashville Advocate" are full of interest. We are glad that he was chosen for that work. Bishop Key has started on his way to Japan, going by way of St. Paul and the Canadian Pacific to Vancouver. He is accompanied by H. G. Hawkins who goes to teach in a government school in Japan, and by Rev. Y. Yosshioka, our first native missionary who has been at Vanderbilt for two years, and goes now to work in the Japan Conference.

Some Things That Should be Observed in Teaching the Bible in the Sabbath School and in the Home.

There is nothing so destructive of intellectual and moral attainments as that of a "dream-wake state of mind." And there is no mental state so readily reached, nor none more difficult to remove, than this habit of a superficial or unsatisfying investigation of anything, especially a system of truth by which immediate results are to be reached. And there is nothing that contributes more effectually to the production of this state of mind than that of a lesson too large, or too difficult to master, except it be that of a lesson that is undefined. In either case the mind must fail to reach that satisfying sense of success which can alone stimulate it to persistent and vigorous effort, while it recoils, in conscious failure, upon itself with a few vague impressions as the result of its efforts. From our observation this presents itself as one of the chief imperfections of the Sabbath-school methods of teaching God's Word to young and inexperienced minds. In some instances, the lessons furnished in the International series are too extended, and in others they are too comprehensive and complete to be learned by the masses of Sabbath-school going people. And when these lessons are substituted, which is often and we think unwisely done, by lessons formulated by the teacher on the spur of the occasion, much of which must be unknown to the class until disclosed at recitation, while the whole is indefinite, leaving the inexperienced, the untaught, to formulate a lesson out of the various points that may be contained in the Scripture reading for the occasion, many of which can only be discovered by the relation that they sustain to other points, but which are essential to a correct knowledge of the lesson as a whole, the difficulties of attaining to a distinct understanding of the precious word of divine truth is greatly increased.

There are no systems of instruction known to us, where results are so inadequate to the means expended, and the talent employed, and the labor performed, as that of the Sabbath-school system of teaching God's word to the young of to-day. There is a fault somewhere, and it must be in the method of teaching, because the Bible can be taught, and the children are teachable. In all schools of instruction the lessons should be so constructed as to bring out the points to be learned distinctly, which should never be so numerous or complex as to discourage the student. It is easy to see that, in the Sabbath-school, these obvious requirements of successful instruction are not observed. We do not find fault with lesson papers, but with the method of teaching the lesson therein prepared. The teacher must judge of the capacity of his or her class, and when it cannot learn well the outline lesson, select such points therefrom as they can learn, and be sure to make them distinct. This should be done before the class is dismissed each Sabbath, and then the child will know what it is to learn, and its mother will be more than apt to find out what it is required to learn, and help it, especially if its teacher will drop in during the week and inquire how it is getting along with its lessons and speak to its praise, if it deserves it; and if you can enlist the mother, success is certain. But you can never secure the mother's service in teaching an indistinct lesson even if you could induce the child to study it. And then when the class comes together for recitation, and a question is asked and answered by anyone of the class, (all should have a chance at it) the teacher should have it simultaneous repeated until every one in the class is familiar with it. And even after a question is passed it should be recalled until it is fixed in the memory of every child. If half of the time for recitation is thus occupied in fixing the points contained in the lesson intelligently an distinctly in the minds of the children, it will be well spent. Better by far, teach a few points well, than many imperfectly; indeed, any number of points imperfectly taught, or learned, is an injury rather than a benefit to the child.

Let us teach the child something, yea, let us do thorough work in the Sabbath school, and then we will furnish the only normal stimulant to the acquirement of knowledge. Reward cards, or presents, or music, etc., must not be relied upon to secure attendance, and build up schools. The object of the Sabbath school is to teach the children the truths of the Bible, and unless this is done, the time will soon come, in the history of any school, that these auxiliaries that are relied upon to hold your children will fail, and you will find them out upon the commons, or where they are supplied with something more exciting and entertaining. The church of to-day in much of her work to hold and interest her children, is displacing principal agents with auxiliaries, and thus pandering to carnal proclivities in their natures for abnormal entertainments. And in so doing she paves the way for their alienation from her. Whatsoever is sown, whether by the church, or by others, will be reaped A mother said to us, who had sent her daughter of twelve years to Sabbath school, a sprightly child, that she is not learning as she should. This was true of her child, and also, is true of hundreds of others that go to our Sabbath schools. And that is why the Sabbath school fails to interest and hold our young people. These suggestions are respectfully submitted to those interested, in imparting theoretical knowledge of the truths of the Bible. We may have something to say hereafter about how these truths may be assimulated into character.

Two Horrible Tragedies.

Two most stirring and thrilling events have occurred since our last issue, and such as are of momentous import. The first was at the little town of Homestead, near Pittsburg, Pa. The Carnegie iron works had reduced the scale of wages, which caused the workmen, over 3,000 in number, to strike. The strikers refused to permit other men to take their places. On the 6th ultimo about 300 armed Pinkerton men, hired by the company, moved up the river from Pittsburg to take possession of the works. A desperate battle ensued in which ten men were killed and a great many more wounded. The Pinkerton men on the barge were forsaken by the tow-boat, reduced to great straits and forced to surrender, after which they were subjected to great indignities. The sheriff was powerless, the governor was appealed to for help, and the militia are at this writing in charge of the works. It is feared that the trouble is not yet ended.

The second occurred at the little town of Gem, in Shoshone county, not far from Wallace, Idaho, on the 8th ultimo, where the troubles that have existed between the mine owners and the miner's union for many months, culminated in a pitched battle between the union and non-union men, in which there were five men killed and a number wounded. The union men blew up the Frisco mill, worth $125,000, after which the non-union men surrendered. The victors then proceeded to take possession of all the mills in the district, compelling every non-union miner to leave the country at once, and had things their own way for several days. They went so far as to place dynamite under the mills and other property and threatened to blow them up if troops were brought in. They even blew up bridges and tore up the railroad track to prevent the coming of the military, and actually prepared to fight the soldiers. An attack was made on some of the non-union men at the old mission, who were leaving the country, and a number of them reported killed. A reign of terror prevailed until the soldiers arrived on the 13th or 14th and restored order. Marshal law was declared, and at this writing many of the union men are being arrested, and preparations are being made to start the mills with non-union men again.

We deeply deplore these fearful tragedies, the last one in particular, occurring, as it does, right in the midst of our own fair mountain land. It will be a dark spot on our escutcheon that will never be erased. It will work untold injury to our country in the Northwest. We believe in organization for mutual protection and co-operation. In union there is strength. Our sympathies are with the hardy sons of toil. But we do condemn the resort to violence and bloodshed. Such a course, if universally practiced, would soon reduce our land to a state of barbarism. Property would not be worth the having, nor life worth the living. If our laws are imperfect and unjust let them be changed. Let these evils be corrected by ballots and not by bullets. The cause of reform suffers by such acts of folly as were recently witnessed in the Coeur d'Alenes. If the precepts of the man of Galilee were only regarded, these matters would soon be arbitrated and peace, harmony, good will and mutual prosperity for the mine owner and the mine worker would prevail. A great responsibility rests upon the Christian men of our land in the settlement of the trouble that threatens our entire country. May God give them wisdom and courage to act in all things as becometh men professing godliness, and may we be saved from a repetition of such scenes as those enacted in Pennsylvania and Idaho during the last few weeks.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

LABOR UNIONS.

Railroads, merchants, manufacturers, professional men and other classes combine to maintain prices and prevent loss and waste. It is eminently proper that laborers should do the same. But these combinations, trusts, unions and associations of whatever kind must do justice and be subject to law and to the general welfare and none that trample on the rights of any will finally prosper. Every good citizen, every self supporter, every home-lover, every worthy enterprise, every honorable investment, and all fair men the great silent majority are on the side of law, order and justice. Fair and equal laws are demanded by the real interests of all. Those who try to dam the mighty current that is bearing the world on to a higher civilization and to a more perfect equality will see their work strewn upon its shores. No false unequal greedy scheme can in the end succeed. Let both labor and capital, deal justly, love mercy and walk humbly.

OTHER LEGISLATION.

Five of the regular appropriation bills are ready for the president's signature and six others are hanging between the two houses. The silver bill pending in the House attracts much attention. Its opponents claim a majority. They say that there are enough silver men anxious to postpone action or to avoid committing their party to a measure which goes beyond the democratic platform, to defeat the bill sent over from the Senate, either by amendments or upon a direct vote. The World's Fair bill is still pending. Other measures pending or likely to be introduced are Homestead investigation, anti-option, revenue marine transfer and free wool.

RAILROADING LEGISLATION.

Last Friday the House suspended its rules and passed in short order a free lead ore bill, a tin-plate bill, a land forfeiture bill, a bill for the self government of Utah, a car coupling bill for the protection of railway employees, and a bill limiting to $100 the amount of clothing which can be brought in free of duty as personal wearing apparel. Republicans charge that all discussion was choked off. They also claim that the free lead bill destroys all democratic chances in Colorado, Idaho and Montana.

ADJOURNMENT OF CONGRESS.

Many people here say Congress will not adjourn until October, but they overlook the rapid transit style of doing business which usually prevails in July. CAPITAL.

——o——

The Chrstian Rule of Giving.

Upon the first day of the week let every one of you lay by him in store, as God hath prospered him.—1 Cor. xvi, 2.

The time of religious contribution is marked—"the first day of the week"—the Christian Sabbath. There is much significance in the fact that a time is thus divinely fixed. It assumes that the duty as a matter of obligation must be discharged at some time, and that it is well to have an appointed time for it, lest it should by any possibility, through neglect, be omitted altogether. It is too often found that what we think may be done at any time is never done. Nor is it merely that the time is fixed; the frequency of its recurrence is important to be observed. It arrives weekly. The duty is to be habitually performed. It is not a mere momentary excitement, to be spent in a strong impulse, from which we may fall back into apathy or neglect.

Not merely does the apostolic rule determine the time of contributing, it fixes attention also upon those whose duty it is to contribute—"every one of you." Who are meant? In some sense it may no doubt be said all men are comprehended in the description. But he especially spoke to the members of that Church which he had described "as sanctified in Christ Jesus, called to be saints." "Ye are washed, ye are justified, ye are sanctified, in the name of the Lord Jesus, and by the Spirit of our God." They were called upon, therefore, by a regard to their own consistency and profession, to be liberal in the cause of God. On "every one" who professes Christ is laid the obligation to do what he can for the spread of the truth. And is there any "one" who could not do something? Is there "one" who could not give something? God knoweth, and it were presumption in us ot speak peremptorily; but if there be "one" who could not give something for Jesus, who gave himself for him his circumstances must be very peculiar. The smallness of contributions to the cause of Christ is a proof that few give. It may be presumed many have not been told of their obligation to do so. To others it has not occurred. It is a prevailing idea with many that all they could give is so little, it would be neither worth their offering nor the Church accepting. This is a sore evil. As well might the drops not fall because they are not each a whole shower of rain. As well might the streamlet from the mountain stay its course, because it is not the broad river on which go the gallant ships. This is a matter of deep concern to the interests of religion. Personal responsibility is the great duty needed to be known and felt. If Christian people were brought to understand it, all would be well. If each would do what he could, there would be enough. How wise is the Spirit of God! How apparent is that wisdom in the rule of contribution which we have been considering! If it were obeyed, and "every one" would give, it would change the whole aspect of the Church and the world. The discovery of the law of gravity did not produce a greater change in the philosophy of the world, than the obedience of this simple rule would produce in the moral condition of the world. The discovery of steam, with all its wondrous powers and extraordinary effects and unexpected changes, would not match the results of this one simple principle, were it only carried out into the conduct of professing Christians. We submit it to them, and call on "every one" to say whether he will accept it for his rule, or plainly and confessedly reject it from his creed. Only let "every one" know that whosoever rejects it, rejects the apostle and Him, also, who sent him—the Lord Jesus.—"Gold and the Gospel".

Wells With Water in Them.

If you want the people to bring their pails to your pump to be filled, be sure that the well you are pumping from is not allowed to run dry. The reason some congregations and Sunday school classes are so small is that the preachers and teachers are trying to pump for dry wells. Unless we have something to present worth hearing, how can we expect people to attend upon our ministry? You must study and be ever learning truth, new and old, or you can not teach acceptably. The preacher ought to read books and news papers, and study men. What he learned in school or seminary will not suffice. He must go back coutinually to the fountain of revealed truth, looking at it anew in the light of his new surroundings and knowledge, and the new events that are daily revealing God's hand in the lives of men and the history of nations. You must constantly receive the water of life afresh in your soul, or you can not be God's instrument in giving it to others.—Cumberland Presbyterian.

Fashioning Character.

There is no former and fashioner of character like to the Lord Jesus. There is no mold of beauty and excellence into which the spirit of a man can flow comparable to the mind which was in Christ Jesus. There is no school for the education of man in patience, in truth, in boldness, and in all virtues like unto His disciple band. There is no predominating influence which will make men true and wise and spiritual and faithful like the influeuce of fellowship with Christ. There is no formative period in which men may be enriched with nobleness and grace of character like hours spent in His presence; those bear the bloom and in time the fruit of Christ-likeness of whom it can be said, "They are wont to be with Jesus." "Strength and beauty are in His sanctuary."

Fellowship with Christ is the power that makes men Christ-like. Yet this is not a grace to give to some but denied to others, as a sculptor is limited by the shape and veining of the block on which he is working. These two men, St. Peter and St. John, with so much that was different and even opposite in their natures, are yet found bearing the unmistakable liniaments of the Master. In spite of their opposing tendencies, fellowship with Christ has bestowed on each a likeness to Christ. As in the mint, each coin, whether of gold or silver, bears the king's "image and superscription," so may each soul bear the image and superscription of the eternal King. As the artist leaves the impress of his personality upon all his handiwork, whether it be wrought in plastic clay or hard, unyielding marble, so upon each nature does the divine Artificer, the great molder and former of character, leave His mark and signature, the likeness of Himself.—Sunday at Home.

EDITORIAL.

THE PLAN.

The secretaries of the Board of Missions have agreed upon a plan for the payment of the missionary debt, amounting to about $118,000 by the 31st of March, 1893, which plan has been endorsed by the college of bishops.

The plan contemplates the taking of special collections simultaneously throughout the entire Church to secure the amount in cash and unconditional subscriptions. The movement is to be in charge of one of the missionary secretaries, assisted by a conference solicitor in each annual conference, and he in turn to be assisted by a district solicitor in each presiding elder's district. The amount of $118,000 is not to be assessed, but for the sake of having a definite sum to work for it is distributed over the Church upon the basis of 44 per cent. of the receipts of the treasurer from last year's collections.

The work is to be voluntary, and the contributions to be free-will offerings, and not to interfere with the regular collections.

At the suggestion of Bishops Duncan and Key, Rev. E. J. Stanley has been appointed to take charge of the work in Montana. The amount to be raised by the Montana Conference is $174. A letter from Rev. W. R. Lambuth, one of the secretaries, from which the above items are taken, says: "You have until March 31st, 1893, to collect this amount, but the earlier the better, since every dollar paid in saves interest, and we are paying enough interest to support a missionary in Cuba or South America. Adopt such methods as best suit your people. Pray and work for success. We must get out of this rut and move on to the conquest of the world." To which we say amen.

UP AND AT IT.

In another part of the paper we publish the plan adopted by the payment of our missionary debt. The amount of $174 has been apportioned to Montana. This amount may appear large to some, considering the fact that we have paid our assessments in full, as a rule, and if other Conferences had done as well there would now be no debt. But we do not believe in the plan of gauging our contributions to God's cause like some farmers do their half bushel measure—with a straight edge—give just so much and not a dollar more, no matter how urgent the call. This is a small amount compared with the great benefit gained by removing this mighty incubus from our Missionary Board. Let every man, woman and child take hold and help. Let Montana be the first—as has been her custom heretofore—to report a clean balance-sheet in this score. Her example will be an incentive to others, and $100 given now may be the means of securing $1,000 elsewhere. Cannot some of our Sunday-schools undertake to raise $5 or $10, or more? Are there not devoted women, or a number of little girls and boys, in Montana who love Christ and the missionary cause sufficient to undertake to raise a portion of this amount? Are there not many individuals whom the Lord has blessed with means sufficient to enable them to respond to this urgent call? Let all such correspond with the editor of THE METHODIST, Corvallis, Montana. We will report the progress of collections and subscriptions for the payment of the debt, in THE MONTANA METHODIST. Many hands make light work. Up and at it, one and all.

NOTES AND PERSONALS.

—Rev. D. B. Price writes in a private note: "Mrs. P. thinks Olive may be some better. I shall ask a transfer to Arkansas at our Conference at Bozeman. I will not be at Conference, but will hasten home." We had hoped to keep Bro. Price with us, and we greatly regret the sad circumstance that necessitates his return to Arkansas. May the blessing of God go with him and great success attend his labors. He has done good work at Helena, and leaves hosts of friends behind him all over Montana.

—A letter from Rev. M. M. Pugh, of Kansas City, Mo., contains this pleasing announcement: "Rev. R. H. Shaeffer, of the Southwest Missouri Conference, will start to your Conference next week. He is a good man, and a good preacher. He has experience and ability, is faithful and successful. I believe you will be delighted with him. He is not a place-hunter. He is going out to build up the Church which he loves." We extend a cordial welcome to Bro. Shaeffer and his family, and to all who possess the qualities described above. May our brother be abundantly successful in building up the Church which we all love.

—Mr. John S. Randolph, of Farmington, Wash., writes: "We are having hot weather. People are haying. Crops will be light.

—Rev. J. W. Compton, Palouse, Wash., sends $1 to renew a subscription, and says: "The subscriber told me if some of us did not write for the paper he would stop it. I told him I would have to write a 'scratch' to save a subscriber; but the question arises, if the 'scratch' is worth $1 to THE METHODIST, ought not one-half of it to be credited on the subscription of the 'scratcher?' [Not at all, for no man should expect extra compensation for doing his duty, and we, as editor, hold it to be the religious duty of preachers to write for the Church papers. Many of them, by their modesty in maintaining such continued silence, are cheating the poor editors out of hundreds of hard-earned dollars, which they need, but never get. So, Brother Compton, just pass the dollars along.—EDITOR.] Conference will soon be here. This scribe will have his head, hands and heart. The weather is hot at this writing. Crops short in the Palouse country, that is as to yield. With the increased acreage there will be nearly the same amount of grain produced as last year. Palouse circuit will be pretty well up in finances by Conference.

—Rev. J. B. Parnall sends us this note: "I do not think it prudent for me to attend Conference. I am no worse, but am sure I shall serve the Church better by staying at home and keeping quiet, which I am now doing as far as possible, and I find it more beneficial than medicine. We had a love-feast here last Sunday morning instead of preaching. I think all enjoyed the change. Preaching at Ambrose in the afternoon—a melting time—106° in the shade, and no water! Oh, for a breeze of Saline air from the noble Pacific!" [and a six-months' down-pour of rain!—EDITOR.]

—We recently heard an excellent sermon by Rev. L. L. Wood, of the Baptist Church at Corvallis.

—Rev. W. O. Waggener preached under the pine trees at Woodrich, on the premises of Rev. L. L. Wood, on the 7th inst, at 7 o'clock p. m. His text, "We which have believed do enter into rest," was in harmony with the rest of the occasion. The day was faultless. As the evening zephyrs moved gently among the pines, and the sun sank peacefully to rest behind the grand mountains, leaving his pathway lined with gold, and the twilight stole over the scene; while the words of the speaker, inspired by the surroundings, floated out upon the evening breeze, as he talked of the "rest that remains to the people of God," a solemn stillness possessed the large audience, and every one felt that it was good to be there. As we beheld the beautiful sunset we could not help repeating the lines of that dear old hymn:

> "Beyond the sunset's radiant glow
> There is a brighter world I know;
> Beyond the sunset I may spend > Delightful days that never end."

—Mr. J. G. Huston, of Windsor, Mo., and brother of Mrs. H. B. Bell, spent two weeks visiting his sister, near Stevensville. He is a fine-spirited Christian gentleman and a Methodist, is delighted with our country, and hopes are entertained of his removal here at some time in the future. A cordial welcome to all such. They are the kind we want in Montana.

—Brother J. R. Waggener recently preached with great acceptability to the good people at Fair Play.

—The editor recently spent one Sunday at Wallace, Idaho. He found the troops there, the county still under martial law, and about two hundred or more of the recent strikers under arrest. Quiet prevailed, but it is such as prevails at the bayonet's point. The mines are being worked by non-union men. A deep undercurrent prevails, and there is much ill feeling. We heard a "union" man who was leaving the state, remark on the train that he was sorry the strikers did not do a better job of it—that is, kill more men and blow up more property. The mine owners have the upper hand, and will surely keep it. Right glad were we to find that our Sunday-school had lived through all the troubles and is still running, thanks to the faithfulness of Miss Maggie Penny, Mrs. Cardon, Mr. Bruce Worstell, Mr. Robert Dunn and family, Mr. Otterson, and others. The people are exceedingly desirous of having a regular pastor, and they must have one. A town of 1200 or 1500 people without a church, like the one we have there, surely ought not to be without a Methodist preacher, and it must not be. We had a good audience and a delightful service. Miss Musa House and several assistants were on hand with excellent music.

BOZEMAN STATION.

Rev. W. T. Goulder, Pastor.

Preaching every Sunday at 11 a. m, and 8 00 p m.
Sunday School at 12 m.
Cottage Prayer Meetings in the neighborhood Friday nights.

—A large audience greeted Brother J. B. Parnall at his farewell service at Stevensville, which closes a pastorate of four years on this charge. The pastor was scarcely able to fill the pulpit, but the services were very affecting and impressive. The large attendance proved the high esteem in which our brother and his excellent wife are held.

—The quarterly meeting service at Canyon Creek was a delightful occasion. The people gave good heed to the preached word, and expressed many wishes for the return of Brother Flowers as their pastor next year.

—Bishop Duncan was announced to preach in Butte on Sunday, the 7th inst. It is expected that the Bishop will spend one Sunday in Bitter Root Valley after Conference.

—Anybody knowing the whereabouts of Frank Burford, who is, if living, about 27 years old, will confer a great favor by addressing G. M. Burford, Waverly, Ill. What a pity, yea, a shame, that boys will neglect to write back home! Whoever you are, don't neglect this duty longer.

—We acknowledge the receipt of a printed catalogue from Howard-Payne Female College, located at Fayette, Mo. Rev. H. D. Graves is making a grand success of this institution. It is in a flourishing condition. See the advertisment in this paper, and send for a catalogue.

—It is sad enough to see the extent to which self-seeking and self-promotion is carried among the people of the world; but it becomes sickening and disgusting when found among the people of God, and especially when ministers of the Gospel so far lose their sense of dignity as to engage in wire-pulling and electioneering for the chief seats in the synagogue, the positions of honor and responsibility in the Church of God. May such a spirit and practice never become common in our branch of Methodism. When the disciples were discussing and seeking who should be "chief," none of them were fit for leadership when they became fit they did not have to seek for promotion; it sought them. Let us be patient. In due time we shall reap, if we faint not.

—The time that elapses after a Methodist preacher has made his report and his character has passed at Conference until the appointments are read out is a period when he is freer from care than during any other portion of his earthly existence. He has turned over his work for the time to "the powers that be," and, if he has proper faith in the workings of things, is unconcerned as to what field is assigned him. If a mistake is made, he feels that he is not responsible. The average preacher is naturally cheerful and lively, and with his freedom from anxiety, and while meeting with so many congenial spirits, there arises a temptation to let cheerfulness and good humor degenerate into hilarity. We have known unfortunate results follow a lack of proper caution at this point. The preacher can never afford to lay aside his armor. The Philistines are ever present. He should be as ready to rebuke a sinner and pray with a penitent, or rejoice with a young convert in the social circle or on the Conference floor as at the altar service of a camp-meeting. "Instant in season and out of season." Brethren, be on your guard!

—We are pleased to note that the Corvallis and Stevensville charges have paid their preachers in full and that the conference collections are so nearly full.

—The ranchmen of Bitter t Valley have had a delightful season for their hay harvest. Most of the hay has been put up without a drop of rain. The broad fields of waving grain are now beckoning the harvester to thrust in the sickle. The grain crop is only moderate.

—Our brethren of the East Columbia Conference are in dead earnest in enlarging their work and supplying their widening fields with laborers. They set us a worthy example last year by undertaking to raise $1,000 for domestic missions. From the reports received we believe they will succeed in raising almost, if not all of this amount. It shows what faith and courage and consecration will accomplish. Such a spirit will not down. God loves it, and will honor it by giving it success. We want to see our preachers and people here in the northwest zealous in developing all the resources at command for self support. If we do our duty the Lord will provide the needed men and means for our assistance. The Church at home is waking up, and when this burden of debt is removed, we expect such a forward march to the conquest of the mighty West for God and his Christ, upon the part of our Zion as has not been witnessed before.

Notes From the Field.

EAST COLUMBIA CONFERENCE.

From Weston, Oregon.

DEAR METHODIST: The third Sunday of July was a good day. Brother Shelton, of Dayton, was with us and preached in the power of the spirit. At the close of the collection he took a collection for missions and raised $53. The spiritual condition of the church is good. Public service well attended, as are the social meetings also. Praise God for his goodness and mercies.

MR. EDITOR: It is pretty near time I was writing something for the Methodist concerning my work.

The conference year will soon close. Where the itinerant wheel will drop me next year is hard to tell I am closing my second year at Palouse. There have been a number of additions, but have lost some by removal and in other ways, so that the net gain in membership will be small.

We have built a good church at a cost of about $2300.00 and it is, or will be at dedication, out of debt. The preacher on Palouse circuit next year will have a better chance to do good work. Palouse ought to be made a station if it were practicable.

I wish to say to our brethren of this conference that Dr. Morton requests me to urge each pastor to take up his collection for church extension and remit to him at once, as every dollar is needed to meet appropriations now due.

Am sorry to learn that the health of Bro. Parnall and wife will compel them to leave the high altitude of Montana. Hope they will conclude to us. We think we can find a locality within the bounds of our conference more suited to their health.

We expect you, Mr. Editor, at our conference in Palouse Sept. 21st. We are looking for a time of refreshing from the presence of the Lord.

MY DEAR STANLEY:—I am sick again. I guess the good Lord knows that I am too much of a cyclone, so he permits Satan to afflict me for my profit, "that I may be made partaker of His holiness."

The furnace is all right, when Jesus goes in with us.

The physician says I have congestion of the brain, coupled with complete nervous prostration, superinduced by over work. He says I must not, positively, preach again before conference. I leave (D. V.) August 1st, for the mountains, to be gone a month, or more. It gives me sincere sorrow to leave my people; but the doctor says it is this, or not take work at conference. Of course I chose the former. Pray for me.

In Christian Love.

From Rockford, Wash.

REV. E. P. WARREN:—We have been holding basket meetings through the country for the last two weeks. Had some excellent meetings. Yesterday was a good day with us. I preached twice in the country during the day and at night at Rockford in the Presbyterian church. Large congregations at all the services. We are preparing to build a church near Rockford. We expect to succeed. I find that working on the farm all week and preaching two and three times on Sunday is too much for my strength. But I don't feel like giving up the fight. There is too much at stake to let go. Thousands are sleeping in their sins, neglecting their salvation. The harvest is great, the laborers are few. O God, send us more men.

CORRESPONDENCE.

My Tobacco Experience.

MR. EDITOR:—I have read the articles by Drs. S. A. Steele and H. C. Morrison on smoking, and now I beg space from you that I may "tell my experience." I was born in Virginia and early contracted the habit of smoking. Several times I concluded I would quit, but the habit had grown too strong for me to quit in the ordinary way. I had to learn a severe lesson, and I trust others may profit by it. When I left Memphis, Tenn., to go to Spokane, Wash., I determined I would throw away the cigar for good, and during my pastorate in that city only smoked occasionally. From Spokane I was sent to Walla Walla, and there I fell back into the old habit and smoked almost incessantly, until it seriously affected my nerves. At our Conference, held at Dayton, I again determined to quit, and did try, O so hard! But the same old desire came back. I was often irritated and nervous, never seeming satisfied or contented. I could not study with the degree of satisfaction I desired, and often my mind seemed blank. I was craving something and was never satisfied, until, at last, I again resorted to the cigar, only using from two to five a day. Now I come to the experience: Upon one occasion, in my pulpit, in speaking of "missions," I referred to the fact that some Christians spent much more money for tobacco than they gave to missions, or, for that matter, the whole cause of Christianity, and then I related my own experience. Now in my congregation there were two Japanese boys. One day, after I had again begun smoking, I was in a drug store and bought some cigars; standing near and closely observing me, was one of those Japanese boys. After making his purchase, he went home (he is a cook in a Christian family, as is also the other) and sought his friend, and told him what he had seen, not forgetting to mention the words I had uttered from my pulpit. They then vowed they would never hear me preach again. Upon being told of this I determined to try the "Gold Cure," but the more I thought of it, the more disturbed I became, until I cried out to God for forgiveness, and for grace and power to conquer the terrible desire. For a few days it was a hard struggle, but at last God sent the "Gold Cure" from heaven in the form of faith and grace, and I am now free from the cursed appetite, or desire; and I pray God it may be forever. It was a sad, bitter lesson for me, and I tremble to think of the consequences as relates to those two Japanese boys. O, brethren! you who use the cigar, let me entreat you to take God's "Gold Cure" of faith and grace, take it inwardly, in "big doses," that it may completely subdue and cast out that "little black devil—tobacco," that you may be spared the sad, humiliating experience of

Your Brother in the Gospel,

For "The Methodist."

From Lewiston, Idaho.

DEAR BROTHER: — We returned from the "Old Dominion" in time to meet the brethren of Spokane District in conference at Oakesdale, Wash., June 23, 1892. This session may be called a "Home Mission" Conference.

The mass-meeting Sunday night was a grand success and the collection for Domestic Missions was $112,-70. The speakers were brimful, the last speech (John H. Shelton's) running over. All eyes were turned to the poor, destitute people of the East. The home missionaries of the Northwest are thinking of rushing to the rescue of Missouri, Kentucky and Virginia, thence through the South. The young conferences of the West must raise money to take care of our Eastern and Southern Methodists. What are you smiling about? Perhaps you think this is a joke, but if you had been there and seen the direction in which the "Home Mission" stream was running, you would understand. Bro. John H. Shelton's plan was adopted and $230.00 pledged to help send a missionary to represent the Northwest before our "Eastern and Southern Conferences." Bro. Shelton is the man. He thrilled our people with his zeal for missions and incomparable address. He has a way of presenting the subject so that it makes people dodge. Then, he sharpens his arrows, twangs his bow, and they stick fast. We hope to hear a dozen young men rise up at his appeal and say: "Here am I, send me." The Northwest joins Japan's dying message with a living call: "Send more men. For the fields are white already to harvest." Our recent visit East took us through the bounds of twenty-three states and eighteen conferences. We held pleasant communion with our brethren in six of these conferences. From these observations and conversations we have come to the following conclusions:

1) We believe, that the missionary spirit of the older conferences would be increased by investing living souls to supply our needs.

2) That, if the proper information should be given by a personal representative, the church would transfer willing men. Therefore, let the Montana and Columbia unite with the East Columbia and send this missionary representative. We are more hopeful of success in this field than ever before in the history of our work here. We are on the booming Oamas Prairie, now, and in plain view of the promising new town of Denver, Idaho. We shall try to secure some church lot before returning to Lewiston. Craig's Mountain was never so balmy and fair than yesterday, where we preached twice. These mountain breezes and numberless pine, fir and tamarack have more charms for my wife than anything since we left Paducah, Ky. We hope to get Bishop Duncan to dedicate our "Upper Tammany" Church before conference. Success to the "Montana Methodist." Enclosed find $5, which you may credit Geo. H. Ruddell with $2, and Isaac Mounce, J. A. Nelson and myself with $1 each, on subscriptions.

Sincerely,
HOWSON B. TERRY.

Washington Letter.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Aug. 2, 1892.

The hottest week ever known here was the last. 95° by day and 71° by night was the high average, which with a humid and languid atmosphere tried men's souls. Metal exposed to the sun attained a blistering heat and theremometers exploded. The capital has however a good refrigerator in the Washington Monument. The exterior of this reflects the heat of the sun and imparts it to the air which being thus expanded ascends and displaces cooler air above causing it to flow down the interior and issue a cool breeze at the base. Here the neighbors gather like fish about an air hole in the ice to get a little air. Cool mountain air free from sewer gas, carbon oxide, and bacteria, and from wood, feather, wool, soil and cuticle dust which make visible the air in the house flows above us a vast ocean of refreshing ozone and all that is needed to bring it down is a suitable conduit. The sun can do the work. But if the automatic action of the sun were aided by machinery and we had enough lofty monuments there would be no need to go to the mountains for air, for we could bring it down to our every day level.

Inventors have here a good field. One has already obtained a patent for the use of air cooled by underground tunnels. Congress has appropriated thousands to experiment in upsetting the atmosphere by explosions to produce rain. Instead of relying upon the burning of powder why not bring down the cool dew-generating breezes and mix them with the hot saturated air we swelter in? Your correspondent suggest a lofty reflecting wall facing the sun combined with fans to quicken the ascent of the heated air and on the opposite side of the wall fans arranged to draw cool air down. He has not money to pay patent office fees nor influence with Congress to get an appropriation, and therefore freely gives this invention to the public with his most solemn guaranty that it si worth more even to produce rain than the gas-bag rack-a-rock business.

Seventy thousand veterans are expected here in the fall in the midst of our delightful three months Indian summer, and every effort is being made to give them a hospitable and comfortable welcome. At the close of the war it took the armies two days to pass in front of the White House, but one day of fourteen hours will suffice for this time. The veterans will see great changes. Swept asphalt streets where before was mud, and miles of fine houses where they stalked their tents. They will see an enlarged capitol and a complete monument, and the great pension and state, war and navy buildings and many other magnificent structures public and private, and not the least they will look with deep interest upon the statues of their dead leaders.

War reminiscences, talks, discussions and stories will abound more than ever and they are always abundant. A large part of the older Government employes, with many business men, retired officers and congressmen constitute a permanent re-union here, and war experiences never tire.

MINIE BULLETS.

In Congress are many men who were seriously wounded in the war. Ex-confederate congressman Oates who was shot a half dozen or more times, says, "A bullet stuns as if you had been hit at short range with a club. Then the devilish intruder gets hotter and hotter and like a live coal until you become unconscious." Says Col. Herbert, of Alabama, "I felt as if my shoulder had been seared with caustic. It seemed to me the Yanks were firing red-hot balls." Says Gen. Henderson, "It seemed as though the planet Jupiter had struck me. I never was so astonished." Senator Manderson remarks, "When you are hit near the spine you feel as if a red hot spear a mile long had been thrust through you." Col. Stone, of Kentucky, "Felt a slight twitch of trouser leg as by a briar or a playful kitten." Senator Cockerell adds, "I was wounded several times that day and was the worst hurt by a bullet that did not touch me. It passed under my chin with a satanic swish like a saber stroke. It seemed as if the federals were throwing butcher knives. It stung hotly and I thought my throat was cut. But when I felt, there was no blood, only the whiskers came off." Most of these men received several wounds and were made insensible and carried off the field and many others could tell like stories. CAPITAL.

CHILDRENS CORNER

Dear Brother Stanley:—Our missionary society is still improving, and although Belgrade has but about one hundred and twenty five inhabitants we have twenty-one members in our society in good standing. But few come from the country.

I will state the workings of our order in organizing them and sincerely hope that other ladies will organize a juvenile society in connection with their churches.

It is not nearly so hard to interest the little ones as one would suppose, and in this simple way we can educate the rising generation to fill our places in the Lord's vineyard when our earthly work is done.

First, after a special meeting is called the officers are elected, consisting of Manager, President, Vice-President, Secretary, Assistant Secretary, Treasurer, and Assistant Treasurer.

At the next meeting all are installed and told their respective duties. The manager should be a lady or gentleman who is fond of children, and should be regular and prompt in attendance, for the little ones always look to the older ones for an example, and when their manager is absent they are like a flock of sheep without a shepherd.

Our order of meetings is as follows (written on a card and kept by the President):

1. Song No
2. Song No.
3. Scripture reading by the pastor or manager.
4. Prayer by the pastor or manager.
5. Secretary's report.
6. Roll.
7. Song.
8. Programme, consisting of readings, music, vocal or instrumental, recitations.
9. Miscellaneous business or remarks from visitors.
10. Song and collection, weekly or monthly.
11. Benediction.

The little folks soon become interested and in their childish way tell their parents, and in nine cases out of ten, the older ones' sympathy is enlisted.

Our society has a programme every week, and we usually have quite a number of grown people in attendance. I will send you an essay written by one of our little girls. Some prefer writing to reading or reciting.

After this we will try to help you in the Children's Corner.

Miss Cora King,
Manager of the Belgrade Missionary Society.

Essay on Flowers.

Flowers are very beautiful and fragrant. Every one loves flowers. There are a great many kinds. Roses, violets, pansies, &c. I love violets the best. They are so fragrant. The most fragrant and beautiful of the wild flowers are the wild roses. We have a very pretty little flower in Gallatin valley, called the ground rose or bitter root. It always blossoms in June and has a pink blossom. Fuchias are very beautiful, but are not fragrant. It would be a very dull world without flowers, I think.

OBITUARY.

Anna B. Yates, the second daughter of D. D. and Mary Yates, was born at Dayton, Wash., Oct. 23, 1881, and died after a brief illness at the Curlew Mine, near Victor, Mont., July 17, 1892. A sweet-spirited, unselfish child, both nature and grace had combined to make her life beautiful and her death triumphant. In February last she was happily converted, and with her mother and sister united with the M. E. Church, South, at Walla Walla, Wash., under the pastorate of the Rev. M. V. Howard. Moving with the family to Montana in May, before either of them had an opportunity of uniting with the church here, the call was given and little Annie joined the church triumphant in glory. Her last illness fully demonstrated, as did her previous conduct, that her conversion had been genuine. Not only did it evidence her deep attachment to the neighboring Sunday-school which she was, during her affliction, sorrowfully prevented from attending, but it likewise showed her appreciation of the value of Christian fellowship. Not having as many Christian people to visit her one day during her illness as she desired, she remarked to her mother, "Is it not Christian people's duty to come to see Christians?" And then she added significantly, "I am a Christian."

Before leaving Walla Walla, she had taken part in an Easter exercise in which the hymn "Tell it out among the nations that the Lord is King," was sung. These words seemed to have made a deep impression on her mind, for she repeated them again and again, during her sickness, with great feeling and emphasis. Although her sufferings were great, she never complained, but was all the time hopeful and cheerful and would try to comfort her weeping mother, saying, "Don't cry, I am going to get better." And indeed her words have come true, for she now lives in the "better land" where the inhabitants never say, "I am sick," and where God wipes away all tears from their eyes.

The grief of the bereaved family, especially of the sorrowing mother, has been great, but it is, we trust, relieved by the "comfort of the Spirit," and by the thought that dear little Annie is now perfectly safe and happy, singing with the angels "that the Lord is King" and worshipping before his throne.

The funeral services were conducted by the undersigned on Tuesday, July 19th, and were attended by a large number of sympathizing friends and neighbors.

J. B. Parnall.

SELECTED.

SOUND CONVERSION.

The Christian life should be well begun. Much depends upon this. It is probable that a good beginning will have a favorable ending. Begin strongly, clearly, scripturally, and the probability is that you will end all right.

The Bible puts in several exceptions at the point of beginning: "Except ye repent;" "except ye be converted;" "except a man be born again;" "except ye abide in me," etc. Begin right, then go ahead. A sound conversion is essential for several reasons:

1. It affords experimental evidence of the truth of religion. The man who knows he is saved knows that somebody has saved him. His salvation is proof to him not only that God is, but that he is a rewarder of them that diligently seek him. It proves also the truth of the Bible, the doctrines of redemption, and, in a word, the genuineness and power of Christianity as a whole. It is the best prevention of doubt known among men. It settles things. It is proof that cannot be overthrown or disputed. What we know by experience we know beyond peradventure.

> What we have felt and seen,
> With confidence we tell,
> And publish to the sons of men
> The signs infallible.

The blood of Christ consciously applied, the peace of God consciously received, the witness of the Spirit consciously testifying, these are infallible signs. They are stronger than verbal arguments, stronger than physicial opposition, stronger than threats, or punishment, or death, or hell. They are divine testimonies to the hearts of men, and have held millions of souls in the fiercest storms that ever swept over the human life.

2. A sound conversion is the surest beginning of growth and development in holiness. The aim of the Gospel is to make believers holy and useful. Other things being equal, they who are firmly established in first principles are the most likely to go on to perfection. They have a certain taste of divine sweets, and are sure to hunger and thirst after righteousness. They know to a certainty that religion in its very inception is of God, and they long for all his fullness.

> They go from strength to strength,
> Through this dark vale of tears,
> Till each o'ercomes at length,
> Till each in heaven appears;
> O glorious seat!
> There God, our King,
> Shall hither bring
> Our wandering feet.

3. A sound conversion is a normal conversion. God does no half-way business. If he saves at all, he saves to the uttermost. For various reasons some persons may more clearly apprehend the fact of conversion than others, but all ought to know beyond question whether they are saved or not. Jesus came expressly "to give knowledge of salvation unto his people by the remission of their sins." In recognition of this truth, Paul prayed that God might give the Ephesian Christians "the spirit of wisdom and revelation in the knowledge of him, the eyes of their understanidng being enlightened, that they might know what was the hope of their calling." God wants us to know. He wants the whole earth filled with his knowledge. He wants every soul settled and grounded in the truth, sure of salvation, saved beyond doubt.

If your Christian experience, dear reader, is not of this type, we believe it may be so. The witness is for you. You may claim the promise and gain the blessing.

It is our hope that the conversions of the present season may be of this happy and exalted kind. Earnest repentance, eager faith, and triumphant salvation are the best tokens of the divine presence. May every revival effort be crowned by these blessed signs.—Michigan Advocate.

The Engineer's Sunbeam.

A little incident happened down at the mole the other evening after the arrival of the overland train, which will long be remembered by a certain Central Pacific engineer. The great iron monster attached to the train was throbbing and puffing after the long and sinuous trip over mountain sides and rocky defiles, trembling trestles and marshy stretches. The din in the station was deafening, but out of the chaos of sounds a sweet, girlish voice was heard welcoming home her parents, who had arrived on the train. She was a little, golden-haired beauty, scarcely six years of age, with a quick, intelligent eye and a loving nature, to which she gave full vent in the radiant and impulsive way she welcomed her fond parents back.

At last they took her by the hand and proceeded toward the waiting ferry-boat. As they passed by the engine belonging to the train the little one broke away, ran up to the big, black machine and patted the driving-wheels affectionately with her little, white hands. Looking up at the smokestack, she said: "You good, big, old iron horse, you have brought back my papa and mamma safe over the fearful mountains to their little girl, and I want to thank you, even if you don't care for me because I am so little—and you, too," she continued, turning her face wistfully toward the grimy engineer, who was leaning out of the cab window, "I love you both." Then she kissed her hand to him, and was gone like a ray of sunshine.

Just then a fleeting sunbeam from the great orb sinking down in the Golden Gate came stealing through a chink in the roof and stole by the engineer into his cab. There was a strange look on his face for an instant, and all at once the station was dark and lonesome. When he turned his head into the cab there were two light spots on the cheeks of his dust-begrimmed face.—Oakland (Cal.) Enquirer.

—Those who think that General Booth's grand scheme for letting in light on "Darkest London" has not succeeded, should ponder his own words in the first speech made after his return to England from his recent journey around the world: "I went to make further inquiries as to the working out of the great social scheme, and I am satisfied that every promise I have made, and every advantage I have held forth as flowing from it, can be brought about in the most successful fashion, even surpassing my brightest anticipations. I am now convinced that there is an abundance of room, not only for the submerged classes of this country, not only for the poor and needy of this land, but of all lands; that there is room enough in this world for its populations, aye, even if they were four times larger than they are; and that, properly managed and systematically led forth, all could find, not only bread enough, but enough and to spare, for themselves and families."

—To publish and gossip about an error or misfortune in the past history of others, when the exposure can serve the ends of neither justice nor purity, is to do a thing that discounts and dishonors every possible claim to manhood in the man who does it. The act argues either mental irresponsibility or moral turpitude.—Pacific M. Advocate.

—Defeat or dilution is the devil's design on our religion. If he cannot defeat our purpose of surrender of sin and self, and our return to God, he seeks to dilute our love and loyalty—to inject some sort of alloy into our allegience, to introduce some degree or kind of weakness or incompleteness into our consecration.—Tennessee Methodist.

The Great Evil.

A BIG QUESTION.—Shall the people rule the saloon, or shall the saloon rule the people? That is about the biggest current question. The saloonist seems to be having his own way just now. Shall he continue to rule by the permission of your influence and vote?—EPWORTH HERALD.

THE Chicago Advocate gave utterance to an important truth when it declared that: "If about a millionth part of national and governmental ado made over the "protection" of America from Chinese laborers were directed to the protection of American labor and American homes from the omnipresent grogshop, there would be some sense in it, and a dignity befitting the country."

BISHOP FOSTER puts it strongly, but not intemperately. He says: "The church of to-day, much more the church of the future, must take to its heart the duty of combining and massing its forces against that gigantic atrocity, that diabolical conspiracy, that nameless monstrum horrendum of Christian civilization, that mothers nine-tenths of the woes and sorrows which blight and curse our modern age — the traffic in intoxicants, which hides its deformity under forms of law. How long shall the face of our Christian age blister with this worse than pagan shame? Has the virtue of our time degenerated so low that we do not even blush at the legislated traffic in the souls of our own children? That by the very doors of our own homes and our temples an army of miscreants should by authorization of laws, made by Christian lawgivers, prosecute a work of murder and death? Are we reduced to the shame of admitting that a civilization which has grown up about our altars is impotent to cure the evil? How can we go to the heathen with this cancer of worse than heathen infamy festering in our bosom?"

The Model Teacher

BY MISS LAURA DAWES.

The model teacher is a child of God. One who endeavors to do thorough work. There is a mistake made by the employment of teachers who are not Christians. While they may be efficient in teaching the pupil the appointed lesson, they may also instruct them in the principle of morals and religion. But they cannot appreciate the value of the child's soul, when they have not yet learned the value of there own. "Can the blind lead the blind? Will they not both fall into the ditch?" Luke. 6:39. The object of the Sunday School Teacher is the salvation of the souls of those committed to his charge, and to gain this end, he should not only be a Christian, but a Christian of the highest type.

A devout Christian, one who has that spirit of earnest piety, which so few of the multitude who profess and call themselves Christians have not. Devoutness is a serious and prayerful spirit which gives character and tone to our religion. If we possess that devout spirit, we will always abound in the work of the Lord, and what ever we do in word or deed, we will do all in the name of the Lord.

Nothing, then, is more desirable than to possess this devout spirit, without which, it is impossible to make a success in any undertaking. Intelligence is an important qualification. Not every good man or woman is fit for the office of a Sunday School teacher. While they may be sincere, devout and anxious to advance the Redeemer's cause, yet they cannot teach others, when they, themselves have not learned. He cannot teach to inspire children, when he knows but little more than they. The teacher's office will never be what it ought till those who fill it make a business of their profession, the same as in any other occupation.

Next we take gentleness as a qualification. The sure road that leads to a child's heart, is love, and kindness, and the teacher who wins the love and respect of the children, must be loving and gentle, and enter into their feelings, and study their dispositions. A teacher with a cold, distant manner cannot win the affections of a child. Christ with his affectionate spirit, made way for his teachings and won the hearts of the most obstinate by loving and entreating them. "Learn of me ,for I am meek and lowly," are the words of our Saviour. What an example for us to imitate, and such we must do if we expect to accomplish anything in our attempt to teach an experimental knowledge of salvation to either the young or the old.

Love is said to be the parent of gentleness. Let the children know, by the softness of your expression and kindness of manner, that you love them, and they will soon return the affection. Sometimes the teacher finds it a hard task to be tender and patient with many who are in his charge; with some children it is almost impossible to gain their attention, and the teacher often has to resort to stratagem to gain their attention and then sometimes fails in the attempt.

The work of the Sunday School teacher is attended with difficulties, there are trials to meet and discouragements to brave. Yet the teacher's mission is to teach them the religion of love and lead them to the God of love. And how can he be successful if he has not the spirit of love?

No Sunday School can prosper where there is a want of punctuality. The prompt attention of the children is of course neccessary, but they will generally be punctual if the teacher sets the example. But if the teachers are not punctual and constant in their places, the school will go down.

It is hard to defend the unpunctual teacher. Whatever right they possess, or think they have in regard to their time, they have no right to deprive others of theirs. How is the Superintendent going to carry on the school if those on whom he depends in the work are untrue to their engagement? There is a contract between the two, which involves punctuality. The the teacher who is irregular in his attendance, after a fair trial, should be requested to resign his position.

The model teacher, whose heart and soul is in the work, will practice any amount of self-denial and take up any cross rather than violate his obligations by a want of punctuality.

The Alarm Clock.

Some people of a certain parish made their pastor a present of a clock. It was a beautiful ornament, and was placed in the parlor. Besides its other excellencies, the clock had an alarm attachment. To the minister's wife this was a most desirable thing. The pastor's room was over the parlor, and he sometimes overslept himself.

"Just the thing to awaken him," thought the good wife, as she set the alarm one night to go off at six the next morning. At six the minister heard such a whirring and clatter below that he sprang out of bed and hurried to see what was the matter. He soon thought of the clock and quieted his mind, nor was he sorry that he had been awakened so soon. He had a long time for work in his study before breakfast.

But that alarm had surprises for others than the pastor. While the family was kneeling at worship after breakfast in the parlor the clock made itself heard by a dreadful clatter. The alarm had not expended its force before, but it did now. It spoiled the devotion of the family that morning. Some time after the alarm was set again, and it did good service at the right time, nor did it disturb at service after. But early in the evening, when a gentleman was calling in the parlor, the alarm clock went off. The poor young man, surprised at first, suspected later that it had been set for him to take his departure early, and he left.

Whenever that alarm was set it did its duty, but it did not stop there. It did more than its duty by going off at wrong times. Though efforts were made to fix it, the clock kept up its bad habit of giving an alarm when none was needed. Sometimes it would not go off the second time until a day or two after, but it always gave a second alarm, and usualiy when it should have kept still. Not until the minister disconnected the alarm from the rest of the works was there certainty that no whirring and clatter would occur when silence was needed.

There are people in this world not unlike that clock. Fine in appearance, good in nearly every other respect, but they have the one defect that they make a noise at the wrong time. They do not know when to speak and when to be quiet. They are like alarm clocks that do well but they cause at times no little unnecessary noise and disturbance. — Sydney Clare.

Christ Alone.

It is Christ alone who has revealed God the Father to man. It is written that "no man hath seen God at any time: the only-begotten Son, which is in the bosom of the Father, he hath declared him." The eye of mortal man has never beheld God the Father. No man could bear the sight. Even to Moses it was said, "Thou canst not see my face: for there shall no man see me,and live." (Exod. xxxiii, 20.) Yet all that mortal man is capable of knowing about God the Father is fully revealed to us by God the Son. He, who was in the bosom of the Father from all eternity, has been pleased to take our nature upon him, and to exhibit to us in the form of man, all that our minds can comprehend of the Father's perfections. In Christ's words and deeds, and life, and death we learn as much concerning God the Father as our feeble minds can at present bear. His perfect wisdom, his almighty power, his unspeakable love to sinners, his incomparable holiness, his hatred of sin, could never be represented to our eyes more clearly than we see them in Christ's life and death. In truth, "God was manifest in the flesh," when the Word took on him a body. "He was the brightness of the father's glory, and the express immage of his person." He says himself. "I and my Father are one." "He that hath seen the Father." 'In him dwelleth all the fullness of the Godhead bodily." (Col. ii, 9.) These are deep and mysterious things. But they are true.

Can we ever give too much honor to Christ? Can we ever think too highly of him? Let us banish the unworthy thought from our minds forever. Let us learn to exalt him more in our hearts, and to rest more confidingly the whole weight of our souls in his hands. Men may easily fall into error about the three persons in the Holy Trinity, if they do not carefully adhere to the teaching of Scripture. But no man ever errs on the side of giving too much honor to God the Son. Christ is the meeting point between the Trinity and the sinner's soul. "He that honoreth not the Father which sent him." (John v. 23.)

Make Your Mark.

To make a mark one must be intense rather than diffusive. If anything is to cut it must have a sharp edge. If you are to make your mark on the world you cannot spread yourself all over it. You must make your point and take your stand, determining to do something. Do it thoroughly, do it right, do it better than anyone else can do it. No matter what you undertake master your business, and stand at the head of it, if possible. If you black boots, do it well. Whatever you do, do it as well as it can be done.

You cannot do everything. You cannot learn everything. If you spread yourself too widely you will be shallow and feeble. It is only where currents are closely hemmed in that they are deep and strong. A man of one book is a man to be feared The man of one purpose is the man who wins success. The man with one idea, providing it be a good idea, is a man who overcomes difficulties, and conquers foes. "This one thing I do," said the Apostle, and he who does one thing and does it well will be remembered and will not have lived in vain.

Our life path is not straight, nor does it lie in gentle varying curves, God marks his way for us with angels. We may think we see miles ahead, but quickly we are whirled round an unsuspected corner.— Selected.

A Word to Young Men.

Young men make a sad mistake when they think it necessary that they should have a persenal acquaintance with the dark and seamy side of life. Many a man who has peered into the abyss "Just to see what it was like," has lost his balance and fallen almost hopelessly. A young man was talking to a pilot on one of our big steamers, "How long," he asked, "have you been pilot on these waters?" The old man replied, "twenty-five years; and I came up and down many times before I was pilot." "Then," said the young man, "I should think you must know every rock and sand bank in the river." The old man smiled at the youth's simplicity, and replied, "Oh, no I don't; but I know where the deep water is." That is what we want—to know the safe path and to keep it:—Religious Herald.

The Bible not of Man.

The infidelity of the present age has learned a better lesson than to hold the Bible in contempt. It is a part of its policy to award to it great excellence, a sound morality, and a benign influence on the social relations. It regards the writers of it as far in advance of their contemporaries in moral science, and as deserving higher consideration than the most eminent of ancient sages. But it does not award to it the infallibility of unerring wisdom, nor listen to it as the oracle of God. It is a more specious infidelity than that of Voltaire or Paine, but it is infidelity still. It has strong pretensions to an inpartial rationalism; it has the semblance of ingenuousness and candor; it invests itself with the broad mantle of a professed charity; but it pays its court to unblusing infidelity, and reduces the Book of God to a level with the teachings of uninspired men. It has, too, a scholar-like modesty. It would not be too confident, decently suggesting that strong and tangible proof is excluded from this sphere of religious inquiry. Now we deem it important to possess better and more established principles of this great subject than any of these. This is not the reception the sacred writings demand. Their credentials are of such force and authority as to afford no room for this hesitating state of mind. If they are a cunningly devised fable, no matter how soon or how decidedly they are exploded; if they are true, every man ought to be satisfied of their truth, and hold them fast to the end.—Gardiner Spring, D. D.

Montana Methodist.

Vol. 4. AUGUST 30, 1892. No. 98.

Important Announcement.

As will be seen in another column, the MONTANA METHODIST is to become a weekly paper as soon as practicable—when we can have assurance that it will be supported; and its name will be changed to the "Northwestern Methodist," if thought desirable.

The proposed change will cost about three hundred dollars additional, besides the extra editorial work. If our friends will make a special effort and send us three hundred new subscribers, or pledges for the same, to be paid for during the present year, at one dollar each, we will send them a weekly religious paper, devoted to the interests of our great Northwest, and the best that our abilities and opportunities will permit. Will not all those who desire a weekly paper, send us pledges for, say five or ten, or more new subscribers? This will enable us to steer clear of debt, which is our desire, and to greatly increase the facilities for the enlargement of our work throughout this vast region. It is fifteen hundred miles or more from Corvallis to where there is another paper published under the auspices of our church, and we find that the METHODIST meets a want unsupplied by other papers. Now is your time to help. Let us roll up our list to fifteen hundred or two thousand, and we will do our best to make a paper every way worthy of your patronage.

E. J. STANLEY,
Editor and Business Manager.
Corvallis, Montana.

—o—

Personal Religion.

Methodism was born in a struggle for a higher personal spiritual power; a deeper, broader, richer experience in the things of God. Men who were convicted of sin banded themselves together that they might help each other in working out their salvation, might attain to a conscious sense of acceptance with the Highest, and live in the favor of Him whose loving kindness is better than life. To this end rules were adopted, leaders appointed, tasks assigned, and in the unfolding of this simple movement to admit and apply it to the millions of earth's children who were longing for a better acquaintance with Him of whom Moses and the prophets did write, Methodism, with its myriads of members and its mighty machinery, sprang into being. Its avowed purpose is to help those who "desire to flee the wrath to come and be saved from their sins," who, "forgetting the things that are behind and reaching forth unto the things that are before, are pressing toward the mark for the prize of their high calling of God in Christ Jesus." It does not ignore rites, forms, education, social standing, etc., but regards these things as mere incidentals, helps to attain the great end sought—the renewal of the soul in the image of God, that it may bring forth fruit unto holiness and the end everlasting life. When this ceases to be the burning, controlling desire of the individual, really he "hath no more place among us." He becomes a clog to the wheels, a hindrance instead of a help, and in so far as this class is multiplied in the church the cause of Christ becomes weakened in its moral force; yea, is shorn of its strength in the presence of its enemies. This is one great trouble with the church to day: it is carrying too much dead lumber; too many who are at ease in Zion, who are riding in ambulances or palatial Pullmans, arrayed in royal raiment, instead of having on the whole armor of God and marching with the soldiery and fighting the good fight of faith. They wink at sin, conform to the world, enjoy the loaves and fishes, and admire the displays of power necessary to produce them; but when taught that true spiritual life is found only in personal contact and communion with Christ—eating his body and drinking his blood—they cry out: "This is an hard saying, who can bear it," and many go back, as of old, from following Him.

Personal religion, experienced in the heart and practiced in the life—at home, in the closet, the family, the store, the shop, the field, on the train, at the ballot box—everywhere, on Monday as well as on Sunday—is the crying need of to-day. It is needed to purify individual life, home life, social life, business life and political life. It is this that has made Methodism illustrious, and this alone will fit her for her share of the work in the conquest of the world. It gives to Christianity a power that is irresistible. When Paul and Silas prayed and sang songs of praise to God at the midnight hour, though they were in the heart of heathendom, in the inner prison, their feet fast in the stocks and their backs bruised, be grimed and bleeding, yet those prayers and songs touched the hidden springs of power and brought an earthquake that shook the shackles from prisoners, jarred the doors from their hinges, saved a man and his house, set the apostles free and sent them forth on their mission, and caused the Word of the Lord to run and be glorified.

A noted infidel was once conversing with a minister on the streets of Paris. Said he: "I can answer your arguments, but there," pointing to a consecrated, Christian man who was passing by, "there is an argument that I cannot answer." Thus it has ever been. God chooses the weak things of the world to confound the mighty. "Not by might nor by power, but by my Spirit, saith the Lord of hosts." Christ said: "Ye shall be witnesses unto me, both in Jerusalem and in Judia, and unto the uttermost parts of the earth." This applies to every individual Christian. How shall we bear witness to that of which we have no personal experimental knowledge?

Brother, sister, "it is high time to awake out of sleep. The night is far spent, the day is at hand. Put on the garments of light. Walk honestly, as in the day, not in rioting and drunkenness; not in strife and envying; but put ye on the Lord Jesus Christ, and make not provision for the flesh, to fulfill the lusts thereof."

Conference Notes.

Bishop Duncan, though a resident of the far South, like others who have preceded him, since he has seen our grand country with its vast possibilities and its needs, is strongly committed to the work in the Northwest and will do much to arouse the church at home to a greater sense of its duty. His sermons and his talks in the conference room were pithy and pointed, and will be long remembered by all who heard them.

—Rev. H. C. Morrison, the missionary secretary, made a profound impression upon the conference and the church-going people of Bozeman. His portly form, his pleasing address, his tenderness and pathos, together with a rich, melodious voice, that poured forth words of wisdom, and love, and power, drew all hearts to him. His missionary talk was masterful, while his sermons were convincing, melting and overwhelming. The visits of such men among our people will do much to subsoil the church and quicken its conscience upon the great question of missions, and to raise the standard of Christian living and giving along all lines. Dr. Morrison expressed himself as delighted with our country and pleased at the prospects before us. May he not forget us and our needs when he gets back to Georgia. He will always find a hearty welcome in Montana.

—It was with great hesitancy that our venerable patriarch Stateler consented to have his name placed on the superannuated list. He longs to continue in the work till the Master says, "Come up higher." Though now a superannuate in name, yet he will continue to visit his old friends and preach with the fervor of youth the gospel that has sustained and cherished him during an active ministry of sixty-one years. We are glad to see him looking so well, and trust that he may carry out his desire in turning all his earthly substance into channels that will advance the interest of the church he loves and glorify the name of our God.

—It was a pleasure to meet with Brother and Sister A. G. Clarke at conference again. Sister Clarke shows the mark of her protracted affliction, but is as full of zeal for the cause of Christ as ever, while Brother Clarke takes more satisfaction than ever in helping to open up a highway for our God all through this mountain land. May the Lord spare them both to bless the church for many years yet to come.

—Brother J. W. Kemper, as usual, was in his place as a lay delegate. He was accompanied by his wife and little ones, and also by his venerable mother, who is a sister of the late Mrs. Matilda Edwards, whose poetry endeared her to the hearts of so many thousands. A turn in the wheel has brought our friend and brother a nice little fortune, with which he can and will assist in carrying forward the work so dear to the hearts of many "old timers" in Montana. Whether "in poverty's vale or abounding in wealth," he is the same plain, sensible, old-fashioned, unassuming, true-hearted "Willie" Kemper that we have known almost since the day we landed in Montana, twenty-one years ago this fall.

—Brother G. L. Duke, one of the lay delegates at Bozeman, is one of the old pioneers of Montana. He was a justice of the peace in Helena in the palmy days of '64 and '65, and has held faithfully to the church through all these years. His cozy and comfortable home at Willow Creek has been a preacher's home almost from time immemorial. He loves the church, attends its annual gatherings, when possible, contributes to its support, rejoices in its success, and, with his good wife at home, rejoices at the prospect of a bright home beyond this vale of tears. Thank God for earnest, consecrated laymen.

—The Bishop administered the sacrament of the Lord's Supper to the preachers and a goodly number of other communicants after preaching on Wednesday night. It was a sweetly solemn service. The love feast on Sunday morning was a time of refreshing from the presence of the Lord. The various evangelical pulpits were generally supplied by our preachers on Sunday, and we heard good reports of the services. A fraternal spirit prevailed.

—Many inquiries were made concerning the health and the welfare of Brother J. B. Parnall and wife, who were kept away by ill health, and many regrets expressed because of their departure from us; and also the departure of Brothers A. C. Couey and D. B. Price and their families. To all of them, as a good brother expressed it, "the latch string hangs out" when they wish to return, which we predict will be the case before long. We are glad to say that their departure is not because of any lack of confidence or interest in our work here.

—The past year has been one of the most prosperous in the history of our church in Montana, and it is a pleasing fact that the proportion of increase was nearly the same in both the districts. There was an increase in the membership, in church property, in Sunday-school scholars, in church buildings, and in contributions for church purposes. The call comes up from various points for more preachers to be sent to occupy inviting fields. We do not regard the permanent occupancy of this country by our church as any longer a question. This conviction grows upon our people here, and is growing upon the church at home. Then, let us equip ourselves for the work and move forward along the whole line.

The Board of Trade of Bozeman honored the conference by taking it in a body—Bishop, presiding elders, missionary secretary, visitors and all—on an excursion through the city and up to the heights overlooking the city and valley. It was our pleasure to have the company of Mr. Walter Cooper, an old-timer and an honored citizen, in his own private carriage He placed the company under many obligations for his courtesies. The elevation just above the city affords one of the most inspiring views in Montana. Bozeman, with its broad streets, business blocks, beautiful residences, embowered in shade trees, and the town site, coursed by several mountain streams, lay at our feet, while the valley, twenty-five by forty miles in extent, with its green meadows, ripening grain fields and timber lined water course, stretched away in the distance, all enclosed by ranges of mountains, snow-clad and azure-hued, that rise up in the back ground beyond. The view is one never to be forgotten.

NEWS NOTES.

—It is with a sense of personal bereavement that we announce the decease of Rev. William Warren, of the Missouri Conference, father of Rev. G. J. Warren, which occurred at Hardin, Mo., July 20th. He was a native of England, but came to this country when a young man, and has been intimately connected with Missouri Methodism from that time until the present. The first time we ever heard him preach was at New Hope church, a few miles east of Millville, Mo., in the fall of 1874. We fell in love with him then, and our affection increased with increasing years. He was intelligent, witty, genial, sunny-hearted, and deeply spiritual. What sweet fellowship we had at the parsonage while rooming together at the conference at Gallatin. May the father's mantle rest upon the son. We shall see him again in the sweet bye and bye.

—Mrs. Mary T. Hill Willard, mother of Miss Frances E. Willard, departed this life at Evanston, just a few minutes after the dawn of the Sabbath day, August 7, 1892. She was 87 years of age, a saintly character, and her death triumphant. The funeral services were held in the Methodist Church at Evanston, and she was buried in the Rose Hill Cemetery, nine miles from Chicago.

—Mr. Charles F. Reed, chief of the division of church statistics in the census bureau of the United States, announces that the aggregate of the actual membership of all the denominations will exceed twenty millions.

—It is said that 100,000 people recently visited Denver, Colorado, upon the occasion of the meeting of the Knight's Templar convention, and in consequence of the reduction of fare.

—Congress adjourned sine die on Friday, the fifth of August. The members will have plenty of time to help stir the political pot, which is beginning to boil pretty lively.

—On Sunday, the 14th inst., a fire destroyed fifteen buildings in Missoula, and bade fair to sweep the town had not the wind ceased blowing from the west just when it did. The Rogers Hotel, an old landmark, perished in the flames. The loss is estimated at about $40,000, though much of it was covered by insurance. On the same day a desperate fellow drew a pistol and shot Mr. Morris Higgins and another man, who were standing on the sidewalk. The former died soon after; the other still lives at this writing. The murderer is in jail, and will doubtless get the benefit of the law, as the deceased was a prominent citizen of the town. It is sad that there should be such a reckless disregard for the value of human life.

—A note from Rev. P. M. Bell says: "I enjoy the METHODIST more and more, and am afraid that I become a little impatient because of the long periods between its visits. I would that they were more frequent." Well, we hope to make them more frequent, and trust that our brother will help us in our effort to do so, and we know that he will.

The Conference Session.

The Montana Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, met in its Fifteenth Annual Session at Bozeman, Montana, August 10th, 1892, at nine o'clock a. m., and was opened by Bishop, W. W. Duncan in the chair.

There were present: L. B. Stateler, T. W. Flowers, E. J. Stanley, B. E. H. Warren, A. C. Couey, D. B. Price, R. S. Clark, J. E. Squires, W. J. Goulder, S. B. Tabor, E. L. Lee, W. O. Waggener, L. Bramble, W. M. Britt.

Lay delegates present during the session: A. G. Clarke, J. W. Kemper, G. L. Duke, J. W. Johnson.

W. M. Britt was elected secretary and S. B. Tabor assistant with B. E. H. Warren statistical secretary.

In connection with the opening devotional exercises the Bishop gave a most instructive talk to the preachers based upon fourth chapter of Second Corinthians, in which he urged them "not to handle the word of God deceitfully."

The sessions extended from nine to twelve o'clock of each day. The afternoon were occupied with committee work and devotional exercises. Preaching service were held at three and eight o'clock p. m. of each day.

The following committees were appointed:

On Nominations:—E. J. Stanley, A. C. Couey.

Public Worship:—Couey, Stanley, Goulder.

District Conference Journals:—Lee, Kemper.

Conference Relations:—Warren, Squires, Tabor, Clark, Bramble.

Publishing Interests:—Squires, Clark, Waggener.

Temperance:—Warren, Stateler, Clarke.

On Resolutions:—Waggener, Flowers, Duke.

Bible Cause:—Couey, Waggener.

Communications were received from the secretaries of the Mission and Church Extension Boards, which were referred to appropriate committees.

The Conference voted to assume the proportion of the missionary debt assigned to it by the Board of Missions. The amount being $174. A subscription was taken in the Conference room and the amount was subscribed in a few moments, to be raised by March 31, 1893.

Rev. F. C. Heitzler, agent of the American Bible Society, addressed the Conference, and the amount of $10 was contributed by those present to aid in Bible work.

The names of the preachers were called, one by one, and their characters passed. With only a few exceptions, the reports of the preachers showed the work to be a hopeful and prosperous condition.

L. B. Stateler took occasion to refer to the long time that he had been in the work—more than sixty years—and stated that he felt himself longer unable to continue in the active work, and left himself in the hands of his brethren. When he sat down there were very few dry eyes in the house. The Conference joined heartily in singing the grand old hymn commencing, "How Firm a Foundation." He was granted a superannuated relation.

E. L. Lee and W. T. Goulder were elected and ordained elders. L. Bramble, on account of family affliction, which had interfered with his preparation on the course of study, requested to be continued in the class of the third year.

Rev. Dr. H. C. Morrison, one of the Missionary secretaries of the M. E. Church, South, was introduced to the Conference, and did valiant service in the pulpit and on the platform.

Revs. Jacob Mills, Taft, Bennett, King, Nutting and Craven, of the M. E. Church, and Ellis, of the Presbyterian Church, were introduced to the Conference.

The reports showed the following items:—Members, 647; infants baptized, 54; adults baptized. 67; number of Sunday schools, 16; Sunday school teachers, 101; scholars, 808; paid for missions, domestic, $200; foreign missions, $200; contributed for church extension, $110. All the assessments upon the Conference for the general collections were paid in full. There are in the Conference fifteen church edifices valued at $64,175.00, and ten parsonages valued at $16,200.00.

The amount of $100 was assessed upon the Conference the ensuing year for the Widows' and Orphans' Fund to be raised during the Conference year. Also $400 each, for foreign and domestic missions.

Rev. E. J. Stanley and J. W. Kemper were placed on a committee to provide tombstones. One for the tomb of Rev. G. O. Hilton, near Corvallis, the other for that of Rev. W. H. Maxfield at Butte, Montana. These brethren fell at their posts in our work, one in January 1872, the other in November 1884.

The treasurer of the Preachers' Widows' and Orphans' Fund, A. G. Clarke, reported the amount of $1,656 45 in cash and notes on hand

The deficits on the general collections were smaller this year than at any previous Conference, showing the result of faithful and systematic effort. Our preachers and people are improving along these lines. The responses made to the calls for help by the audiences during the session, as a rule, were prompt and generous, though most of them came from the preachers and visitors.

The business was completed, after a manner, on Saturday morning, all except reading the appointments by the Bishop at the close of the public worship on Sunday night. The following are the

REPORTS AND RESOLUTIONS.

The following reports and resolutions were adopted by the Montana Conference:

The Montana Methodist.

The Board of Publication of the "Montana Methodist" reported: — We are gratified to know that the management of the "Montana Methodist" meets with the approval of the great majority of our people, and that the paper has been self-supporting. There is an urgent demand to have it changed into a weekly.

This change can be made by the addition of one-third the amount now paid for a semi-monthly. In view of the great advantage accruing to our work throughout the North-west by the publication of a weekly religious paper, we offer for your adoption the following:

Resolved, That we authorize the changing of the "Montana Methodist" to a weekly paper at the earliest date practicable.

2d. That, as heretofore, we pledge ourselves to the hearty support and to extra exertions in securing subscribers and raising funds from other sources to meet the increased expense incident to the above change.

3d. We recommend the appointment of Rev. E. J.Stanley as editor, and that an appropriation be made to assist in his support.

4th. We hereby authorize the changing of the name of the paper to the "North-western Methodist," and cordially invite the representatives of our church throughout the North-west to unite in its moral and financial support. J. E. SQUIRES,
A. G. CLARKE.

BIBLE CAUSE.

In the absence of any regular colportage work in our bounds, by which the territory we occupy might be thoroughly canvassed, and supplied with Bibles, we recommend that each pastor do what he can in this way, in connection with his regular work, to supply every family with the written word of God.

Furthermore, we recommend that each pastor preach on the subject and take a collection for this cause.

We are glad to have had a visit to our annual Conference session by the Rev. P. C. Hetzler, agent of the American Bible Society for Oregon, Utah, Washington and Montana, and willingly pledge him our active sympathy and support in this very important interest. A. C. COUEY,
W. O. WAGGENER

SUNDAY SCHOOLS.

The Sunday School Board begs to submit the following report after careful examination of the statistics given in the reports of the pastoral charges. There are 16 schools with 909 officers, teachers and scholars.

We are glad to know that we have an increase of 134 members of Sunday Schools in our pastoral charges.

The union Sunday School idea prevails in some parts, but is being discouraged.

We have a fund raised on our Children's Day, in the treasury, and we would recommend that when we have assisted needy schools in supplying them with our literature, we use the balance in securing libraries.

For the better equipment of our teachers, we would urge our pastors and superintendents to see to it that Teachers' Meetings are held for every school whenever it is practicable.

We have a State Sunday School Convention in Montana, which is inter-denominational.

We urge that every school elect delegates and see that they attend and bring a written report to the school, thus deriving some benefit from the Association. A. C. COUEY,
W. T. GOULDER.

PUBLISHING INTERESTS.

We recognize in the printing press a very powerful and efficient agent in building up and carrying forward the interest of earth's civilization. But like all agents in the hands of fallen man for his advancement along the lines of human endeavor, it is liable to abuse, or rather to be employed in the interests of retrogression instead of progress. And we think that there never was a time in the history of the world that pernicious literature was more abundant or effectually circulated, or more generally assimilated into the channels of the life of the civilized world, than at the present time. This class of literature is so adroitly tempered to the truth, that the very elect, if possible, is liable to be deceived by it, much less the young. "The mystery of iniquity" (lawlessness) has attained an alarming perfection in the satanic art of condoning falsehood or vice by compounding with the truth so as to conceal its hideous nature and its undesirable and vicious effects.

We would therefore call the attention of our people to the importance of vigilance in protecting themselves, their children and the public to whom we have access, from its ravages by pressing to the front a pure literature, a literature carrying the spirit of Christianity in all of its thought,such as our Publishing House at Nashville is preparing and sending out through our connection. We are gratified at the success of this connectional institution. We would call the attention of our people to the duty of circulating our connectional papers, the Christian Advocate and the Pacific Methodist Advocate. These papers should be in the homes of all our people. We think that our Quarterly Review should have a more extensive circulation than it has, and hope that our preachers will concern themselves in this wish. The Missionary Reporter is invaluable in the proper education of our people in the missionary cause. We would urge the use of our Sunday-school literature wherever we can. We regard it as good in the main, but think that it might be improved in distinctness of its denominational thought.

THE MONTANA METHODIST we regard as an invaluable factor in the interests of our Conference, and we rejoice at its financial success, and commend it to the hearty support of our people. And we recommend the appointment of its present editor for the ensuing year, who has served in this interest so faithfully in the past.

J. S. Squires,
R. S. Clark.

Resolutions.

THANKS.

Resolved, First—That the thanks of this Conference are hereby returned to the Board of Trade of Bozeman, "The Beautiful," for their kindness and courtesy in giving the members of the Conference a delightful and enjoyable ride through the city, and that we sincerely hope the temporal and spiritual prosperity of Bozeman may abound more and more.

THE BISHOP.

Second—That we highly appreciate the presence with us of our beloved Bishop Duncan, and thank him for the efficient and pleasant manner in which he has presided over us, and for his eloquent and instructive sermons and addresses. And we pray that unto him continually may be given a large share of grace Divine, and a large measure of success in every good work.

Third—That we express our great gratification at having with us Dr. Henry Clay Morrison, one of our missionary secretaries, and that with "one accord we agree" touching our love for him and admiration of him. And thank him for the pleasure and profit he has brought us, in the social circle, on the platform and from the pulpit.

Fourth—that we appreciate and cordially reciprocate the Christian kindness, and brotherly regard which have thrown open to our use the pulpits of the Christian and Methodist Episcopal churches.

Fifth—That our thanks are extended to those newspapers of Bozeman and the neighboring cities that have published the proceedings of the Conference.

Sixth—That we shall long remember the constant and unwearying efforts of the pastor of this church in providing for our entertainment and comfort, and the thoughtful and kind hospitality of our friends who have entertained the Conference,

Seventh—That we thank our secretaries for the faithful manner in which they have performed their work.

Eighth—That we learn with much regret the proposed transfer from our Conference of Brothers A. C. Couey, D. B. Price and J. B. Parnall; and that we take this method of conveying to our brethren and to the world our high appreciation of their labors in our midst, and their association with us. And that we will follow them with our interest, love and prayers to the several fields where, in the Providence of God, they may in the future labor.

W. O. Waggener,
T. W Flowers.

A Farewell Note.

Editor Montana Methodist:—In saying "good-bye," for the present at least, to the brethren and friends of the Montana Conference, with whom we have enjoyed such pleasant relations during the past four years, we desire herewith to express the gratitude we feel for the many happy associations of the past and our deep regret at the separation which now in the Providence of God, is forced upon us. As we proceed on our journey, further westward to the coast country, in quest of renewed health and vigor to enable us better to prosecute the beloved work to which we have set our hands and hearts, be assured that we shall bear within our breasts very warm and tender feelings for the many loved ones—friends true and tried—whom we sorrowfully leave behind in this mountain land. But distance cannot destroy or break true Christian friendship.

"Though sundered far by faith we meet,
Around one common mercy-seat."

Whilst continuing, as we trust, to toil in the Master's cause in another field of labor, we shall be sure to find time and inclination to inquire and learn frequently how both the work and workers progress in the Montana Conference. The welcome periodical visits of the METHODIST will no doubt materially assist us in that direction. Fraternally,

J. B. Parnall.

Butte City.

DEAR METHODIST:—By the time you get this the brethren will be going up to conference, and I hope to meet you all there. I write to tell you all how I feel as the close of the conference year comes. Not all that ought to have been reached but the best I could do under the circumstances, and am willing to meet at the Judgement Day the record that has been made. I received three persons into the church Sunday evening last and one the Sunday before, and about 35 during the year at my own charge. The collections are full, and I write to tell you how it came and who brought it.

About two months ago we sent to David Cook, at Chicago, and secured three dozen small missionary jugs which were given out to such of the Sunday school children and others who wanted to help collect money for us; a prize to be given to the most successful one. A week before the time announced for the "jug-breaking and "Miss. Concert" to be given in connection, we issued tickets to the exercises and allowed the children to put the money from sale of tickets in their jugs. The house was full. The entertainment, consisting of missionary songs, recitations and readings was excellent and the gross returns about $90.00, enough to pay off all the claims not previously provided for. David Kemper got $18.20, and Mary Astell $16.20, and both of them were awarded prizes. Misses Luda Barnamera, Annie and Marie Barret, Esther Miclejohn, Blanche Knowlton, Effie and Dottie Sherlock, Wilma Jones, Mabel Ray, Mattie Lewis, Mary Astell, Eugenia and Ruth Squires. Viola Cushingbury and a number of other little girls, with Hammil Gaston and Marvin Sipple took part in the exercises. Seven heathen nations were represented in costumes, pleading for the gospel. "The cantata of the Nations" was the title of the selection. The education, both to the children engaged and to all who heard and saw the exercises, was of inestimable value.

We are painting some on the church and parsonage, so that the new preacher, be he young or old, may have a brighter background than we hitherto have had. May God direct in the deliberations of the coming conference. Lovingly your brother, J. E. Squires.

No Reduction of Fare.

Dear Bro. Stanley:—I wish to notify those concerned that both the Union and Northern Pacific roads decline to give reduced fare unless I will guarantee that 50 or more persons will travel over their lines to attend conference. As I cannot give the guarantee there will be no reduction of fare. The preachers will of course use their half-fare permits. Those coming over the N. P. railroad will leave Spokane at 2.30 p. m and arrive at Palouse about 6 p. m. Those coming over the U. P. road will reach Garfield about 4 p. m and come to Palouse (9 miles off) by the Spokane train, which passes Garfield about 5.25. Pasturage for teams close to town will be difficult to get, but we will try to make some provision for those coming by private conveyance.

Girdle the Globe.

Our appeal for Osaka, Japan, has netted us to date nearly $500. It will go a little beyond this sum when a few pledges are redeemed. We hoped at the beginning that it would reach ten times this sum before this time. We mean by this appeal, not only to build a church at Osaka, which is greatly needed, but to insist upon a policy already inaugurated by the Board that the world is our parish and we must, if possible, girdle the globe with Southern Methodist Churches. Nothing less than this will meet our responsibilities; any other policy is short sighted and narrow. Our work is simply the church building department of our missionary operations and in importance is second to nothing else. The birthday idea of this plan reduces it to a system that reaches every member and friend of the church—for who has not a birthday—and gives it a periodicity which must fix it upon the mind of the giver. His annually recurring birthday will always remind him that this is time for making a thank-offering to God for his existence and to help extend the church in the earth. Bishop Key is now in Japan, and I trust every member of the church, who can do so, will forward us some offering for this our first church in that empire. Let all whose birthdays for the year have passed remit at once and let others when their birthday occurs in same manner heed this call. Address David Morton, Cor. Sec'y., 705 West Chestnut Street, Louisville, Ky.

Walking by Faith.

Walking by faith is not so attractive a mode of spiritual locomotion as walking by sight; but it is the only mode practicable with the universe as it is; and God's grace makes this mode not merely a possibility, but an advantageous possibility. In the natural world men walk by sight, seeing what is before them and what is on either side of them; but they do not always pursue the directest course as a result of their open vision. That which they see outside of their pathway often tends to draw them away from a forward movement, so that they walk in a wrong direction because they are walking by sight. On the other hand here comes a blind man along a city street. He sees nothing, but in his hand he bears a staff with which he feels his way just a pace or two in front of him. By means of that staff he is sure of a single step in advance—nothing more. Yet how confidently he presses forward, never swerving to the right or to the left, but taking each step firmly as safe and sure, and as the only step that is either sure or safe. To the extent of that single step the roadway is plain to him, and he trusts its maker as having had a wise plan in its preparing. By his abiding faith in the road-maker he walks even more directly forward than he might if he saw the other ways that skirt that roadway. There are trials to the man who cannot see; but there is a gain to the man who, not seeing, will walk by faith, and who says, in all sincerity:

"So I go on not knowing;
I would not if I might;
I would rather walk in the dark with God
Than go alone in the light;
I would rather walk with Him by faith,
Than walk alone by sight."

Gleams in the Darkness.

"The Lord knoweth them that are His;" "I know My sheep." What wonderful strength and consolation it is in time of great depression to remember that our God and Father knows us so perfectly! We may unveil our hearts before Him; we may confess all the sin and doubt and coldness with perfect confidence, for we can tell Him nothing with which He is not fully acquainted, and which He did not know long before He drew us toward him and showed us His salvation We dread such revelations coming to the knowledge of our best earthly friends, for their love and patience are but finite. But if "God commendeth His love toward us, in that while we were yet sinners Christ died for us," and "spared not His own Son, but delivered Him up for us all, how shall He not with Him also freely give us all things?" Surely such love deserves all our confidence; and the effort to tell out all to Him who, knowing us just as we are, still assures us of His changeless love, will bring first a gleam and then a flood of light and comfort. "We love Him because He first loved us." But of that love, as of all else, we must confess: "Now I know in part, but then shall I know even as also I am known."—SELECTED.

Editing a paper is a wearing business—hard work, poor pay and few thanks. Who is there that truly sympathizes with an editor's pains and racks to get out a good paper—say for the one week?—or who for the complaints, rebuffs and bitter things which he has learned to mix with his daily food as seasoning? Even on his tomb nothing will be said of all this labor. Well, I have an instinctive melancholy, bred of having once passed through several years of editing, which is excited by thinking for a few moments only in the direction of an Advocate.—Bishop Keener.

Outrageous Murders.

(Religious Telescope.)

"Christian Science" murders are becoming a little too frequent. Only recently, in the city of Cincinnati, a coroner held an inquest on the body of a three-year old child that had died without medical attendance, the parents having secured for it the services of a "Christian Science" homicidal humbug, who, for pay, gave it "absent treatment." There ought to be some way to legally suppress these imposters. In the days of ancient Israel persons who, by practicing necromancy and enchantment, deceived and injured the people, were called witches, and were not suffered to live. In these days of advanced enlightment the men and women who go around doing the same thing under the name of "Christian Science" should be promptly arrested and imprisoned.

—o—

In his book on "Methodist Union," Dr. Harrison shows that the Methodist Episcopal Church has increased 81.76 per cent. since 1868, and that in the same period the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, has increased 137.43 per cent, These are very gratifying figures. The form of Christianity that can achieve such results is neither dead nor dying.—Christian Advocate.

You cannot afford not to be honest, The great necessity of your nature is not that you should be rich or loaded down with empty and doubtful honors, but that you should be a man. And to be a man means to be pure, honest, upright, generous and everything the Creator designed you should be. A man cannot afford to be dishonest, for the moment he commences to be so, that moment he ceases to be a man. The moment you declare with all your heart and soul your intention to be honest, that moment God comes to your aid and assistance.—Bishop Phillip Brooks.

The growing respect for the Salvation Army, which is everywhere apparent, is not the result of any new doctrine taught by the members of this organization, or any brilliant talent in its teachers. The old-fashioned doctrines of the Bible are presented in the simplest, and often in the crudest way. It is the work of the Salvationists that commands respect. They have done among the poorer classes what all the churches have failed to do. Their mission is the uplifting of an element of society hitherto almost unreached. Their work is an important object-lesson to all the denominations. They not only preach, but they send forth messengers of help and mercy. Their labors in the rescue of criminals and fallen women, and in providing shelter and food and employment for the hungry and homeless, have been a blessing to thousands. At 12.30 o'clock each day a million Salvationists unite in prayer for their world-wide work. It is stated that the Army publishes in fifteen languages twenty-seven weekly and fifteen monthly journals, whose total circulation is 43,500 000 copies. Commencing with the issue of a song book, the traffic has increased so that the profits at the International Trade Headquarters, London, are about $65,000 a year. The Army owns almost $4,000,000 of property, and has a yearly income of $3,645,000.—Cumberland Presbyterian.

Vice in High Life.

This is the title of a sermon preached by Rev. Mr. Cowan, a Cumberland Presbyterian preacher in Stockton, California, some extracts of which, copied from a recent issue of the San "Francisco Examiner," we give below, because they apply with equal force to certain evils in the Northwest, against which all lovers of virtue should lift a warning voice:

THE BALL ROOM.

"Take the matter of unchastity," he began brusquely. "The young boy or girl shrinks at the thought of a life of shame; but so-called good society has so gilded the serpent as to give it a charm. What sixteen-year-old boy or girl would not be terrified at a crowd of courtesans and their accompanying toughs? But let that same boy or girl receive a neatly printed invitation to the Gaiete Club or Elite Club or the Saturday night Club party. Why, it is a compliment. The best people attend these social gatherings. Certainly this is all right. Now the chief amusement at all these gatherings is not conversation, nor literature, nor music, nor even innocent games; it is dancing—and dancing is generally hugging in this country.

THE DEVIL IN THE CHURCH.

"I have been present on many occasions of this kind in this city. I know whereof I speak. For instance, I attended one given by a church society. (The devil sometimes gets into the church.) Halting at the foot of the stairway leading into the hall, I beheld a regular stream of men without their hats going to and from a neighboring saloon; going and coming like bees to their hive. Proceeding to the hall where the dance was in progress, I saw many of these same men with other men's wives and daughters in their arms in such close contact that the same attitude anywhere else would have been strong evidence in a suit for divorce. It was pure and simple hugging. This is the core of your social pleasures.

"You never see men get together and have such a dance. No. There is no fun in that. So it is manifest that it is the excitement of the sexual feeling that supports the ballroom. Now, everybody but a dead man or a fool knows that this endangers chastity. Understand me, I do not say that many who participate in these entertainments are not as chaste as anybody, but my statement is that such close contact between the sexes outside the marriage relation is perilous to purity. Then at many of these places intoxicating drinks are used. The newspapers stated last winter that they were used even to excess in a few instances."

This reference of the pastor is supposed to be to an event at one of the most select parties given in Stockton. A delicious cool beverage was served during the evening. The men raised their eyes thankfully as they tasted the liquid, and the women said: "How delicious! I never tasted such fruity lemonade." The "fruit" in the lemonade was choice California grapes, but grapes, that had gone through the distillery and been converted into clear brandy. The lemonade was a carefully blended punch, and—well, punch is punch.

MOTHERS LURING DAUGHTERS TO EVIL.

But the conclusion of the Rev. Mr. Cowan horrified the ladies: "Now, add the excitement of liquor and that created by this unholy mingling of the sexes and there can be little doubt as to the possible result.

"Some years ago a canvass of the fallen women of New York was made, and it was ascertained that eighty-two out of every 100 attributed their first step from virtue to the ballroom. Archbishop Spalding, of the Roman Catholic Church, testified that the confessional has evolved the fact that nineteen-twentieths of the women who fall take their first step in the dancing parties.

"Now, is it not strange that such an ugly thing can be made so attractive? No wonder it deceives our young people! Their virtue is gone before they suspect the nature of their pleasure. It is gilded vice that fills the bagnios, after all. You fashionable mothers that teach your daughters to dance, or in other words, how to be embraced gracefully, are truly, though it may be unwittingly, paving the way for their destruction. You are the worst enemies of your own children. You are maintaining a dancing and drinking joint where lecherous rascals will destroy the purity of your girls.

"The danger of this kind of vice is greater because it leaves our young people without anybody to safely imitate. Where is the woman you want your daughter to be like? That godly wife and mother of ten children, where is she? She is here, but sadly in the minority. That cultured, dignified school-teacher? She is here, but rather lonesome. How would that young woman do who teaches school all day, spends her nights in the ballroom or around card-tables, and her Sunday afternoons at the baseball games?

ONE CANNOT BE GAGGED.

"Where is the man you want your boy to be like? Do you want him to follow the Judge to the popular saloon or the club-rooms? There are some men whom it will do for a young man to follow, but they are too few. Let me tell you an incident illustrative of this. I walked down town one evening and was sitting in a store looking at some books. A professor came in, then a Judge. I heard the conversation that ensued. What was it about? Law? No. Literature? No. Politics? No. Commerce? No. Religion? No. History? No. What had been in the daily papers that day? No. It was about this way.

"Professor—Judge, did you go to the game to-day?

"Judge—No. How was it?

"Professor—Fine.

"So it went on for half an hour. Baseball was the greatest and only subject their ponderous brains grappled with during that conversation. Nice men for your boys to follow! Baseball is good enough for boys, but boys ought to get to be men before they are sixty years old.

"Gilded vice silences the preacher and the church too often, too often gags the press and paralizes the officers and courts of justice. Sad day for any country when it completely accomplishes this.

"Now, there are a few things I would like for the prominent men and women of this city, members of the 'Four Hundred' to remember.

"First, I am not angry or spiteful. I am calm and deliberate, simply doing my duty.

"Second, it is not you nor your clubs or social circles that I oppose. It is your sins. Clubs without the classes in drinking and gaming might be an excellent thing. It would be well for men of some attainments to meet and discuss politics, literature, history, commerce, religion and philosophy; but that might take too much brains. There is a great need of some such gathering of able men in this city. I will congratulate you upon the establishment of such an institution.

HUGGING AND DRINKING JOINTS.

"Social circles and gatherings are in themselves excellent things. It is a shame on our community that there is no such a gathering where a woman of good taste can go and wear a real good dress without giving Tom, Dick and Harry license to embrace her. I think the decent people of the city had better go to work and organize a circle in which may be had social gatherings that are some thing more than hugging and drinking joints.

"Third—There is a day of reckoning coming even in this life for these things. God has declared, 'The way of the transgressor is hard,' and it will prove true. Beware that you presume not too much upon divine mercy and a long-suffering public. What a godsend would a preacher have been who would have reproved Moseley and Howell of their sins before they reached the crisis! I would gladly have done it, but I had not their ears, as I hope I have yours. If you have not sinned my words cannot apply to you; if you have, I pray they may arouse you to a sense of your danger.

"Fourth, and finally, let me remind you that should you escape in this world you will not be able to avoid the Divine Judge. When you come before Him it will not avail that you were a banker, a merchant, that you went to Congress or was Governor, that you were the owner of many acres of land and much gold, that you were a pretty and popular woman, or that you were a member of the 'Four Hundred.' You will then be just what you really are now—poor sinners, in need of pardon and salvation. But it will be too late. Justice will reign there. You have had your good things here; there you will have your evil things. Beware that the rich man in the Scripture proves not your predecessor. Beware that you lift not up your eyes in torment.

"And, now, may God bless you. May he guide you and me till we meet at the Judgement."

The Business Man's Friend.

BY REV. W. A. LAYTON IN THE NEW YORK CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE.

For years the subject of my story, whom I will call T. C., held a lucrative position in a large manufacturing concern having its headquarters in New York city. He was a Christian; had saved his money, invested it carefully, and was known as a wealthy man.

Believing that he could better his condition he resigned his position and joining with another, entered upon a business which in a few years utterly failed, leaving him bankrupt, with a large family. From his comfortable home in New York City, he moved his family into small quarters in Brooklyn and began life anew.

No business offered itself. Weary weeks of earnest seeking for any kind of work closed their unfriendly doors upon a heartbroken family, a footsore and despondent man.

Another week had nearly gone; Saturday afternoon had come with no money or provisions for the Sabbath; a husband and father in New York City, without friends and without sufficient money to cross the ferry to his destitute home. Such were the circumstances which might well have caused him to stagger in dismay.

Reflecting upon the past, with its hosts of friends and many pleasures, and contrasting it with the present, his soul burned with indignation at the thought of the perfidy of his former friends, when, as if by magic, his perturbed spirit was calmed by a voice audible only to the inner consciousness, which said to him: "T. C., you are a Christian. You have one friend left; Isn't He able to care for you? Dare you trust Him?"

Immediately all care ceased. He determined to trust God, and was sure He would care for him."

New life possessed him, and turning up Broadway he walked among the throng as unconcerned as though he was a millionaire. He had nowhere in particular to go, and no definite plan in mind. Yet so happy was he in his assured future that he was hardly conscious of the crowds about him or the direction he was taking. At last he was attracted by the sign of an old friend, one whom he had not seen for years, and who knew nothing of his trouble. With no thought of asking his help, he crossed the street and entered the door. The friend saw him as he entered, and grasped his hand, exclaiming: "T. C., as sure as I live! I have been thinking of you all the afternoon, and wishing that I might see you. Have you ten minutes to give me? I have a scheme in which I want to interest you."

A manufacturing enterprise was proposed. The friend was to furnish the capital, a third party the experience, and T. C. was to introduce the business and act as general manager, with salary and commission. The contracts were signed immediately, and the business was to be undertaken on the following Monday.

As he was about to leave, not a word having been said relative to his stranded condition, the friend placed a check for one hundred dollars in his hand, and said: "This is the first installment upon your salary; draw upon me whenever you desire the balance."

With the Doxology in his heart he found his way home to surprise his dear ones.

Monday morning found him ready for business. Success attended him from the first, and at the end of three weeks he had to his credit over two thousand dollars.

Years afterward, again in his old position, a prosperous man and earnest Christian, he related this story to the writer, and added: "I have trusted Jesus and He has cared for me. I shall trust Him ever." Did it pay him? Reader, will it not pay you?

Little Things.

Little words are the sweetest to hear; little charities fly farthest and stay longest on the wing: little lakes are the stillest; little hearts are the fullest, and little farms are the best tilled. Little books are the most read, and little songs are the dearest loved. And when nature would make anything especially rare and beautiful, she makes it little—little pearls, little diamonds, little dews. Agar's is a model prayer; but then it is a little one, and the burden of the petition is but for little. The Sermon on the Mount is little, but the last dedication discourse was an hour. Life is made up of littles; death is what remains of them all. Day is made up of little beams, and night is glorious with little stars.—The Baptist.

These Things Do Not.

Never brood over your troubles, but remember continually for how much you have to be thankful.

Never let a day pass without doing something you know will please God.

Never find fault with those who are making greater sacrifices for God than you are.

Never step over one duty to perform another. Take them as they come.

Never ask the Lord for something you don't expect he'll give you.

Never covet the possessions of others unless you want to lose your own.

Never sleep with enmity in your heart against anybody.

Never have much to say about yourself to strangers.

Never put a stone in the way of the timid-hearted.

Never take a step without asking God to lead you.

Never say spiteful things about anybody.

Let Us Go Forward.

From the tone of Brother W. R. Lambuth's letter it would appear that he regards Montana as the banner conference in missionary work—meeting its assessments and making prompt provision for its share of the missionary debt. We have nothing to boast of, and we would steer clear of encouraging a spirit of boasting or of unholy rivalry; but we confess a desire to see ours (the banner conference not only of the West, but of the entire Church; and not simply in raising missionary money, but in every respect, especially in the conversion of souls and in the promotion of true scriptural holiness among the people.

While we have many difficulties to overcome, many things to try our faith and patience, many things to discourage, if we would look on the dark side of the picture only—and pray tell us where in all the wide world do we not encounter such obstacles?—yet with the knowledge that the writer has gained by personal observation and by contact with representatives of other conferences east, west and south, too numerous to mention here, he has long since arrived at the conclusion that Montana is far from being the most undesirable or unfruitful field for labor and occupation by our own Church. In fact, as a conference, we have much to encourage us. As a rule our preachers are comfortably provided for and are in good heart as to the outlook for the future of our cause. Not one of those who went away this year did so because of any dissatisfaction or lack of confidence in the success of our Church in Montana. Some of them expect to return again, and others who went before have longed to be back again. The pastors of our churches in the larger cities, as well as in the country places, stand upon an equality before the public with the pastors of other denominations. It is now generally acknowledged that we have a work to do here and are doing it. Our friends have confidence in our permanence and are rallying to our support. The church at home has come to acknowledge our claims for assistance, as we have found by mingling with members of the Board of Missions, our Bishops and Secretaries and other leading men, who lament their inability to do more for us.

Our work is better organized, and we are getting the forces in better shape for efficient service. The long years of persistent effort and of anxious waiting, after all, have not been without fruit. The loyalty of our people and the vitality of our work have been tested. Our pride has been humbled, and we are perhaps in better condition to obey the command of the Master, "Launch out into the deep and let down the net for a draught," than if we knew nothing of a long night of apparently fruitless toil. Anyhow, the Master is now on board our ship and the nets are being filled. The result of last year's work are very encouraging. There was advance along all lines. Our congregations have been as large, and the results of our work as great in proportion to our working forces, as among the workers of any other organizations in the same or adjacent fields. There is one thing in our favor: the growth has not been from without, by transfers from other churches or other conferences, but from within—largely by conversions from the world; showing that the gospel as preached by us is indeed the power of God unto salvation.

While, possibly, the work of the late annual conference did not fully meet the expectation of all, yet there is no serious disappointment. The preachers are at their posts and planning for larger things than ever before witnessed among us. The tide is rising. The cloud is already much larger than a man's hand and rapidly growing. The dew-drops have been falling for some time and the "showers of blessing" are coming down. Just the other day some young persons called at our home to talk to us about joining the church. There is the sound of "going" among the mulberry trees. The stately steppings of a king are heard in the camp. Our brethren say they "feel the revival fires in their very bones." It is time to bestir ourselves. The Lord is on the giving hand. Do not depend upon past success as a guarantee for the future. Do not wait for or depend alone upon some one else to come and hold a revival meeting for you. Nay, do not wait even for your preacher to begin a protracted meeting, but let every man (and in this place we include in this term the women and children, preachers and laity) stand at his post and do his whole duty. Pray without ceasing; do not rest day or night until you have a revival in your own heart and in your own home. Then, ere we are aware of it, the revival fires will "burst out," as St. Clair puts it, spontaneously and simultaneously all over our lovely mountain land, and this will be the grandest year in all the history of Christian work in the Northwest. God of our fathers hear our prayers and help us to believe and to work to this end.

NOTES AND PERSONALS.

—In a private note, Rev. J. A. Orman, of Nashville, Tenn., says, "I hope some day to visit Montana and know more of you." Well, there is such a thing as knowing too much sometimes. But we shall take the chances in this case, and assure our brother of a hearty welcome. How his good strong sermons would thrill our people.

—Mr. W. T. Harris writes us from Stockton, Cal.: "We have had an unusually cool summer. My health is very much improved since coming to California. There is a splendid public square around the court-house in Stockton, where thousands of people gather every evening to see and be seen; to attend auction sales, listen to music, to hear public speaking and to listen to sermons preached by ministers of the various denominations of Christians. The square is beautifully lighted with electric lights, the evenings are cool, the atmosphere bracing, and many hundreds of people listen attentively to sermons and religious discourses, who would never think of going inside a church. Temporary stands are erected for the speaker, and the meetings are as orderly as if in a church."

—Mrs. Thomas B. Willis writes from Rock Creek, renewing her subscription to the "Methodist" and adds: "The friends are well, and we have fair crops. We have meeting at our school-house every Sunday afternoon. Mrs. Wells reads us a sermon and Mr. Wells reads and prays. I would enjoy it if she would read some other than Mr. Talmage's. I can't bear his, and she reads them nearly all the time.

I am glad we are to have a minister this year, though sorry that we are to lose three from Montana. Many good wishes for the success of "our paper" [that's the way to express it, my sister. It is "our" paper, and we are glad to know that the pronoun "our" includes such a large and increasing list of friends—Editor] and the ingathering of many precious souls." Right again. That is our aim in publishing the paper, to win precious souls to Christ and to build them up in the faith delivered to the saints. We are glad to know that our friends in that quarter are still fighting the good fight. We have great sympathy for the people scattered throughout these Rocky Mountains.

—Mrs. J. S. Linny of Millville, Mo., says: "We send the money to pay for your good little paper. It gladdens my heart to get it. Thanks to you for your kindness in sending it to us. I want to take the paper for three readers especially. First, to help the cause of Christ in the West. Second, that my own soul and my family (thank God, we are all religious) may be strengthened and built up. And third, to please my dear mother who has worked hard to circulate your paper here. She has taken it a long time. I have long been interested in the work of God's church in the far West. We pray His blessing on His people there, that many precious souls may be turned to righteousness."

The editor greatly appreciates the kind words of the writer. Our first recollection of Millville dates back to a quarterly meeting held away in '54 or '55, at which time there fell a snow so deep that it covered the rail fences and filled the lanes so that we could not get back to our home at Knoxville for a week or more. The writer was a small boy. But he remembers hearing "grandma" Sexton, mother of a Methodist preacher, clap her hands and shout aloud the praises of her Lord. Our last visit to that place was in 1874, when one Monday night we tried to preach in the old church, and Uncle William Warren, now recently gone to heaven, his heart moved with sympathy for us in our failure, delivered a thrilling exhortation and thus saved the day. We would rejoice to have many more such responses from that part of the dear old state.

—Bishop Galloway appeared before the Wesleyan Methodist Conference at Bradford, England, recently, as the fraternal delegate from the M. E. Church, South, the first ever sent by us, as Dr. Waller, who received such a warm welcome at our General Conference at St. Louis, two years ago, was the first ever sent to us from the "Mother Church." The Bishop's reception was enthusiastic, and he fairly captured our English brethren by his genial Christian spirit, his affable manner and his burning eloquence. His address is a masterful presentation of the great questions discussed. We cannot resist the temptation to reproduce it in our columns and only regret that we cannot publish it all at once. It is a wonderful triumph for our cause to receive such recognition and have such a hearing. Bishop Galloway has earned lasting renown by the success he has achieved in the mission upon which he was sent.

—We like the "great official" at Nashville, because it speaks out in no uncertain terms upon the great issues that come before the Church. Dr. Hoss has ideas and is not afraid to express them, and yet is so considerate and choice in his terms as not to give offense necessarily to those who choose to differ from him. All our people who can afford it will do well to subscribe for the Nashville Advocate. Price, two dollars a year.

—Bishop Duncan and Dr. Morrison spent the next week after Conference in visiting the wonders of the Yellowstone Park. They got back to Livingstone in time to spend Sunday and preach for Brother Mills, who was on hand and showed his fraternal spirit by pressing them both into service, one in the morning and the other at night. The Bishop spent the following Sunday at Helena, and also visited Great Falls in company with Brother A. G. Clarke.

—From private sources we learn that Brother Shaeffer is starting off well at Helena. He and his family are comfortably domiciled in the parsonage which has undergone a thorough renovation, besides having a porch added to the front, since Conference. Those elect ladies at the Capital city don't do things by halves.

—Quite a number of persons and families from Corvallis, Stevensville, and Victor recently spent a week or so outing at the Wiles Hot Springs on the East Fork of Bitter Root. The medical properties of the mineral water there are thought to be fine; the scenery around the place is grand and imposing, and the atmosphere exhilarating. The groups of tents and covered wagons reminded us much of a scene at an old fashioned camp meeting. Revs. Lear, Waggener and the writer had the honor of preaching amid the rocks and under the shadow of the tall pines. We heard a lady who lived in the vicinity and who has not the privilege of attending regular serivce, say that the sermon was worth a hundred dollars to her. The people up that way appear hungry for the gospel, and we hope that Brother Flowers will endeavor to supply them.

—Brother Waggener opened the campaign by preaching three times on the first Sunday in this month. He is vigorous and ready for hard and continuous work, and confidently expects times of refreshing. Already the leaven is working at Corvallis, and we look for much people to be added to the Lord this year.

—It was our good pleasure to entertain Bishop Duncan at our home once more, to hear him preach a plain, earnest, practical sermon, good for the use of edifying, from the text "Fear not, little flock, for it is your Father's good pleasure to give you the Kingdom," and to have him administer the rite of baptism to our darling baby boy, Edwin James, junior, at Corvallis on the 31st of August. The congregation was good, for Wednesday night, and the sermon was enjoyed by all. It is a blessing to have our chief pastors visit and preach among the churches. The common people hear them gladly.

—We attended Brother and Sister Parnall's "sale" at the parsonage at Stevensville. It was with feelings of sadness that we saw the floors and walls of the dear old house bare once more, and the goods of the occupants for the past four years all packed and ready for shipping. That was the first home of his own that the writer ever had—worthy the name of a home—when we spent the first two years of our married life, and when our first born first saw the light. We helped to install our successor under the same roof. It is associated in our mind with scenes of sacred peace and pleasure. What an experience the Methodist preacher has: no home to call his own, just as his Master had none, and yet he finds homes wherever he goes. Thank God, he has the assurance of a home beyond the tide, for the Savior has said: "In my Father's house are many mansions . . . where I am there shall ye be also." "The end—of all these toils and trials, and journeyings and varied experiences—"the end, eternal life. Praise God, that is sufficient. We feel like going on, brethren, we feel like going on!

—The local W.C.T.U. at Stevensville, of which Sister Parnall was president, passed resolutions higly complimentary to Brother and Sister Parnall and expressive of the deep regret felt at their departure, and breathing earnest paryers for their well being in their future home. To all of which we say, amen.

—We regret to learn that Sister Squires, wife of our new P. E., has been very unwell since conference. We trust that she is well by this time, and that our brother will be able to turn himself loose, heart and soul and tongue and voice upon his large district, and that a revival flame will sweep from one end of it to the other. Read his letter; cut out the list of appointments for reference, and be sure to heed his remarks concerning the "Montana Methodist."

—Brother Flowers has been quite busy preaching funerals, and burying the dead. Four children of Mr. Charles Squires, near Grantsdale, have died of scarlet fever within the past few weeks. Our sympathies are with the grief-stricken parents. We know of nothing but the religion of Jesus Christ that can furnish real consolation in such a dark and trying ordeal. We heartily commend it to our old neighbors and friends.

—There are some thoughts in Brother Bell's communication that are worthy of consideration. The Board has all it can do to sustain the men now in the field, and the Church at large will have its hands full to pay the debt this year. That out of the way we believe the missionary cause will receive a fresh impetus and the Northwest will share more largely than heretofore in attention and assistance from the Church at home.

—Rev. Alton, of Southwest Mo. Conference, has been secured by Bishop Duncan, for Butte City, though he will remain until the meeting of the conference there to receive ordination as elder before coming West. Surely he will need to have on the "whole armor" to wage a successful warfare in a place like Butte City. May he prove to be the right man in the right place. And may victory perch upon our standard.

—The Rocky Mountain "Methodist" was in the straits and missed one or two issues about conference, but Needham, the unconquerable and irrepressible Needham, is at the helm again and the little craft is afloat with rigging righted up and sails filled with refreshing breezes once more. We trust the brethren down there will stand by their paper and send it forward on its mission of usefulness to the people throughout the great West.

—In looking over the weekly papers issued by our church we find so many excellent things which we desire to copy into the Methodist that we are sometimes sick at heart, because our space is so limited. We try to squeeze a few extra clippings in now and then, but the printer assures us that the forms hold "just so much and no more."

NEWS AND NOTES.

Labor troubles continue. The switchmen on the Lehigh Valley railroad in New York recently went on a strike. They not only quit work, and refused to let others take their places, but they resorted to violence, setting fire to property, derailing cars, wrecking trains and resisting the authorities. Ten thousand troops were ordered out and 3000 were sent to the scene of action. Order was finally restored. The strikers evidently failed in their plans and freight is now being moved without their help.

—Another unfortunate occurrence took place at the mines about Coal Creek in Tennessee. It has been the custom for large companies to lease the convicts to work the coal mines, which was very distasteful for the regular miners. They have protested against the abominable practice for years. Recently they rose en masse and released the convicts and proceeded to destroy property, entailing great loss upon the mine owners.

The militia was finally called out and a battle ensued in which about 15 miners and a number of citizens were killed. Order was restored and the miners are being prosecuted for riot and murder. We have no sympathy on earth with the miserable system against which they are protesting, but it is a great misfortune that they are controlled by such hot-headed spirits and are led to the adoption of such suicidal methods as the destruction of property and of human life. Such a policy only weakens their cause and binds their chains the tighter.

—The president has issued a proclamation levying a toll of 20 cents a ton on all Canadian freight passing through American canals. The object is to retaliate upon Canada for taxing American freight that pass through the Welland canal.

—Mr. Gladstone is once more Premier of England and has arranged his cabinet. Lively times are looked for. It is expected that Home Rule will be made prominent. While all England and all the world, for that matter, delights to honor the great commoner, yet it will be a long time before the government adopts his Home Rule measure.

—We had hoped ere this to have completed arrangements for the publication of our paper every week, but an agreement has not yet been reached. We are still working at it. In the meantime let our friends help us by renewing their subscriptions and sending us new names. Our aim is to make the paper the best and cheapest in all the great West. If we had what is due us on subscriptions, in amounts varying from one to four or five dollars each, it would greatly help us to accomplish this end. Let each one of our three or four thousand readers remember this and act accordingly and act promptly.

Correspondence.

FROM BUTTE CITY, MONT.

Dear Methodist: — I greet you in the beginning of a new Conferenee year and say, "Long may you live, and wide may you circulate. And may you bring the glad tidings to many hearts and homes."

I found my family very poorly on my return from Conference, and have not been able to do much at laying out my work for the Conference year, but I mean to plan for large things, and expect them, and work and pray for them.

Let our motto be: A "Montana Methodist" in every family where we have a member. The general organ in each family where the head is a member of our church; and the "Missionary Reporter" in the hand of each official member. The preachers and their wives will see to this.

Then we put our mark at 500 conversions and accessions to the church, and all collections full.

The Bishop is here this week, preaches at the Gospel tent to-night and goes on to Helena, thence to Great Falls to-morrow and next day. He means to call on "ye editor" and take him along to Wallace to the church dedication the first Sunday in September.

I preached here Sunday and had an excellent day. I could talk plainly to them on ministerial support. Butte has no pastor as yet, but hope to supply it soon.

I hereby request every preacher in the Conference to write at least monthly for the "Methodist" and tell us what they have done and what they hope, and are planning to do. I shall deem it sufficient ground for "charges" at the next Conference for a man to neglect this. The following is a list of the quarterly meeting appointments for the first quarter, 1892—1893.

FROM BROTHER LAMBUTH.

The following will be read with interest:—

NASHVILLE, TENN., AUG. 23, 1892.

Rev. E. J. Stanley,

Corvallis, Mont.

Dear Bro. Stanley: — You are a plucky folk. A mission field in every sense, yet paid over 100 per cent. upon your missionary assessment last year, and now the first Annual Conference to assume its share of the missionary debt. Thank God for such a spirit! It nerves me for the battle. It will indeed inspire the larger and older Conferences.

The cheque for $10 received and handed Mr. Holt, who will give you credit for the same on the debt account.

Yours cordially,

W. R. LAMBUTH.

FROM HEPPNER, OREGON.

Dear Bro. Stanley: — I see in the issue of the "Methodist" (Aug. 20) now before me, a statement to the effect that the Spokane District Conference at its last session pledged $230.00 to "help send a missionary to represent the Northwest before our Eastern and Southern Conferences." Now that seems to me to be "zeal without knowledge." It would be a grand thing, I know, for the church to be awakened from her sleep, and become fully awake, but I doubt the wisdom of this move. It seems to me to smack a little of bigotry. I for one have nothing harsh to say of the "Eastern and Southern Conferences." I have enough confidence in our bishops, connectional officers and papers to trust the matter in their hands. I believe they have, and will continue to present the needs of the Northwest, and that too, just as eloquently as any man we have in our Conferences. If the voice of a Stanley, a Stateler, or a Swift cannot move them, assisted by the bishops and papers, then I think we need no longer look for help from them. I again say: I am afraid our brethren of the Spokane District let their enthusiasm run away with their common sense. Of course, I note the man proposed by your correspondent for this wonderful "missionary trip." We have men in the Conference, true and tried, men who have been here for years and know the work from the California line to British Columbia, and they are perfectly capable of presenting the "needs of the Northwest," and if any are to be honored with a pleasure trip, then I think they deserve it. But let us look at it plainly, practically: $230.00 pledged by that District; another $230.00 we will say is to be raised by this District, or say $500.00 in round numbers from this Conference, and $500.00 more from the Columbia and Montana Conferences. Now instead of spending that amount in sending one man to convert and save the "Eastern and Southern Conferences" let us say to Bishop Duncan: "Sir, we have $1,000.00 pledged above all our other assessments (for that is what it means), send us four new men, two for East Columbia, one for Columbia and one for Montana Conferences." That would seem to me to be more sensible as well as more practical. We would then get four new men, besides keeping the man it is proposed to send back, for of course we would lose him to the pastorate, at least during the period of his "missionary tour." It is perhaps not so very well known to our Spokane District brethren that there are men in this Conference who do not receive much more than $230.00 for a whole year's work. I received a letter from one of them to-night, saying he had only received $135.00 from his charge up to date. Perhaps he receives $100.00 from the Board. Another one has been compelled to go to work in the harvest field, and another one who has not quite so much "grace or grit" will transfer back East. Now a question: Who is to raise this money? The charges are not able or willing to pay it, and the preachers certainly cannot. Remember, brethren, that we have a debt of $118,000.00 upon us and that must be paid before we can afford pleasure trips for some ministerial favorite. We had some questions to deal with at our District Conference, but the brethren were careful, and so we avoided the breakers. Let us be practical as well as enthusiastic.

P. M. BELL.

FROM OAKESDALE, WASH.

Editor Methodist: — Your paper still comes with good news. I read these cheering notes with delight and wish I had some to write. Mr. Editor, I feel as though my work on this charge had been a failure. I ask the question: "What have I done?" Whether we have done much or little, the year has past, and we are going to Conference, and I think we will have a clear balance sheet. I mean as to the collections ordered by the Conference. No matter what we have done the present year, there remains a great deal more to be done, not only in this country, but across the sea there are souls perishing by the thousands for "the bread of life." The call comes to us, and when I see and hear what others have done for the cause, and then look at what little I have done, it makes me feel very insignificant. When I read Bishop Key's letter, stating the great needs of our work in Japan, where they are pressing by the million to hear the Gospel, I feel like as if I wanted to go there.

There are men that are ready to go, and there are men in our church who are able to send them if they laid all on the altar. Will we ever see the church free from covetousness? May the time soon come when we can enter every open door and answer every call that comes to us. God bless you, Mr. Editor, in your new field this year.

W. S. HORNBUCKLE, P. C.

ANNUITIES.

At the annual meeting of the Board of Missions held in Wilmington, N. C., in May 1891, provision was made in the matter of annuities, on a plan similar to those adopted by other Mission Boards. It is believed that it can be made a source of reverence to the Board, and will afford to members of our Church a safe and satisfactory mode of donating money to the cause of missions.

Many persons have money for which they desire safe investment, as they will need the interest that may accrue from it while they are living, but wish the principal, on their death, to go to the benefit of some benevolent object. Under the system of annuities many of the leading Mission Boards receive money from said persons, issuing to them a bond which insures to the donor, interest at say—per cent. per annum, payable semi-annually, while the party is living; the interest to stop on the death of the donor, and the principal to go to the treasury of the Board of Missions. Bonds have been prepared by our

WASHINGTON LETTER.

RETALIATION will be an accomplished fact on the first day of September unless the Canadian Government promptly observes the 27th article of the treaty of 1871, called the "Treaty of Washington." This was very favorable to the Dominion and she ought to abide by it. And now that Congress has empowered the President to retaliate for the tolls exacted at the Welland canal, Canada will have to live up to the treaty, or take tit for tat.

THE BRITISH LEGATION here has been asking for an extension of time and promising satisfactory action at the request of the Canadian Ministry. But the latter concluded to give no satisfaction until after the close of navigation and left the British legation without information as to this action. Mr. Herbert the British Charge d' affaires was obliged to travel around after Secretary Foster to find out what Canada has done.

TO FLY OR NOT TO FLY is a question which mechanical optimists and ingenious inventors are trying to solve in favor of air ships. Such ships, however, must yet be carried on railroad cars, like the one to be exhibited at Chicago. But what is wanted is an air ship that will sail the air without a railroad. How delightful it would be for a summer traveler if instead of being housed in a close hot box, too close for ventilation, but not close enough to keep cinders out of the eyes and dust out of ears, hair and clothes,—how pleasant if instead of panting, gasping, sweating and groaning through the dust, smoke, heat, jar and clatter for weary and exhausting hours the traveler could in five minutes mount above these annoyances into the clean, cool heights above, where calm restful quiet broods and where the weary eyes escape the sickening flow of a drunken landscape, the reeling of fences and the staggering of trees and telegraph poles. The summer traveler will certainly patronize the coming air ship.

THE EXTRAVAGANT EXPECTATIONS of inventors, however, will not all be realized. A successful air ship may be possible though few of us expect to see it. Man has already performed such mechanical miracles that we hesitate to declare anything too hard for him. Some absurd prophesies, however, may be safely disbelieved. The air will never be sailed at a speed promised by visionaries—200 miles an hour for example. It is probable that very near the practical maximum railroad speed has been reached at about 60 miles an hour. Our future air ship moving before a gale may possibly attain a speed of 100 miles. But such speed will be impractical without a favoring wind. As the speed increases the air resistance piles up in front and this demands more powerful engines involving an increase of weight so that it is easy for the scientific engineer to ascertain a limit of practical speed far below the extravagant rate prophesied by aerial cranks.

FUEL SHOULD NOT BE CARRIED. For air sailing some comparatively light motor must be devised. The weight of a steam engine, fuel, furnace and boiler would leave little margin of buoyancy for passengers or freight.

BOTTLED STEAM, however, may solve this problem. Heat stored in a small quantity of water in pipes or tanks thoroughly defended against radiation and under a pressure of several hundred degrees can be used much like steam. It is bottled steam. By this means the portage of coal furnace, boiler and fireman can be obviated. The mechanical difficulties appear to have been overcome. A contract has been made by a Washington railway company for a trial car and hot water engine which is guaranteed to run 20 miles an hour.

OTHER USES FOR SUCH A MOTOR will be the propulsion of torpedoes. The power tanks—steam bottles—can be charged on shore and placed in the vessel, whether submarine or not, and all means of generating power left behind when she starts on her voyage.

WAGONS. Power tanks of hot water can be supplied for delivery wagons from a central source at a great saving of horse flesh. Central plants may be established for supplying bottled power, for a great variety of uses so that the small manufacturer, the house holder and the carriage owner can receive on his premises storage batteries of moderate size and weight consisting of nothing but highly heated water adapted to be coupled to an engine for immediate use.

Bishop Galloway's Address.

Mr. President and Brethren: I am commissioned by the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, to convey to you the cordial Christian salutations of 1,266,000 followers of Christ and fellow-laborers in the Gospel. To me this is a personal pleasure and a very great, though unmerited, honor. From early boyhood I have most earnestly desired to visit the land of Wesley and the earliest home of our common Methodism. I come from that section of America which is most intimately connected with the personal history of our great Founder. It was to the Indians and English settlers in our Southland that Mr. Wesley went as a missionary, and there, as he in later years admitted, unconsciously instituted "the first rudiments of the Methodist Societies." It was in Charleston, S. C., our fair "city by the sea," in 1737 that the first Wesleyan hymn book was printed, the beginning of that wealth of spiritual song which has enriched the psalmody and inspired the sacred minstrelsy of the world. It was in Georgia that Mr. Whitefield built his Orphanage, and there spent most of his American ministry. In our Southern land the first Methodist school was established—an American Kingswood—and was named in honor of our first superintendents, Thomas Coke and Francis Asbury. And that land of Wesley's earliest missionary labor has the largest Methodist membership, in proportion to population, of any section of the world. I do not conceal the fact that your appointment of a messenger to bear fraternal greetings and respect to the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, gave me special, even distinguished, pleasure. The salutations of our sister Methodists have made us glad—the blessing of our mother gave us honor. We were delighted with your message, and charmed with your messenger. We welcomed him cordially, threw wide open the doors of our proverbial Southern hospitality, and listened with eager appreciation to his glowing words, thrilling with the eloquence of love. It greatly delighted us that Dr. Waller brought back so pleasant a memory of his mission, and to read his very able, discriminating, generous statement of the true status of Methodism in the South. It gave us joy to hear of your continued prosperity; of your great and enlarging educational enterprises; of the gratifying growth of your Foreign Missions; of your successful system of village evangelization; of your strategic movements upon the great cities; of your gigantic chapel-building plans; of the development and efficiency of your Sunday-school department; of your increasing numbers; your unabated apostolic spirit; your marvelous earnestness; your pure and undefiled religion in caring for the orphan led by the distinguished ex-President, Dr. Stephenson; and the morning drum-beat of your grand "Forward Movement" in response to "The bitter cry of outcast London." We felt that there is "life in the old land yet"—(applause)—that the zeal of the fathers has not chilled in your veins; that the spirit of early Methodism yet abides among the sons of Wesley. (Hear, hear.) We were assured that you were not idly dreaming over a glorious past; serenely sustaining a well-earned becoming dignity, but catching stimulus from a noble history were moving, with quickened step, to other fields of conquest, claiming the Master's promise, "And greater things than these shall ye do." (Hear, hear.) To this historic land and to your great Methodism we acknowledge large indebtedness, and here we claim princely inheritance. We are indebted to you for the sturdiest elements of our civilization; our reverence for constitutional government; our love for personal liberty; our respect for the majesty of law; our Anglo-Saxon energy and courage; our varied and invaluable literature, and the purity of our Protestant faith. But we have here also large possessions. With unaffected meekness we inherit the earth"—(laughter)—this English earth. Our Quaker poet has said:

We, too, are heirs of Runnymede.

Yea, and more—as Methodists we are heirs of Epworth and Oxford, of Fetter lane and Aldersgate street, of Kingswood and Newcastle, of Bristol and City road, of Westminister and Bunhill fields. Your fathers were our fathers, their teachings are our doctrines, their achievements are our glory, and their honored graves hold our precious dead. And I feel assured that the ties which bind our two countries and their Methodism together were never so strong and sacred as to-day. On every appropriate occasion this attachment finds striking and beautiful illustration. There was genuine sorrow throughout our land a few months ago, when death visited the royal family of England, and tenderest sympathy felt for the bereaved throne and kingdom. We gratefully recalled that sweet, womanly, Christian message your Queen sent to the desolate widow and distressed nation when our President Garfield lay dead, and the wreath of beautiful flowers she placed upon his coffin while sorrowing millions wept over his grave. When the eloquent voice of your peerless Charles H. Spurgeon was hushed in death, we walked with you beside his bier, mingled our tears with yours at his tomb, and felt that a star had fallen from our sky—that a chief place in our family circle was sadly vacant. Let us see to it, honored brethren, that such national kinship and spiritual unity, by our God joined together, shall never by man be put asunder. (Applause.) I devoutly pray that our two flags may ever float peacefully in the same skies, flash over the same seas, and be loved by the same loyal hearts, emblems of the same principles of intellectual, civil, and religious freedom, and representations of the same spiritual inheritance and destiny. And so long as the Evangelical Churches of the two countries are true to God and each other—one in sympathy, one in purpose, and ardent in Christian love—we will never go to war about catching a few seal in Behring Sea, or any other international trifle. (Applause.) It has been a matter of regret to us that so few of your honored ministers have found time and opportunity, when in our vast country, to extend their visits to the Sunny South. We have desired to know you better that we might love you more. It gave us rare delight to hear the seraphic eloquence of your great Dr. William Morley Punshon—(hear, hear)—in several of our chief cities, and the echoes of his glowing periods still keep fresh in our memories the traditions of his marvelous power as a pulpit orator. It is my pleasure to extend to you all a hearty welcome. (Laughter.) You will find a land "fair to the eye of beauty," and a people as sunny-hearted as their cloudless skies, and as profuse in hospitality as the fragrance of their glorious magnolias. (Laughter.) But, Mr. President, we have not been unacquainted with the great men and mighty movements of British Methodism. We have given our prayers in your struggles and our sympathies in your sorrows. Of your leading spirits, who in recent years have joined the innumerable company of the skies, we knew most of Dr. Osborn, as an ecclesiastical statesman of pronounced conservatism, a theologian of aggressive orthodoxy—(laughes)—and a vast treasury of Methodist tradition, history and hymnology. (Hear, hear). Of those within our ranks whose loss we have deplored, known best to you, stands conspicuously the name of Bishop McTyeire. (Hear, hear.) The most majestic figure among us—statesman, jurist, journalist, author, educator, preacher, he seemed equally great in each position—the leader of every Connectional cause—the counselor of every critical hour. And there was Dr. John B. McFerrin, a prince in any realm, a peer on any platform, a power in every pulpit, a hero of every field where his colors were borne, whose name will be honored in the annals of our Methodist chivalry and ecclesiastical legislation. You will be gratified to hear that we, like yourselves, are successfully maintaining the Apostolic trust committed to us by the blessed Lord. Over our moving columns a cloud of glory has hung by day and night, and the God of Israel has been our all-sufficient Strength. Indeed, it is not extravagant to say, that the growth of the Southern Methodism is almost without a parallel in the history of evangelical Christianity. A few years ago our altars were in ashes, our temples in ruins, our fields desolate, our flocks scattered, our heavens dark; but to day our churches are many, our colleges re endowed, our flocks folded, our forces re-organized, and moving to conquest, and in the future is the undimmed star of an eternal hope. The population of the United States, including immigrants, doubles every twenty five years and six months. The membership of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, nearly treble in the same time. (Cheers.) In 1866 we had a total white membership of 425,658; now we have 1,266,000, an increase in twenty-five years of over 195 per cent. Our net increase last year was 48,001. Had the nation kept pace with Southern Methodism we would now have, instead of 65,000,000, a population of 106,000,000. And our brethren of the North—God speed them in their wonderful work!—have enjoyed prosperity. Our property value in churches and parsonages now amount to $23,000,000; and, under the direction of an efficient Board of Church Extension, we are building at the rate of one new church every fourteen hours in the year. Our contributions to Missions last year were over $400,000, not including $113,000 raised and expended by the Women's Board, and our prospering work in Mexico, Brazil, China, Japan and the Indian Territory sends a Macedonian appeal for more men and increased supplies. We have 13,000 Sunday-schools, 100,000 teachers, and over three-quarters of a million of pupils. For the higher education of the youth of the Church we have 179 schools and colleges, attended by nearly 17,000 students, with property valued at $4,500,000, and endowments to the amount of $1,600,000. We have a large publishing house, located at Nashville, Tenn., which has assets of over $600,000, and out of the net proceeds of its immense business is able to distribute to the Conference annually $17,500, for the benefit of the worn-out preachers. (Cheers.) For the care of the homeless and destitute we have several large orphanages, under efficient management, and, by means of a munificent gift of $900,000, a hospital will soon be established at St. Louis, Mo., to be conducted under the auspices of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. At Kansas City, thanks to the beneficent forethought of an honored brother who has since passed to the church triumphant, we have a Bible Training School to prepare young women for missionary work both in the foreign and home fields. For the support of our worn out preachers and the widows and orphans of preachers there was raised last year $145,886—a very inadequate, almost insignificant, amount, but it is some recognition of apostolic service and heroic self-sacrifice for the Church. (Hear, hear.) And that part of America where the Methodist Episcopal Church is appointed under Providence chiefly to labor, and which suffered most by the desolations of the late destructive war, has also been wonderfully favored—indeed, has witnessed an industrial resurrection.

Prohibition Pointers.

"Killing Kansas."

Yes, Prohibition is killing Kansas. The increase of wealth per capita per last reports is only 49 per cent. Massachusetts' increase is only 5 per cent. Ohio and Illinois have decreased in wealth by five per cent. The distillery business and Prohibition are each having its influence, and here they are:

Down in Kansas they have one school house for every 185 population. Ohio has only one for every 390; Illinois, the state of distilleries, one for every 500, while pious old Massachusetts has one for every 600 population. Yes, Prohibition is building school houses all over Kansas, killing the state by educating the children instead of clothing them in rags through the saloon process.

Down in Kansas they have a penitentiary which used to manufacture large amounts of goods. The convicts are falling off until they have only five for every 10,000 population, Illinois eleven, and Massachusetts twenty for every 10,000 population.

Yes, Prohibition is killing Kansas, and Nebraska wants to be killed by the same process. If it is Prohibition that has done all these things (and it is) then give us lots of Prohibition.—Lincoln (Neb.) Call.

The saloon is the enemy of every laboring man and of every industry. It displaces what would, in its stead, be a market for bread, for cotton and wool and anything which man could eat or wear, or would answer to his physical or mental faculties. A brewer in Kansas for many years followed a business which took up the wages of many a day laborer, and for that wage gave no return but poverty, disease and death. Now, since prohibition has made his former business perilous, this brewer has gone to making brick. He sells brick instead of beer, and his former customers are building comfortable homes instead of living in miserable huts. Then, again, an exchange says: "Iowa's last brewery has been turned into an oatmeal factory." Here is the key to the labor question. Shall we not stop this bad economy and turn this waste into industrial channels which shall insure more manufactories, better markets for all product and more employment for labor?—New Issue.

A Boston speaker puts the matter in this shape: "Suppose all the liquor in the United States were put in barrels and piled in one great pyramid, whose would it be? You would see on every barrel the mark 'U. S.'—us. It belongs to us, doesn't it? We are the sovereigns; we make the laws; we say whether or not JohnSmith shall sell the liquor. So we put the bottle to our neighbor's lips. You have done something with the bottle here in Boston. You have tried to keep it corked on Sunday; you have made a man sit down before he can get his drink; you have kept it away from the boys. But the great procession of drunkards still moves by, and will move by, so long as you, the sovereigns of Federal and municipal governments, instruct your representative to sign John Smith's permission to put the bottle to his neighbor's lips"

A Bishop at Sea.

Bishop Key, who has gone to hold the mission conferences in Japan and China, writes thus in mid-ocean far out upon the broad Pacific:

The voyage thus far has been all we could hope, and certainly far better than we dared expect. Without being stormy, the sea has rolled and plunged distressingly to many. Our little party have stood it well, not missing a meal up to this time.

How wide this ocean is? One must cross it to realize the truth. This is our eighth day out, running at an average speed of fourteen miles to the hour, and we have yet five more days before the landing. Pacific in name, its nature is fretful, capricious, treacherous. Its great bosom heaves as though it were in agony. Fogs hang deeply over it, and the solemn voice of the fog horn sounds like a requiem over these depths. When the storms come forth out of their hiding places there is awful grandeur here. But God is in the midst of these watery places. "The sea is his and he made it." "He hath shut up the sea with doors." "He gave to the sea his decree that the waters should not pass his commandment." He says: "Hitherto shalt thou come, but no farther: and here shall thy proud waves be stayed." "O Lord of hosts, thou rulest the raging of the sea, when the waves thereof arise thou stillest them." How precious this meditation to us away out here where nothing is left us but space and God. He holds the oceans in the hollow of his hand. They ebb and flow under his eye, and by his will, for they are his. And so am I. He who owns the sea owns me. He who made it formed me, and for a grander mission. And most of all he has redeemed me by the gift of his Son, and washed me in his blood. O glory to God for this ocean view of his presence and ownership and control.

My God is reconciled
His pard'ning voice I hear:
He owns me for his child,
I can no longer fear;
With confidence I now draw nigh,
And Father, Abba, Father, cry.

On Sabbath afternoon we crossed the meridian of 180°, and having made so much time by our steady westerly travel, the custom is to drop a day here, and thus make the equation of time. So we jumped from Sunday the 3d to Tuesday the 5th of July. It turned out that the lost day was our national day, and we Yankees thus lost our 4th of July. We imagined our British cousins rather enjoyed our bereavement. But they are good-humored and considerate, and at our six o'clock dinner we had much pleasant talk over Independence Day. These Englishmen are admirable. Brusque, and to us a trifle quaint, and their speech at times difficult to comprehend, they are robust and aggressive physically and mentally. They have strongly marked personality, high intelligence, and great force of character. These combined with education, great freedom and opinion and speech, and the long enjoyment of national independence have shaped them into a splendid manhood. It is not astonishing that they have made such headway in the world, and that the trade and commerse and statesmanship of the British Isles are recognized and respected in the ends of the earth. Protestant in faith and missionary in spirit they are our chiefest allies in spreading scriptural holiness over the earth The Christian people of both nations should ever pray for a closer and perpetual union.

Doubts.

"He that doubteth is condemned, if he eat." This is said of one who is not clear in his own mind that it is lawful to eat meat that has been offered in sacrifice to idols, yet gives himself the benfit of the doubt and eats anyhow. If this teaches anything it teaches that a Christian may not do anything that is of doubtful morality. The true lady or gentleman will not do anything of questionable propriety; the honest business man will not engage in any transaction of questionable integrity. There are many practices in society to-day which are of very doubtful morality, and the reverent followers of Jesus will avoid them with the same care with which a genuine gentleman will avoid improprietes. If you are in doubt about it, let it alone. You would not swallow a liquid when there was room to suspect that there was the deadliest poison in it; but many have thus recklessly drank to their death from the cups of pleasure which society mixes.—"Christian Standard.

Powder and Paint.

BY CARRIE R. TURNER.

'Gainst powder and paint
I must make a complaint;
For you know well enough,
Tho' applied with a puff,
It is not the stuff
That will bring sweet modesty's blush
And pure womanhood's flush
To the maden.

For the rosy cheeks, red as the west
When the sun has just fled to its rest,
Come not from this source,
But from nature's free course,
To the maiden.

So, girlies, beware! If you wish to be fair,
To this means pray do not apply;
But give nature full swing,
And I'm sure she will bring
The coveted tints by-and-by.

Shine for Jesus.

The missionaries all along the line are pleading for re-enforcements. There can be no forward movement until the debt is paid. How is that to be done? Plan after plan has been suggested, but we believe the problem has been solved at last. How? Why, by the children.

Listen, children, while we tell you about it. We have some beautiful cards, with a large gold star composed of one hundred little stars. In the center of the star is a lighted candle, and the words, "Shine for Jesus." The card also bears the text, "They that turn many to righteousness shall shine as the stars forever and ever." When you wish to give a penny to help the mission cause, put it away in a safe place and punch a hole with a pin through one of the tiny stars. Soon you will have a dollar, when you can see the light shining through every star.

Only think, if every child in the Methodist Church, South, were to take one of these cards, this great debt would be lifted, the Church stimulated, and missionaries encouraged, and the work go forward with a bound. We are sure you all want to have a share in this work. So come, children, let us go into it with all our heart. Let that old rhyme about the little drops of water and little grains of sand make you realize what little children can do with their pennies.

Littte Penny Helper, roll us in your mite,
Roll the pennies onward into nickle bright;
Let the nickles gather into dollars round,
Until among the nations the Gospel truth is found.

Little Penny Helper, roll us in your mite,
Till all the stars shall twinkle, twinkle, in the light.
Let us shine for Jesus, both in deed and word;
And, lifting high the candle, light a darkened world.

"THE MONTANA METHODIST"

—IS A—

Wide-awake, Religious Family Paper, containing Eight Pages, with Large, Clear Type, and published semi-monthly, on the 15th and 30th of each month, excepting when those dates come on Sunday. It is devoted to the cause of Earnest Christianity in the West and Northwest.

REV. E. J. STANLEY, Editor and Business Manager.

The paper has an able corps of contributors scattered throughout Montana, Idaho, Washington and Oregon, and will contain occasional letters from California, Colorado, New Mexico, Kansas, Missouri, Kentucky, and other States, east, west and south.

Our subscription list shows a circulation extending from Massachusetts to California and Oregon, and from Canada to Mexico. It is rapidly increasing.

The Subscription is only $1.00 a Year, in Advance.

We invite our friends, one and all, to join in the canvass and help double our list.
